I. SUMMARY:

Amends Section 5 of Article VI of the State Constitution to authorize a qualified elector who is registered with no party affiliation to vote a primary election ballot of a political party.

II. SUBSTANTIVE ANALYSIS:

A. PRESENT SITUATION:

Primary Elections – General

A primary election is an election used either to narrow the field of candidates for a given elective office or to determine the nominees for political parties in advance of a general election. Primary elections can take several different forms. In a partisan primary, voters select a candidate to be a political party's nominee for a given office in the corresponding general election. Nonpartisan primaries are used to narrow the field of candidates for nonpartisan offices in advance of a general election. The terms of participation (e.g., whether only registered party members can vote in a party's primary) in primary elections can vary by jurisdiction, political party, and the office or offices up for election. The methods employed to determine the outcome of the primary can also vary by jurisdiction.

Primary Elections - Types

The National Conference on State Legislatures (NCSL) has categorized state terms of participation in primary elections into the following six categories – Closed, Partially Closed, Partially Open, Open to Unaffiliated Voters, Open, and Top Two.

Closed Primaries

Closed primaries are those in which voters must be registered members of the political party holding the primary. This system prevents “cross-over” voting by voters registered with other political parties, as well as voters unaffiliated through voter registration with any political party. Nine states are categorized as having closed primary systems - Delaware, Florida, Kentucky, Maryland, Nevada, New Mexico, New York, Oregon and Pennsylvania.

Partially Closed Primaries

Partially closed primaries are those in which voters must be registered members of the political party holding the primary, unless the party chooses to allow unaffiliated voters to participate. This system gives the parties more flexibility from election to election concerning which voters to include in the primary election process. Seven states are categorized as having partially closed primary systems – Alaska, Connecticut, Idaho, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Dakota, and Utah.

Partially Open Primaries

Partially open primaries are those in which voters are essentially allowed to vote in a political party’s primary even if they are not registered members of that party, by declaring their affiliation to that political party at the time of voting. This system essentially allows for same-day changing of political party affiliation in order to vote in a given political party’s primary. Six states are categorized as having partially open primary systems – Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Ohio, Tennessee, and Wyoming.

Primaries Open to Unaffiliated Voters

Primaries open to unaffiliated voters allows such voters to choose a political party primary in which to participate. It does not allow voters registered with another political party to “cross-over” and vote in the primary of a different political party. This system differs from the partially closed primary system in that unaffiliated voters are entitled to vote in a political party primary; it is not subject to the choice of a political party from election to election. Nine states are categorized as having primary systems open to unaffiliated voters – Arizona, Colorado, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Rhode Island, and West Virginia.

Open Primaries

Open primaries are those in which voters are allowed to participate in a political party’s primary, whether or not they are registered members of the political party holding the primary or for that matter any political party. This system allows for unconditional “cross-over” voting and participation by unaffiliated voters. Fifteen states are categorized as having open primary systems – Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Hawaii, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, North Dakota, South Carolina, Texas, Vermont Virginia, and Wisconsin.

Top-Two Primaries

Top-two primaries are those in which all voters can participate, where all candidates for a given office appear on the primary ballot regardless of party of affiliation. The “top-two” vote getters in the primary, again regardless of party affiliation, advance to the general election ballot. Four states are categorized as having top-two primary systems – California, Louisiana, Nebraska, and Washington.

Primary Elections in Florida

As noted, the NCSL categorizes Florida as a closed primary state, defined as voters having to be registered members of the political party holding the primary. However, the 1998 Florida Constitution Revision Commission voted to place Proposition 11 on the ballot for the November 1998 general election. Among several election-related changes, Proposition 11 proposed amending Article VI of the Florida State Constitution by including the following language:

“If all candidates for an office have the same party affiliation and the winner will have no opposition in the general election, all qualified electors, regardless of party affiliation, may vote in the primary elections for that office.”

Proposition 11 was approved and placed into the Constitution by the voters of Florida, with 64.1 percent voting in favor.

At first glance, the 1998 constitutional change to Florida’s primary system appears to allow for open primaries – where all voters may participate regardless of party affiliation – under circumstances in which a party’s primary will determine who will be elected to a given office because there are no opposing candidates appearing on the ballot in the subsequent general election. However, in 2000 the Florida Department of State’s Division of Elections published an opinion stating that the presence of a write-in candidate in an otherwise all-Republican or all-Democratic field “closed” the primary to all voters other than those registered with the party holding the primary. Since that opinion was published, multiple district and appellate courts have confirmed the Division’s legal position. Over the ensuing years, qualification of write-in candidates for general elections has resulted in the closing of numerous Florida primary elections that otherwise would have been open to all voters regardless of party affiliation.

B. EFFECT OF PROPOSED CHANGES:

Proposal 62 would amend Section 5 of Article VI of the State Constitution, adding a new subsection stating that “A qualified elector who is registered with no party affiliation may choose to vote a primary election ballot of a political party; however, a qualified elector who is registered with a political party designation may vote only in a primary election of the political party which he or she has designated.” Under the NCSL state primary classification system, the proposed change would remove Florida from the Closed Primaries category and place it into the Primaries Open to Unaffiliated Voters category with nine other states. If adopted by the 2018 Florida Constitution Revision Commission, the proposed amendment will be submitted to Florida’s electors for approval or rejection at the next general election (November 6, 2018). If approved, it would be in place for Florida’s 2020 election cycle.

October 2017 Presentation by the Florida Association of Supervisors of Elections

On October 4, 2017, representatives of the Florida Association of Supervisors of Elections (Association) made a presentation to the Ethics and Elections Committee of the 2018 Florida Constitution Revision Commission on Florida's primary election system. While a broad range of issues related to this topic were discussed, in response to questions from committee members Association representatives made the following points:

- Voter turnout in Florida primary elections is significantly lower than in general elections (since 2002, voter turnout in Florida primary elections has averaged 22.5 percent for both presidential election cycles – years when voters elect the President of the United States – and non-presidential election cycles. In contrast, since 2002 voter turnout in Florida general elections has averaged 74 percent in presidential election cycles and 50.5 percent in non-presidential election cycles.) One factor that may be contributing to low turnout is that the majority of Florida primaries are closed.
- In recent years the largest growth in Florida voter registration has been among voters who do not affiliate with any political party (as of November 30 2017, statewide voter registration in Florida was 37.4 percent Democrat, 35.3 percent Republican, 0.5 percent Other Parties, and 26.8 percent No Party Affiliation.) Unaffiliated voters may not participate in closed primary elections.
- Over time, county Supervisors of Elections have received more complaints from voters about the inability to vote due to closed primaries than any other issue. One factor that may be contributing to the level of dissatisfaction is that many Florida voters have moved here from other states where primary elections are open or not fully closed. Opening primary voting eligibility to unaffiliated voters could lead to fewer voter complaints to county Supervisors of Elections over primaries being closed, as well as contribute to increased overall voter participation in Florida's primary elections.

C. FISCAL IMPACT:

Approval of this proposal could contribute to an increase of Florida voters participating in primary elections, due to the fact that voters with no political party affiliation would now be eligible to vote in primaries along with voters registered to the political parties holding the primaries. Should this occur, county Supervisors of Elections could experience an indeterminate increase in costs for primary election administration.
