SLEET, Judge.

Bollettieri Resort Villas Condominium Association, Inc., appeals the final judgment of foreclosure entered in favor of Bank of New York Mellon (the bank). We affirm on all issues but write only to address the sufficiency of the bank's second foreclosure complaint.

On May 24, 2007, Barry Graham executed and delivered a promissory note and mortgage in the amount of $535,000 to First Horizon Home Loan Corporation in order to purchase a condominium at Bollettieri Resort Villas. Graham failed to make the September 1, 2007, payment or any of the monthly payments thereafter. As a result, First Horizon filed a complaint seeking foreclosure on February 1, 2008, alleging that Graham had defaulted on September 1, 2007. For reasons not explained in the appellate record, First Horizon voluntarily dismissed its complaint without prejudice on May 19, 2011.

On January 13, 2013, the bank filed a second action for foreclosure against Graham and joined Bollettieri as a defendant. In its complaint the bank alleged that "[t]he required installment payment of September 1, 2007, was not paid, and no subsequent payments have been made." A default judgment was entered against Graham. On the scheduled day of trial, Bollettieri and the bank stipulated to the facts and argued only the issue of whether the five-year statute of limitations applicable to mortgage foreclosure actions, section 95.11(2)(c), Florida Statutes (2007), barred the second foreclosure action based on the September 1, 2007, default. The trial court found that the bank's complaint was not barred by the statute of limitations and entered a final judgment of foreclosure in favor of the bank.¹

On appeal, Bollettieri alleges that the bank may not recover any of the installment payments that came due more than five years prior to the filing of the second complaint. It also contends that although the bank is legally entitled to file a second foreclosure action, the bank's complaint should have been dismissed with prejudice because it was based on a default that took place more than five years before the filing of the complaint and that such formed the basis for the initial foreclosure complaint filed by First Horizon. See Hicks v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 178 So. 3d 957, 959 (Fla. 5th DCA 2015) (reversing a final judgment of foreclosure and remanding for dismissal of the complaint with prejudice when the complaint was "based on a default that occurred outside of the five-year statute of limitations period"). We disagree.

In Hicks, Wells Fargo filed a second foreclosure action based on the Hicks' initial default date, which occurred more than five years prior to the filing of the complaint. Wells Fargo's complaint also alleged that no subsequent monthly payments had been made. Id. at 958. The Fifth District determined that the trial court erred when it failed to dismiss the foreclosure complaint, explaining that although the second foreclosure action was not procedurally barred, the complaint alleging the initial default date was insufficient because "the suit must still be based on an act of default within the five-year statute of limitations period." Id. at 959.

¹At no point in the proceedings below did the trial court address Bollettieri's standing to raise the statute of limitations issue, and neither party has placed that issue before us in the instant appeal. We therefore do not consider that issue in our disposition. See I.R.C. v. State, 968 So. 2d 583, 588 (Fla. 2d DCA 2007) (holding that in considering an appeal, we are limited to addressing only the issues raised by the parties).

Although we agree with the Fifth District that a foreclosure action must be based on a default that occurred within the five-year statute of limitations period, we disagree that a complaint alleging that the homeowners are in a continuing state of default at the time of filing fails to satisfy this requirement. Dismissal of "a complaint based on the expiration of the statute of limitations should be granted only in extraordinary circumstances in which the facts pleaded in the complaint conclusively establish that the statute of limitations bars the action as a matter of law." Hummer v. Adams Homes of Nw. Fla., Inc., 41 Fla. L. Weekly D512, D512 (Fla. 2d DCA Feb. 26, 2016) (quoting Wishnatzki v. Coffman Constr., Inc., 884 So. 2d 282, 285 (Fla. 2d DCA 2004)). Bollettieri does not dispute that Graham's mortgage is currently in default and that no payments have been made since the September 2007 default. Although the initial default occurred more than five years prior to the bank's foreclosure complaint, the bank affirmatively alleged that Graham has failed to make any subsequent payments due on the note. Each "alleged default create[s] a new and independent right in the mortgagee to accelerate payment on the note in a subsequent foreclosure action." Singleton v. Greymar Assocs., 882 So. 2d 1004, 1008 (Fla. 2004). Accordingly, the bank's complaint was sufficient to establish that foreclosure could be based on any of the missed payments since the initial breach and was therefore not barred by the statute of limitations. To the extent that our decision conflicts with the holding of the Fifth District in Hicks, we certify conflict.

Affirmed; conflict certified.

SILBERMAN, Judge, specially concurring.

I concur in the decision reached by the majority, which turns on the allegations of the complaint. I also note that it is undisputed the lawsuit in this case was initiated within five years of the date the bank accelerated the balance due on the loan. Thus, this case does not address the issue that has been the subject of recent decisions by other courts: that is, whether dismissal of an earlier foreclosure lawsuit nullifies the lender's prior acceleration of the note. See, e.g., Deutsche Bank Trust Co. Ams. v. Beauvais, 188 So. 3d 938 (Fla. 3d DCA 2016) (en banc); Nationstar Mortg., LLC, v. Brown, 175 So. 3d 833 (Fla. 1st DCA 2015); U.S. Bank Nat'l Ass'n v. Bartram, 140 So. 3d 1007 (Fla. 5th DCA), review granted, 160 So. 3d 892 (Fla. 2014).

No. 5D14-1748.

District Court of Appeal of Florida,
Fifth District.

Nov. 13, 2015.

Background: Note and mortgage holder brought action against mortgagors to foreclose mortgage and reestablish promissory note at issue. The Circuit Court, Orange County, Lawrence R. Kirkwood, Senior Judge, entered judgment of foreclosure, and mortgagors appealed.

Holdings: The District Court of Appeal, Lambert, J., held that:

- (1) Circuit Court erred when failed to dismiss foreclosure complaint with prejudice based on a default that occurred outside of the five-year limitations period, but
- (2) note and mortgage holder was entitled to bring another suit to foreclose, so long as it was based on an act of default within the limitations period. Reversed and remanded with directions.

1. Mortgages ⚔️424

Trial court erred when it failed to dismiss foreclosure complaint with prejudice based on a default that occurred outside of the five-year statute of limitations period, where trial counsel for the parties stipulated to the court that the facts were undisputed, with note and mortgage holder's counsel additionally confirming that the sole determinative issue to resolve at trial was one of law. West's F.S.A. § 95.11(2)(c).

2. Mortgages ⚔️424, 475

Foreclosure action brought by prior holder of note and mortgage, which alleged a default in payments and accelerated the balance due on the loan underlying the mortgage, and which was subsequently voluntarily dismissed, was not an adjudication on the merits, and thus, current holder of note and mortgage was entitled to bring a later suit to foreclose, so long as the suit was based on an act of default within the five-year statute of limitations. West's F.S.A. § 95.11(2)(c).

LAMBERT, J.

Patrick Hicks and Tamaica Hicks ("Homeowners") appeal the final judgment of foreclosure entered in favor of Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. ("Bank"). Homeowners argue that based upon the default date alleged in the complaint and the stipulations of the parties at trial, Bank's claim was barred by the applicable statute of limitations. We agree and reverse with directions to dismiss the complaint.

On January 9, 2013, Bank filed its complaint to foreclose the mortgage and reestablish the promissory note at issue.¹ Bank alleged that the terms of the note and mortgage had been breached by Homeowners' failure to pay the June 1, 2006 payment and all subsequent payments. Bank also alleged that it exercised its option to accelerate the loan.

Homeowners answered the complaint and asserted as their first affirmative defense that the complaint was time barred and must be dismissed with prejudice because the suit was not commenced within five years of the default date alleged in the complaint, as required under section 95.11(2)(c), Florida Statutes (2013) (establishing a five-year statute of limitations on actions to foreclose a mortgage). Bank did not file a reply to the affirmative defense.

The case proceeded to trial in March 2014. At the commencement of trial, the following colloquy between counsel and the court occurred:

[HOMEOWNERS' COUNSEL]: Your Honor, before we get started with testimony, plaintiff's counsel and I have talked.

We actually believe that none of the facts are in dispute, and it's just a matter of law that the Court needs to rule upon.

1. The note being sued on is dated September 19, 2005, with a maturity date of October 1, 2035.
2. In light of these representations made to the lower court, we find Bank's argument on appeal—that Homeowners failed to meet their

There was a motion for summary judgment filed, but unfortunately it was filed 18 days ago. So by rule, we aren't able to have it heard before today's trial. So we are proposing that we have a stipulation to the facts during what is now the trial, and then make arguments to the Court in terms of the law and how those facts should be applied, and then have the Court render a judgment based on those facts and application of the law. [BANK'S COUNSEL]: Your Honor, that's the agreement. And I believe that the agreement is that, depending on how this comes out, they'll consent to the final judgment or it will be dismissed.

THE COURT: This is set for trial. It's not set for summary judgment.

[HOMEOWNERS' COUNSEL]: That's correct, Your Honor, but being that there are no disputes as to the facts, we'd be happy to stipulate to what those are for the Court to consider.

[BANK'S COUNSEL]: And really, I mean, the determining factor isn't anything to do with the facts. It's one issue of law.

[BANK'S COUNSEL]: There was a default on the loan that occurred in 2006. The prior holder of the note, U.S. Bank, filed a foreclosure action against defendants in 2006. That action was voluntarily dismissed in 2008.

In 2011, Wells Fargo, who is the current holder of the note and mortgage, sent a notice of intent to accelerate to the defendants, and then filed a new foreclosure action in 2013.^[2] evidentiary burden of proof on their affirmative defense or somehow "invited error"—to be particularly meritless. We further note that Bank's trial counsel is not Bank's appellate counsel.

Homeowners' counsel thereafter argued that it was undisputed that there was a prior foreclosure suit, based on a June 1, 2006 default, filed on September 8, 2006, and that by filing the 2006 foreclosure action, the prior holder accelerated the balance owed on the note. Subsequently, the suit was voluntarily dismissed without prejudice. Based on this chronology, Homeowners' counsel asserted below that Bank was therefore required to file the present suit to foreclose no later than September 8, 2011. Because the present suit was not filed until 2013, Homeowners argued that Bank's suit was barred by the statute of limitations. Conversely, Bank argued that pursuant to Singleton v. Grey-mar Associates, 882 So.2d 1004 (Fla.2004), the voluntary dismissal of the prior foreclosure action in 2008, without prejudice, meant that the loan was no longer in a state of acceleration. Therefore, Bank asserted that if the loan went into "default at any time," Bank would be entitled to accelerate the full balance due under the note, including "the amounts going back to the first date of default because that's what's due and owing." After listening to the arguments, the court entered the final judgment of foreclosure on appeal.

[1] The dispositive facts in this appeal are not in dispute. Because the earlier voluntary dismissal was not an adjudication on the merits, Evergrene Partners, Inc. v. Citibank, N.A., 143 So.3d 954, 956 (Fla. 4th DCA 2014) (citing Froman v. Kirland, 753 So.2d 114, 116 (Fla. 4th DCA 1999)), Bank was entitled to bring a later suit to foreclose on the note and mortgage. However, the suit must still be based on an act of default within the five-year statute of limitations period. See id. Here, Bank's complaint was filed in 2013, based on an alleged default occurring on June 1, 2006.³ Because trial counsel for the parties stipulated to the court that the facts were undisputed, with Bank's counsel additionally confirming that the sole determinative issue to resolve at trial was one of law, the court erred when it failed to dismiss the foreclosure complaint with prejudice based on a default that occurred outside of the five-year statute of limitations period.

[2] Nevertheless, we reject Homeowners' implication in their brief that Bank is now forever barred from bringing an action to foreclose. Despite the previous acceleration of the balance owed in both the instant suit and prior suit, Bank is not precluded from filing a new foreclosure action based on different acts or dates of default not previously alleged, provided that the subsequent foreclosure action on the subsequent defaults is brought within the statute of limitations period found in section 95.11(2)(c), Florida Statutes. See Singleton, 882 So.2d at 1007 ("While it is true that a foreclosure action and an acceleration of the balance due based upon the same default may bar a subsequent action on that default, an acceleration and foreclosure predicated upon subsequent and different defaults present a separate and distinct issue.") (citing Olympia Mortg. Corp. v. Pugh, 774 So.2d 863, 866 (Fla. 4th DCA 2000)). This is because a "subsequent and separate alleged default create[s] a new and independent right in the mortgagee to accelerate payment on the note in a subsequent foreclosure action." Id. at 1008; U.S. Bank, Nat'l Ass'n v. Bartram, 140 So.3d 1007, 1014 (Fla. 5th DCA) (recognizing that the discussion in Singleton was limited to the application of the res judicata doctrine, but concluding

SALTER, J.

On Motion for Rehearing

Upon consideration of the appellants' motion for rehearing, we withdraw our opinion issued April 13, 2016, in this appeal, and substitute the following opinion in its place.¹

Jorge and Maria Collazo appeal a final judgment of foreclosure entered on a defaulted residential mortgage. The appellee and mortgagee, HSBC Bank USA, N.A. (“HSBC”),² commenced the lawsuit below in January 2014, over five years after (a) the alleged payment default, (b) acceleration of the entire indebtedness in a notice sent to the Collazos in 2008, and (c) the commencement of a previous foreclosure suit in 2008, dismissed without prejudice in 2011 following HSBC’s failure to comply with a court order. The Collazos maintain that the final judgment of foreclosure must be reversed because of the expiration of the five-year statute of limitations³ applicable to the mortgage note.

This Court’s decision issued on rehearing en banc in the case of Deutsche Bank Trust Co. Americas v. Beauvais, 188 So. 3d 938 (Fla. 3d DCA 2016), holds that the five-year statute does not bar a second foreclosure suit filed on a subsequent payment default occurring within the five-year statutory period preceding the commencement of the second suit. The Fifth District has reached a similar conclusion in the case of U.S. Bank National Association v. Bartram, 140 So. 3d 1007, 1014 (Fla. 5th DCA), review granted, 160 So. 3d 892 (Fla. 2014) (“Therefore, we conclude that a foreclosure action for default in payments occurring after the order of dismissal in the first foreclosure action is not barred by the statute of limitations found in section 95.11(2)(c), Florida Statutes, provided the subsequent foreclosure action on the subsequent defaults is brought within the limitations period.”).

² HSBC did not respond to an order directing it to file an answer brief, nor has it filed a memorandum of points and authorities in support of its position. Although counsel has since appeared on its behalf, HSBC has not filed a response to the Collazos’ motion for rehearing and for certification.

³ § 95.11(2)(c), Fla. Stat. (2014).

The record in the present case discloses that HSBC asserted the same payment default date and basis for acceleration in both the 2008 and 2014 complaints, a date over five years preceding the commencement of the 2014 case in the circuit court. As a result, we reverse the final judgment of foreclosure and remand the case for dismissal without prejudice in accordance with this Court’s recent opinion on rehearing en banc in Beauvais.⁴

Reversed and remanded with instructions.

⁴ Our Beauvais decision and the case at hand may also be affected by the Florida Supreme Court’s determination of the limitations issues in the pending Bartram case.

SHEPHERD, J., concurring

I concur in the reversal of the final judgment of foreclosure in this case. I write only to dispel any confusion concerning whether this is a pipeline case under U.S. Bank National Association v. Bartram, 140 So. 3d 1007 (Fla. 5th DCA), review granted, 160 S0. Ed 892 (Fla. 2014), or Deutsche Bank Trust Company v. Americas v. Beauvais, 188 So. 3d 938 (Fla. 3d DCA 2016) (pending review, Case No. SC 16-732). The issue in those cases was whether an adjudication denying acceleration and foreclosure in one circumstance bars a subsequent action to foreclose the same mortgage. Both cases hold that a subsequent foreclosure action is not barred so long as the second action is brought on a subsequent default within the five-year limitation period for bringing the action under section 95.11(2)(c) of the Florida Statutes. Beauvais at 953; Bartram at 1014. The actions before their respective courts in Bartram and Beauvais were both based upon a subsequent default occurring within the five-year statutory period. Beauvais at 940; Bartram at 1009.

In contrast to these two cases, the foreclosure action in the case before us was commenced on January 24, 2014, based on a default in payment alleged to have occurred on April 1, 2008. Counsel for HSBC insisted on trying the case on the basis of that default. After hearing the evidence, the trial court entered final judgment and calculated all amounts due and payable based upon that default date over borrowers' objections and involuntary dismissal motions. In short, unlike counsel for the lenders in both the Bartram and Beauvais cases, who circumvented the statute of limitations in those cases by alleging a default within the five-year limitation period, counsel for HSBC, when challenged, doubled down on a stale default outside the limitation period. That fact distinguishes the case before us from both Bartram and Beauvais.

It is possible – it is always possible – that a decision in a case pending in our High Court may have some effect on a decision of this court that is not yet final. That is at least theoretically possible in the case before us. However, the validity of our decision in this case is not directly dependent upon the outcome of Bartram or Beauvais in the Florida Supreme Court.

Background: Mortgagee brought second foreclosure action after first foreclosure action was dismissed without prejudice. The Circuit Court, Miami-Dade County, Peter R. Lopez, J., granted summary judgment in favor of mortgagor. Mortgagee appealed.

Holdings: On rehearing en banc, the District Court of Appeal, Wells, J., held that:

- (1) dismissal of a mortgage-foreclosure action accelerating payment on one default does not bar a subsequent foreclosure action on a later default if the subsequent default occurred within five years of the subsequent action;
- (2) mortgagee's right to file a subsequent action to foreclose on an accelerated note following a subsequent default does not turn on whether the first action to foreclose on an earlier default and acceleration was dismissed with or without prejudice; and
- (3) mortgagee had no obligation to take any affirmative action to reinstate installment nature of loan or to "decelerate" loan following dismissal of first mortgage-foreclosure action.

Reversed and remanded.

When a mortgage declares the entire indebtedness due upon default of certain of its provisions or within a reasonable time thereafter, the statute of limitations on a foreclosure claim begins to run immediately when the default takes place or the time intervenes. West's F.S.A. § 95.11(2)(c).

3. Mortgages ⚡424, 475

Dismissal of a mortgage-foreclosure action accelerating payment on one default does not bar a subsequent foreclosure action on a later default if the subsequent default occurred within five years of the subsequent action. West's F.S.A. § 95.11(2)(c).

4. Mortgages ⚡475

Mortgagee's right to file a subsequent action to foreclose on an accelerated note following a subsequent default does not turn on whether the first action to foreclose on an earlier default and acceleration was dismissed with or without prejudice.

5. Pretrial Procedure ⚡694

When an action is dismissed without a final adjudication on the merits, the parties are left as if the suit had never been filed.

6. Mortgages ⚡475

Mortgagee had no obligation to take any affirmative action to reinstate installment nature of loan or to "decelerate" loan following dismissal of mortgage-foreclosure action, which was brought after loan had been accelerated; installment nature of loan did not terminate following acceleration and foreclosure, and dismissal of foreclosure action returned parties to status quo existing before acceleration.

ON MOTION FOR REHEARING EN BANC OR, IN THE ALTERNATIVE, MOTION FOR CERTIFICATION

WELLS, Judge.

We grant rehearing en banc, withdraw our prior opinion in Deutsche Bank Trust Co. Americas v. Beauvais, 40 Fla. L. Weekly D1, 2014 WL 7156961 (Fla. 3d DCA Dec. 17, 2014), and substitute this opinion in its stead.

Deutsche Bank appeals from a final summary judgment denying foreclosure of a mortgage securing a $1,440,000 promissory note executed in the bank's favor by borrower Harry Beauvais. The complaint filed by the bank on December 18, 2012, alleged entitlement to relief by virtue of Beauvais' failure to pay an installment payment due on October 1, 2006, "and all subsequent payments." The complaint, in addition to naming Beauvais, joined a number of entities with potential interests in the property securing the bank's loan including the Aqua Master Association, Inc., the condominium association for the premises at issue.

By the time this action was commenced, Beauvais no longer held title to the condominium securing payment of this loan, his interest having been foreclosed and title transferred in 2011 to Aqua to satisfy outstanding condominium assessments. Beauvais, with no interest in the property, filed no answer to the bank's complaint and asserted no defenses to foreclosure of the bank's loan. The bank moved for a default; however, none appears to have been entered. Aqua, on the other hand, now title holder of the property securing the bank's loan, filed an answer and affirmative defenses in which it alleged that the instant action was barred by the five year statute of limitations governing mortgage foreclosures. See § 95.11(2)(c), Fla. Stat. (2013). According to Aqua, the bank's cause of action for foreclosure accrued in 2007 when the bank's predecessor in interest accelerated the balance due on the loan by filing a prior suit to collect on a September 1, 2006 default,¹ and because the bank failed to pursue foreclosure within five years of that acceleration/accrual after the first suit was dismissed, the instant action was time barred.

The trial court agreed and granted judgment in Aqua's favor:

The previous mortgage holder filed suit against borrower [Beauvais] and the Association on January 23, 2007, alleging that the borrower defaulted on the mortgage and elected to accelerate payment of the balance due on the note and mortgage. The prior complaint specifically declared the full amount payable under the note and mortgage, $1,439,976.80, to be due. However, the action was dismissed without prejudice on plaintiff's non-appearance at initial case management conference on December 6, 2010. On December 12, 2012, Plaintiff filed the instant suit to foreclose the mortgage. The complaint called for the entire balance of $1,439,976.80, to be due.

Association is correct that the filing of the prior lawsuit in 2007 triggered the running of the statute of limitations with respect to the entire balance of the mortgage and note. The case to which the Plaintiff cites, Singleton v. Greymar Assoc., 882 So.2d 1004 (Fla.2004), is inapposite and concerns only the application of res judicata in an action to collect discrete payments under an installment contract. Singleton is not only distinguishable from the facts of the instant case, it is wholly irrelevant to the issue of the statute of limitations raised by the Association.

It is the determination of this Court that the right to accelerate was exercised by the filing of the prior lawsuit on January 23, 2007. Since more than five years elapsed between the acceleration and the filing of the underlying suit, the action is barred by the statute of limitations. See § 95.11(2)(c), Fla. Stat. . . .

The bank appeals. We reverse because we, like our sister courts, find the Florida Supreme Court's decision in Singleton v. Greymar Associates, 882 So.2d 1004 (Fla. 2004), applicable to the instant action, and that it mandates reversal. See Evergrene Partners, Inc. v. Citibank, N.A., 143 So.3d 954, 956 (Fla. 4th DCA 2014) (applying Singleton and concluding that the statute of limitations would not bar foreclosure of an accelerated loan where an earlier, voluntarily dismissed, foreclosure had been brought to enforce the same loan accelerated for a separate default); see also Nationstar Mortg., LLC v. Brown, 175 So.3d 833, 834–35 (Fla. 1st DCA 2015) (applying Singleton to hold that the statute of limitations did not bar an action to foreclose an accelerated loan brought more than five years after a prior action to foreclose on the same accelerated loan had been brought but then voluntarily dismissed without prejudice); accord Hicks v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 178 So.3d 957, 959 (Fla. 5th DCA 2015) (citing Singleton and concluding “we reject Homeowners’ implication in their brief that Bank is now forever barred from bringing an action to foreclose. Despite the previous acceleration of the balance owed in both the instant suit and prior suit, Bank is not precluded from filing a new foreclosure action based on different acts or dates of default not previously alleged, provided that the subsequent foreclosure action on the subsequent defaults is brought within the statute of limitations period found in section 95.11(2)(c), Florida Statutes”).

1. Application of Singleton to the instant case.

- a. Singleton allows for multiple actions for individual defaults with accompanying accelerations.

[1,2] In Singleton, the Florida Supreme Court held that “successive foreclosure suits, regardless of whether or not the mortgagee sought to accelerate payments on the note in the first suit,” were not barred if, as here, the second suit was predicated on a new default because a “subsequent and separate alleged default create[s] a new default and independent right in the mortgagee to accelerate payment on the note in a subsequent foreclosure action.” Singleton, 882 So.2d at 1008 (emphasis added); see, e.g., PNC Bank, NA v. Neal, 147 So.3d 32, 32 (Fla. 1st DCA 2013) (stating that “the dismissal with prejudice of PNC Bank’s foreclosure action . . . does not preclude PNC Bank from instituting a new foreclosure action based on a different act or a new date of default not alleged in the dismissed action”); Star Funding Solutions, LLC v. Kronides, 101 So.3d 403, 403 (Fla. 4th DCA 2012) (citing Singleton as support for the conclusion that dismissal with prejudice of the instant action would have no impact on a subsequent foreclosure action because “[a] new default, based on a different act or date of default not alleged in the dismissed action, creates a new cause of action”); Olympia Mortg. Corp. v. Pugh, 774 So.2d 863, 867 (Fla. 4th DCA 2000) (confirming that voluntary dismissal of a foreclosure action on an accelerated mortgage and note did not bar a subsequent action on a later default); accord St. Louis Condo. Ass’n, Inc. v. Nationstar Mortg., LLC, No. 14-21827-CIV, 2014 WL 6694780, at *2 (S.D.Fla. Nov. 26, 2014) (“When a ‘mortgagee initiates a foreclosure action and invokes its right of acceleration, if the mortgagee’s foreclosure action is unsuccessful for whatever reason, the mortgagee still has the right to file later foreclosure actions-and to seek acceleration of the entire debt-so long as they are based on separate defaults.’ Dorta v. Wilmington Trust Nat’l Assoc., 13-cv-185-OC-10PRL, 2014 WL 1152917, at *2-4 (M.D.Fla. Mar. 24, 2014) (relying on Singleton v. Greymar Assoc., 882 So.2d 1004 (Fla.2004) (per curiam [sic])). Contrary to Plaintiff’s assertions, ‘an unsuccessful foreclosure action does not subsequently render a mortgage forever invalid and unenforceable.’ Id. Rather, the Note and Mortgage remain enforceable and Defendant still has the right to file foreclosure actions based on separate defaults.”); Diaz v. Deutsche Bank Nat’l Trust Co., No. 14-22583-CIV, 2014 WL 4351411, at *3 (S.D.Fla. Sept. 2, 2014).^{2,3}

2. See generally In re Rogers Townsend & Thomas, PC, — N.C.App. —, 773 S.E.2d 101, 106 (2015), referring to Singleton’s conclusion that a subsequent and separate alleged default created a new and independent right in the lender to accelerate payment on a note in a subsequent foreclosure action, and concluding:

We recognize that this view of foreclosure actions involving acceleration on a note is not universal. See U.S. Bank Natl. Assn. v. Gullotta, 120 Ohio St.3d 399, 405, 899 N.E.2d 987, 992 (2008) (holding that each missed payment under a promissory note and mortgage did not give rise to a new claim because “[o]nce [the borrower] defaulted and [the lender] invoked the acceleration clause of the note, the . . . obligations to pay each installment merged into one obligation to pay the entire balance on the note”). Even so, Singleton’s pronouncement that an “acceleration and foreclosure [action] predicated upon subsequent and different defaults present[s] a separate and distinct” claim expresses the better reasoned view. 882 So.2d at 1007.

3. This analysis of Singleton neither undermines nor contradicts prior Florida Supreme Court or other Florida precedent, including the Supreme Court’s decision in Travis Co. v. Mayes, 160 Fla. 375, 36 So.2d 264, 265-66 (1948). Travis does no more than stand for the unremarkable proposition that when considering a mortgage that contains an automatic acceleration clause “[t]he law is well settled that the Statute of Limitations begins to run against a mortgage at the time the right to foreclose accrues. The rule is also settled that when a mortgage in terms declares the entire indebtedness due upon default of certain of its provisions or within a reasonable time thereafter, the Statute of Limitations begins to run immediately [when] the default takes place or the time intervenes." Travis, 36 So.2d at 265 (citations omitted); see also Spencer v. EMC Mortg. Corp., 97 So.3d 257, 260 (Fla. 3d DCA 2012) (holding that a foreclosure action filed more than five years after acceleration of the entire debt upon default was barred by the statute of limitations); Greene v. Bursey, 733 So.2d 1111, 1115 (Fla. 4th DCA 1999) (holding that the statute of limitations began to run in that case from the date of maturity because the lender had not sought to accelerate and foreclose following an earlier default); Monte v. Tipton, 612 So.2d 714, 716 (Fla. 2d DCA 1993) (stating the general principle that the statute of limitations on a mortgage foreclosure action does not begin to run until the last payment is due unless the mortgage contains an acceleration

- b. Singleton considered the view that an acceleration of payments once put at issue is determinative, and rejected that proposition.

In coming to this conclusion, the Florida Supreme Court considered, and expressly rejected the view espoused in Stadler v. Cherry Hill Developers, Inc., 150 So.2d 468 (Fla. 2d DCA 1963), that an acceleration of payments once put at issue is determinative. In Stadler, the Second District held that acceleration of payments in a foreclosure action on one defaulted installment payment put the entire loan balance at issue, thereby precluding a second foreclosure action on a subsequent default. Faced with a conflict between this determination in Stadler and the Fourth District's opinion in Singleton v. Greymar Associates, 840 So.2d 356 (Fla. 4th DCA 2003), finding that a second foreclosure on a "new and different breach" would not be precluded, the Supreme Court chose to adopt the view employed by the Fourth District to find that a lender could maintain a separate action for foreclosure for a default which occurred after acceleration on an earlier default:

[W]e can envision many instances in which the application of the Stadler decision would result in unjust enrichment or other inequitable results. If res judicata prevented a mortgagee from acting on a subsequent default even after an earlier claimed default could not be established, the mortgagor would have no incentive to make future timely payments on the note. The adjudication of the earlier default would essentially insulate her from future foreclosure action on the note—merely because she prevailed in the first action. Clearly, justice would not be served if the mortgagee was barred from challenging the subsequent default payment solely because he failed to prove the earlier alleged default.

We must also remember that foreclosure is an equitable remedy and there may be some tension between a court's authority to adjudicate the equities and the legal doctrine of res judicata. The ends of justice require that the doctrine of res judicata not be applied so strictly so as to prevent mortgagees from being able to challenge multiple defaults on a mortgage. We can find no valid basis clause which the mortgagee has chosen to exercise); accord Locke v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 509 So.2d 1375, 1377 (Fla. 1st DCA 1987); see also Smith v. F.D.I.C., 61 F.3d 1552, 1561–62 (11th Cir.1995), and Harmony Homes, Inc. v. U.S. on Behalf of Small Bus. Admin., 936 F.Supp. 907, 911 (M.D.Fla.1996) (similarly relying on Tipton, Locke, and Conner v. Coggins, 349 So.2d 780 (Fla. 1st DCA 1977), for the general proposition that the statute of limitations begins to run on a mortgage foreclosure action when the last payment is due except when the mortgage includes an acceleration clause). The decision in Singleton gives rise to no inconsistency in the law, and does nothing to change when the clock starts ticking for statute of limitations purposes. Rather, Singleton provides for new accelerations based on subsequent defaults—to which, of course, statutory limitations periods apply.

for barring mortgagees from challenging subsequent defaults on a mortgage and note solely because they did not prevail in a previous attempted foreclosure based upon a separate alleged default. Singleton, 882 So.2d at 1007–08 (citation omitted).

Here we follow that choice. And, as have numerous post-Singleton courts before us, we apply this determination, while made in the context of a res judicata defense, to a statute of limitations defense. See, e.g., Brown, 175 So.3d at 834 (applying Singleton to a statute of limitations defense); Evergrene Partners, Inc., 143 So.3d at 955, 956 (same); U.S. Bank Nat'l Ass'n v. Bartram, 140 So.3d 1007, 1014 (Fla. 5th DCA 2014), review granted, 160 So.3d 892 (Fla. Sept. 11, 2014) (“Based on Singleton, a default occurring after a failed foreclosure attempt creates a new cause of action for statute of limitations purposes, even where acceleration had been triggered and the first case was dismissed on its merits. Therefore, we conclude that a foreclosure action for default in payments occurring after the order of dismissal in the first foreclosure action is not barred by the statute of limitations found in section 95.11(2)(c), Florida Statutes, provided the subsequent foreclosure action on the subsequent defaults is brought within the limitations period.”); Dorta, 2014 WL 1152917, at *6 (rejecting a claim that the statute of limitations barred any further actions to foreclose after a previous action for foreclosure on an accelerated loan had been involuntarily dismissed, finding that Singleton “directly refutes this argument, holding that even where a mortgagee initiates a foreclosure action and invokes its right of acceleration, if the mortgagee’s foreclosure action is unsuccessful for whatever reason, the mortgagee still has the right to file later foreclosure actions—and to seek acceleration of the entire debt—so long as they are based on separate defaults”); see also Smathers v. Nationstar Mortg., LLC, No. 5:14-cv-415-Oc-30 PRL, 2014 WL 4639136, at *2 (M.D.Fla. Sept. 16, 2014) (applying Singleton in a statute of limitations case and confirming that an acceleration and foreclosure predicated upon a subsequent and different default would not be barred by the dismissal of an earlier action predicated on a separate and distinct default); accord LNB-017-13, LLC v. HSBC Bank USA, 96 F.Supp.3d 1358, 1363–64 (S.D.Fla.2015) (citing a litany of cases relying upon Singleton to conclude that “the current state of the law does not support [a claim that] . . . prior acceleration and expiration of the 5-year statute of limitations for foreclosure actions bars all other foreclosure actions based on non-payment”).

[3] We therefore conclude that dismissal of a foreclosure action accelerating payment on one default does not bar a subsequent foreclosure action on a later default if the subsequent default occurred within five years of the subsequent action. See Solonenko v. Georgia Notes 18, LLC, 182 So.3d 876, 877 (Fla. 4th DCA 2016) (“[T]he present action, which was brought in February 2014, was based upon a different event of default [than the 2008 foreclosure action]—namely the borrowers’ failure to make the payment due on March 1, 2009. . . . Therefore, under this court’s precedent, the action was timely brought within the five-year statute of limitations.”); Hicks, 178 So.3d at 959 (finding that “Bank is not precluded from filing a new foreclosure action based on different acts or dates of default not previously alleged, provided that the subsequent foreclosure action on the subsequent defaults is brought within the statute of limitations period found in section 95.11(2)(c), Florida Statutes”); Evergrene Partners, Inc., 143 So.3d at 956 (“While any claims relating to individual payment defaults that are now more than five years old may be subject to the statute of limitations, each payment default that is less than five years old . . . created a basis for a subsequent foreclosure and/or acceleration action.” (quoting Kaan v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 981 F.Supp.2d 1271, 1274 (S.D.Fla.2013)); Bartram, 140 So.3d at 1014 (concluding that “a foreclosure action for default in payments occurring after the order of dismissal in the first foreclosure action is not barred by the statute of limitations found in section 95.11(2)(c), Florida Statutes, provided the subsequent foreclosure action on the subsequent defaults is brought within the limitations period”); see also Kaan, 981 F.Supp.2d at 1274 (finding that, under Singleton and section 95.11(2)(c), Wells Fargo was allowed to bring a subsequent foreclosure action relating to subsequent payment defaults on the note and mortgage that were less than five years old). It is the fact that the bank alleged the failure to pay the October 1, 2006 installment payment “and all subsequent payments” that makes the instant case fall within the rule as set out herein. (Emphasis added).

c. Whether a dismissal is with or without prejudice is irrelevant to a lender’s right to file subsequent foreclosure actions on subsequent defaults.

[4] Under Singleton, subsequent defaults allow for subsequent accelerations regardless of the nature of a prior dismissal. A lender’s right to file a subsequent action to foreclose on an accelerated note following a subsequent default does not turn on whether the first action to foreclose on an earlier default and acceleration was dismissed with or without prejudice. As Singleton teaches, even a dismissal with prejudice which adjudicates the merits of a first filed foreclosure action only precludes the lender from recovering on the underlying defaulted installment and returns the lender and the borrower to the status quo which permits the lender to file subsequent foreclosure actions based on subsequent defaults. See Singleton, 882 So.2d at 1007 (“[I]f the plaintiff in a foreclosure action goes to trial and loses on the merits, we do not believe such plaintiff would be barred from filing a subsequent foreclosure action based upon a subsequent default. The adjudication merely bars a second action relitigating the same alleged default. A dismissal with prejudice of the foreclosure action is tantamount to a judgment against the mortgagee. That judgment means that the mortgagee is not entitled to foreclose the mortgage. . . . Accordingly, we do not believe the dismissal of the foreclosure action in this case barred the subsequent action on the balance of the note.” (quoting Capital Bank v. Needle, 596 So.2d 1134, 1138 (Fla. 4th DCA 1992))).

A dismissal without prejudice which does not adjudicate the merits of a first filed foreclosure action, similarly can do no more than terminate a lender’s ability to collect on the underlying defaulted installment, again leaving the lender free to accelerate and file a subsequent foreclosure action for subsequent defaults. See Brown, 175 So.3d at 834–35 (citations omitted) (“We find that appellant’s assertion of the right to accelerate was not irrevocably ‘exercised’ within the meaning of cases defining accrual for foreclosure actions, when the right was merely asserted and then dismissed without prejudice. After the dismissal without prejudice, the parties returned to the status quo that existed prior to the filing of the dismissed complaint. As a matter of law, appellant’s 2012 foreclosure action, based on breaches that occurred after the breach that triggered the first complaint, was not barred by the statute of limitations.”).

Thus, as concluded in Bartram, and alluded to in Dorta, the “with” or “without prejudice” dismissal is a distinction without a difference. Bartram, 140 So.3d at 1013 n. 1 (“We acknowledge that the Bank suffered a dismissal with prejudice of its earlier foreclosure action, unlike the dismissal in Dorta, but conclude that the distinction is not material for purposes of the issue at hand.”); Dorta, 2014 WL 1152917 at *6 n. 3 (“Singleton involved a dismissal with prejudice; whereas Citibank’s foreclosure action was merely dismissed without prejudice. Dismissals without prejudice are not considered adjudications of the merits, and therefore there was no effective acceleration of the Note and the Mortgage.”); see also Espinoza v. Countrywide Home Loans Servicing, L.P., 2014 WL 3845795 at *4 (S.D.Fla. Aug. 5, 2014) (“Pursuant to Singleton, when ‘a mortgagee initiates a foreclosure action and invokes its right of acceleration, if the mortgagee’s foreclosure action is unsuccessful for whatever reason, the mortgagee still has the right to file later foreclosure actions . . . so long as they are based on separate defaults.’” (Emphasis added) (quoting Dorta, 2014 WL 1152917 at *6)). As observed in In re Anthony, 534 B.R. 834, 838–39 (Bkrtcy.M.D.Fla.2015), “[t]he better view is that dismissals with and without prejudice operate in the same manner with respect to the statute of limitations in mortgage foreclosures.”

Simply stated, the holding in Singleton cannot be distinguished away on a with prejudice/without prejudice distinction. Whether voluntarily dismissed or dismissed with or without prejudice the result is the same: upon dismissal, acceleration of a note and mortgage is abandoned with the parties returned to the status quo that existed prior to the filing of the dismissed action, leaving the lender free to accelerate and foreclose on subsequent defaults.

[5] Finally, separate and apart from the analysis established by Singleton, case law confirms “[w]hen an action is dismissed without a final adjudication on the merits, the parties are left as if the suit had never been filed. Epstein v. Ferst, 35 Fla. 498, 509, 17 So. 414, 415 (1895); 1 Fla. Jur.2d Actions § 220 (2003).” JB Int’l, Inc. v. Mega Flight, Inc., 840 So.2d 1147, 1150 (Fla. 5th DCA 2003). Thus, when the first foreclosure in this case was dismissed without prejudice, under established Florida case law, the parties were returned to their prior positions and nothing barred a new and timely action for acceleration and foreclosure. Epstein, 17 So. at 415 (“A dismissal ‘without prejudice’ leaves the parties as if no action had been instituted.”).

2. The lender in this case was under no obligation, contractually or legally, to “decelerate” this loan following dismissal.

- a. The mortgage itself confirms that the installment nature of the loan continues even after acceleration.

[6] There was no obligation on the bank to take any action to “decelerate” this loan following dismissal of the first foreclosure action because the mortgage itself confirms that the installment nature of the loan continues even after acceleration and the filing of a foreclosure action:

19. Borrower’s Right to Reinstate

After Acceleration. If Borrower meets certain conditions, Borrower shall have the right to have enforcement of this Security Instrument discontinued at any time prior to the earliest of . . . (c) entry of a judgment enforcing this Security Instrument. Those conditions are that Borrower . . . (a) pays Lender all sums which then would be due under this Security Instrument and the Note as if no acceleration had occurred. . . .

Upon reinstatement by Borrower, this Security Instrument and obligations secured hereby shall remain fully effective as if no acceleration had occurred.

(Emphasis added).

This provision, while addressing only a borrower's right to cure, confirms that after acceleration, the borrower is not obligated to pay the entire accelerated balance due to cure but, until a final judgment is entered, need only bring the loan current to avoid foreclosure. Stated another way, despite acceleration of the balance due and the filing of an action to foreclose, the installment nature of a loan secured by such a mortgage continues until a final judgment of foreclosure is entered and no action is necessary to reinstate it via a notice of "deceleration" or otherwise. As our sister court has confirmed, "[a]fter the dismissal . . . the parties returned to the status quo that existed prior to the filing of the dismissed complaint." Brown, 175 So.3d at 835. No further acts were necessary on the bank's part to "decelerate" this loan. See Matos v. Bank of New York, 2014 WL 3734578 at *1 (S.D.Fla. July 28, 2014) ("The statute of limitations has not run on this foreclosure action due to the dismissal of the prior foreclosure action, which decelerated the notice of acceleration.").

Even if such an affirmative act were required to decelerate this loan and to reinstate its installment nature, the failure to do so following dismissal of the first action would not preclude the instant action. This is because the mortgage at issue here clearly states that the bank's failure to act will not work as a waiver of its rights under the note and mortgage:

UNIFORM COVENANTS. Borrower and Lender covenant and agree as follows:

12. Borrower Not Released; Forbearance By Lender Not a Waiver.

Extension of the time for payment or modification of amortization of the sums secured by the Security Instrument granted by Lender to Borrower or any Successor in Interest of Borrower shall not operate to release the liability of Borrower or any Successors in Interest of Borrower. Lender shall not be required to commence proceedings against any Successor in Interest of Borrower or to refuse to extend time for payment or otherwise modify amortization or the sums secured by this Security Instrument by reason of any demand made by the original Borrower or any Successors in Interest of Borrower. Any forbearance by Lender in exercising any right or remedy including, without limitation, Lender's acceptance of payments from third persons, entities or Successors in Interest of Borrower or in amounts less than the amount then due, shall not be a waiver of or preclude the exercise of any right or remedy.

(Emphasis added).

Likewise the note provides for no waiver of the noteholder's right to payment:

6. BORROWER'S FAILURE TO PAY AS REQUIRED

....

(D) No Waiver By Note Holder

Even, if, at a time when I am in default, the Note Holder does not require me to pay immediately in full as described above, the Note Holder will still have the right to do so if I am in default at a later time.

Because the installment nature of the loan at issue did not terminate following acceleration and foreclosure, and because dismissal of the foreclosure action returned the parties to the status quo existing before acceleration, the bank was under no obligation to take any affirmative action to reinstate the installment nature of the loan or to “decelerate.”

- b. This reading of the mortgage contract is in accord with Florida and national mortgage industry practices and best serves the interests of both mortgagees and mortgagors.

This conclusion is wholly consistent with both national and local industry custom and practice. As amici Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac⁴ advise in an amicus brief provided on request, the mortgage at issue here is one of their “uniform mortgage instrument[s]” drafted “to ensure uniformity in the residential housing finance market” nationwide. According to them, paragraph 19, the reinstatement provision, was inserted into their standard mortgage forms to benefit defaulting borrowers by allowing them to avoid foreclosure by catching up on missed installment payments rather than having to pay the entire balance of a loan following acceleration. This, according to Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac, effectively preserves the installment nature of a loan even after acceleration making “deceleration” unnecessary following dismissal of a foreclosure action:

4. The purpose of these entities, we are advised, is to assure greater access to mortgage credit while promoting liquidity, stability and affordability in the residential real estate market.
5. As these amici note, “after dismissal, the lender no longer has any claim to the fully-accelerated amount, only the past-due payments.” Were this not true, “a lender that receive[d] a payment from a reinstating borrower for less than the fully-accelerated amount after accelerating the loan could simply return that payment and proceed with its foreclosure. But the Reinstatement Provision [paragraph 19] prohibits that.” Moreover, we are advised, if lenders were obligated to take some affirmative act to “decelerate” following dismissal, a lender could unilaterally nullify the reinstatement provision, refuse to

Because a borrower defaulting on his or her installment obligations has a continuing right to reinstate the Mortgage until entry of judgment (at which time the Mortgage ceases to exist), the installment nature of the contract exists for as long as the Mortgage does. Therefore, no affirmative act is necessary to reinstate the Mortgage’s installment obligations after dismissal...[⁵]

Adding support to our conclusion, both The Business Law Section⁶ of The Florida Bar and The Real Property Probate & Trust Law Section⁷ of The Florida Bar confirm that the custom and practice in Florida is to treat a dismissal of a foreclosure action as “decelerating” an acceleration made in a foreclosure action. See Cooke v. Commercial Bank of Miami, 119 So.2d 732, 735 (Fla. 3d DCA 1960) (concluding “customs and usages of the banking business may have a binding force as between banks, and between a bank and the person with whom it deals in the absence of an express agreement to the contrary”); see also Sabatino v. Curtiss Nat’l Bank of Miami Springs, 446 F.2d 1046, 1053 (5th Cir.1971) (“Absent instructions or an express agreement to the contrary, decelerate, and obligate the borrower to pay the entire accelerated amount.

6. The Business Law Section of The Florida Bar is comprised of almost 6,000 Bar members who routinely represent both lenders and borrowers.
7. The Real Property Probate & Trust Law Section of The Florida Bar is comprised of over 10,000 Bar members who practice in the areas of real estate, guardianship, trust and estate law, and who are dedicated to serving all Florida lawyers and the public in these fields of practice. The Section produces educational materials and seminars, assists the public pro bono, drafts legislation, drafts rules of procedure, and occasionally serves as a friend of the court to assist on issues related to their fields of practice.

general customs and usage of the banking business may have a binding effect between banks, and between a bank and the person with whom it deals.”).

In response to a number of inquiries posed by this court, The Real Property Probate & Trust Law Section reviewed the underlying mortgage and facts herein and relying on Florida statutes and case law provided the following responses which confirm our conclusion that the installment nature of the a loan continues following acceleration and that the practice in this State is that no more than dismissal of a foreclosure action is necessary to “decelerate” an accelerated loan:

1. Where a foreclosure action has been dismissed with the note and mortgage still in default:

a. Does the dismissal of the action, by itself, revoke the acceleration of the debt balance thereby reinstating the installment terms?

The Section responds:

The optional acceleration the lender exercised as part of the foreclosure process could not be effectuated until entry of the foreclosure judgment. Until then, that acceleration was subject to the foreclosure proceeding being dismissed for various reasons, including the borrower’s contractual right to reinstate and discontinue the foreclosure action by curing the past installment payment default. Absent a contrary provision in the mortgage contract, Florida law and equitable principles generally dictate the conclusion that no further affirmative act of deceleration is necessary. The dismissal itself should serve to revoke the acceleration made as part of the now dismissed foreclosure process and the parties should be deemed to have returned to their pre-filing status quo.

b. Absent additional action by the mortgagee can a subsequent claim of acceleration for a new and different time period be made?

The Section responds:

Yes. The installment nature of the mortgage loan, the terms of this form of mortgage, Florida case law and equitable principles dictate allowing a subsequent acceleration and foreclosure action for any new and different default.

c. Does it matter if the prior foreclosure action was voluntarily or involuntarily dismissed, or whether the dismissal was with or without prejudice?

The Section responds:

The nature of the dismissal in a prior foreclosure action should not matter in a subsequent foreclosure based on a default occurring after the default that precipitated the prior foreclosure action. However, the nature of the dismissal may matter if the statute of limitations or doctrine of res judicata is applicable to the default at issue in the prior foreclosure action.

d. What is the customary practice?

e. The Section responds:

The RPPTL Section defers to the response in the Business Law Section of the Florida Bar’s amicus brief. That response is consistent with the RPPTL Section’s understanding of the customary practice. [The BLS responded: the customary practice appears to be acceleration of “optional acceleration” loans through the filing of suit and not through acceleration notices. Accordingly, the customary practice amongst the BLS’s members appears to be based on Singleton and that filing of a new suit is permitted on a mortgage that contains an optional acceleration clause, whether the prior suit was terminated by voluntary dismissal or otherwise.]

2. If an affirmative act is necessary by the mortgagee to accelerate a mortgage, is an affirmative act necessary to decelerate?

The Section responds:

Unless the mortgage contract or the mortgagee's acceleration otherwise dictates, the dismissal of the foreclosure action should be deemed a deceleration returning the parties to the status quo.

3. In light of Singleton v. Greymar Assocs., 882 So.2d 1004 (Fla.2004), is deceleration an issue or is deceleration inapplicable if a different and subsequent default is alleged?

The Section responds:

Under the terms of the mortgage in this case, Singleton dictates the conclusion that deceleration after the dismissal of a prior foreclosure action is not an issue (or is inapplicable) in a subsequent foreclosure based on a different and subsequent alleged default.

The sum of these responses is that the custom and practice nationwide and in Florida is consistent with Singleton and that a loan accelerated for one default is "decelerated" upon dismissal (whether with or without prejudice).

In fact, after the dismissal in this case, the bank treated the loan as decelerated. After the dismissal, the bank sent Beauvais a letter demanding—not the full amount of the accelerated loan—but only the amount due from the date of default to the date of the letter. In the letter, the bank also noted that the next installment payment was still due on the next payment date, which it provided. The bank's demand for less than the full amount of the accelerated loan, and the bank's notice that the next individual installment payment remained due, is consistent only with the bank's treatment of the loan as decelerated. Thus, the Florida Supreme Court's ruling in Singleton and our decision here, track the actual and best practices of the industry regarding deceleration in these circumstances. There is no reason for courts to structure artificial rules regarding acceleration and deceleration at odds with how these matters are actually treated by borrowers and lenders in the marketplace.

3. The decisions of other states in no way militate against our analysis herein.

There is nothing new or novel in this mode of proceeding. And the view taken in Singleton does not make Florida an outlier in the law. Amici, National Association of Consumer Advocates, The National Consumer Law Center, and the Jerome N. Frank Legal Services Organization at the Yale Law School submitted a joint brief on rehearing en banc, which set forth and examined the relatively few opinions from states that have considered the import of a dismissal of a foreclosure action on an accelerated note and/or the circumstances whereby the lender may reinstate a mortgage after acceleration. Of the jurisdictions that have considered the issue, few appear to have addressed whether some affirmative act is necessary to "decelerate" an accelerated loan following dismissal of a foreclosure action.

As for the approximately fifteen states⁸ where, like Florida, home loans are se-

Indiana: Ind.Code §§ 32-30-10-1 to 32-30-10-14; Kansas: Kan. Stat. Ann. § 60-2410; Kentucky: Ky.Rev.Stat. Ann. § 426.005; Louisiana: La.Code Civ. Proc. Ann. arts. 3721 to cured by mortgages which require judicial intervention to foreclose, the cases cited to us by these amici confirm that only one appears to have actually determined that some affirmative act following dismissal must be taken to “decelerate” an accelerated loan. See, e.g., Fed. Nat’l Mortg. Ass’n v. Mebane, 208 A.D.2d 892, 618 N.Y.S.2d 88, 89 (1994) (confirming that the intermediate appellate courts of New York have taken the position that dismissal of a foreclosure action does not work a “deceleration” and a lender must take an affirmative step to revoke an election to accelerate). By contrast, at least one Indiana court in a “nearly identical situation” to Singleton, has cited with approval and relied upon Singleton. See Afolabi v. Atlantic Mort. & Inv. Corp., 849 N.E.2d 1170, 1174–75 (Ind.Ct.App.2006).

As for the remainder of the cases cited to us by amici, the issue remains largely undecided. See Johnson v. Samson Constr. Corp., 704 A.2d 866, 869 (Me.1997) (mentioning the issue in dicta in a case that determined, contrary to the position taken in Singleton, that a dismissal with prejudice of a foreclosure action for failure to file a report by counsel constituted an adjudication on the merits which precluded a subsequent foreclosure action); U.S. Bank Nat’l Ass’n v. Gullotta, 120 Ohio St.3d 399, 899 N.E.2d 987, 992–93 (2008) (similarly where the Supreme Court of Ohio mentioned the issue in dicta in a decision apparently limited to its facts and which, again contrary to Singleton, confirmed that there each missed installment payment does not yield a new claim); Hamlin v. Peckler, No. 2005–SC–000166–

MR, 2005 WL 3500784, at *2 (Ky. Dec. 22, 2005) (addressing the issue once, in an unpublished, never-again cited opinion that ultimately did not reach the merits of the issue for procedural reasons); Harrison v. Smith, 814 So.2d 42, 45–46 (La.Ct.App. 2002) (addressing the issue in the context of a note with no reinstatement provision and later cited only twice for a different proposition); Fid. Bank v. Krenisky, 72 Conn.App. 700, 807 A.2d 968, 975 (2002) (addressing the issue in the context of an acceleration via a pre-suit letter and finding that “[b]ecause the mortgage documents required no additional notice of default prior to the plaintiff’s commencement of its second foreclosure action, that component of the defendants’ first special defense is legally insufficient”).

The remaining five cases cited to us by amici come from deed-of-trust states⁹ which, unlike Florida, generally require no judicial intervention to foreclose. See 55 Am.Jur.2d Mortgages § 553 (2015) (“The power of sale in a deed of trust is a contractual arrangement in a mortgage or a deed of trust which confers upon the trustee or mortgagee the ‘power’ to sell the real property mortgaged without any order of court in the event of a default.”) (Citation omitted). For the most part, these decisions do not demonstrate that Florida is an outlier on this issue because they: (1) address the issue in unpublished opinions with no precedential value, see Kirsch v. Cranberry Fin., LLC, 178 Wash. App. 1031, 2013 WL 6835195 (Wash.Ct. App.2013), Wood v. Fitz-Simmons, No. 2 CA-VC 2008–0041, 2009 WL 580784 (Ariz. Ct.App., Mar. 6, 2009), and Cadle Co. II, to 1680.409c; South Carolina: S.C.Code Ann. §§ 29–3–610 to 29–3–790.

9. We note that there are a handful of states which allow both judicial and non-judicial foreclosure.

Inc. v. Fountain, 281 P.3d 1158 (Nev. 2009); (2) are rarely if ever cited as authority, see Kirsch, 178 Wash.App. 1031 (cited once); Wood, 2009 WL 580784 (no citations), Cadle Co. II, Inc., 281 P.3d 1158 (cited twice, including by the panel in this case); (3) are governed by a statute which expressly provides, unlike in Florida, that the statute of limitations runs from the accelerated due date of the loan, see Kirsch, 178 Wash.App. 1031, 2013 WL 6835195, at *4–5; or (4) do not even address the issue. See Murphy v. HSBC Bank USA, 95 F.Supp.3d 1025 (S.D.Tex. 2015) (involving an independent action challenging the mortgagee’s standing to foreclose a deed-of-trust in a non-judicial proceeding); Khan v. GBAK Props., Inc., 371 S.W.3d 347, 352 (Tex.App.–Houston [1st Dist.] 2012) (addressing whether the note holder had abandoned its prior acceleration—which had been accomplished through an acceleration letter—by continuing to accept payments on the note at a later date); Bankers Trust Co. of California, N.S. v. Baca, 141 N.M. 127, 151 P.3d 88, 90–91 (Ct.App.2006) (which stands for the rather unremarkable proposition that while res judicata did not prevent the filing of the second foreclosure action, the second action was nevertheless subject to the applicable statute of limitations that ran from the due date of the installment payment the mortgagor failed to make, as is the case with any installment contract).¹⁰

In short, by our estimation there is hardly a consensus in this area of the law

10. Because this case did not involve an acceleration by letter, this opinion in no way addresses what, if any, notice of deceleration would be required in such an instance. In that same vein, that non-involvement of judicial process may explain why deed-of-trust states may reach a different conclusion as to the requirement of notice of deceleration, as without court participation, the mortgagor may rightly need some notice that acceleration is no longer at issue.

outside of Florida and by no stretch of the imagination can Florida be labeled as an “outlier” on this point. Thus, while we do not question that several courts across the country have adopted reasoning different from that accepted in Florida, the point is our Supreme Court has rejected that different analysis. See Singleton, 882 So.2d at 1006 (disapproving Stadler’s conclusion at 150 So.2d at 472, “that an election to accelerate puts all future installment payments in issue and forecloses successive suits”). Instead, citing both legal and equitable reasons, Singleton chose to conclude a subsequent default created a new right to accelerate,¹¹ making the dismissal of the prior action for acceleration—with or without prejudice—non-determinative of a different and subsequent claim.

4. Concerns raised in the dissent.

In summary, as set out above, we reject the dissent’s concerns in the following manner:

- 1) Our analysis in no way perpetuates an upheaval to the contract at issue. As the dissent admits, the instant contract does not address the result of a dismissal or the rights or obligations of the parties thereafter. In fact, the dissent’s conclusion that the lender waived its right to accelerate when it failed to decelerate the loan following dismissal is in express contradiction to paragraph 12 of the mortgage and paragraph 6 of the

11. The Court having spoken, it is our obligation to follow that instruction. See Hoffman v. Jones, 280 So.2d 431, 434 (Fla.1973) (“To allow a District Court of Appeal to overrule controlling precedent of this Court would be to create chaos and uncertainty in the judicial forum, particularly at the trial level.”).

note, both of which specifically provide that any forbearance by the lender in exercising any right or remedy shall not be a waiver or preclude the exercise of that right or remedy.

- 2) Our analysis in no way perpetuates an upheaval to the statute of limitations. We do not suggest that the statute of limitations becomes a nullity. Rather, under Singleton, dismissal of a foreclosure action accelerating payment on one default does not bar a subsequent foreclosure action accelerating payment on a later default if the subsequent default occurred within five years of the subsequent action and acceleration.
- 3) Our analysis in no way perpetuates an upheaval to long-standing law on the effect of a dismissal. Rather, as previously stated, the law has been and continues to be that an action dismissed without a final adjudication on the merits leaves the parties as though the suit had never been filed, which is no more than exactly the conclusion we reach herein.
- 4) Our conclusion in no way results in a cataclysmic change in Florida law or the way in which lenders proceed against defaulting borrowers. Rather, as Fannie Mae, Freddie Mac, and the Florida Bar confirm, our analysis is in keeping with the understanding of members of the mortgage industry and those who represent both borrowers and lenders.
- 5) Our conclusion is not the result of any perceived “moral imperative” or quest for equity run amuck. Rather, it is the result of what the Supreme Court has said, what the contract provides, and what a dismissal does.

5. Conclusion.

In sum, after the 2010 dismissal without prejudice of the predecessor mortgagee’s foreclosure action, the parties returned to the status quo that existed prior to the filing of the dismissed complaint. As a matter of law, the bank’s 2012 foreclosure action, based on breaches that occurred after the breach that triggered the first complaint, was not barred by the statute of limitations. So says Singleton, as well as the terms of the parties’ mortgage and note. This resolution is in keeping with the long held practices of the Florida mortgage industry and moreover, best protects the interests of both mortgagees, who are not left with nullified mortgages, but also mortgagors, who by the terms of their mortgages, are permitted any time before judgment, to become current on their mortgage obligation.

Additionally, as should be apparent from the analysis outlined above, we likewise reverse that portion of the trial court’s order which declared that the mortgage was null and void, canceled same, and quieted title to the property in favor of the Association. The Legislature, by its express language, provided that the mortgage lien under section 95.281(1)(a) would terminate five years after a maturity date that can be determined from the face of a recorded document. The face of the recorded mortgage in the instant case reveals a maturity date of March 1, 2036. Therefore, and pursuant to section 95.281(1)(a), the mortgage lien remains valid until March 1, 2041, five years from the date of maturity as reflected in the recorded mortgage securing the obligation.

Accordingly, we reverse the order under review and remand this cause to the trial court for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.

SUAREZ, C.J., and ROTHENBERG, LAGOA, FERNANDEZ and LOGUE, JJ., concur.

SCALES, J., dissenting.

I respectfully dissent. In my view, contrary to the majority's conclusion, *Singleton v. Greymar Associates*¹² does not fundamentally alter, sub silentio, decades of Florida statute of limitations jurisprudence.

I. Overview

The statute of limitations for a foreclosure action is five years from when the last element constituting the cause of action occurs. § 95.11(2)(c), Fla. Stat. (2013).

When, as here, a mortgage secures a promissory note containing an optional acceleration clause, the statute of limitations begins to run from the date the lender exercises its acceleration right. Greene v. Bursey, 733 So.2d 1111, 1114–15 (Fla. 4th DCA 1999); Monte v. Tipton, 612 So.2d 714, 716 (Fla. 2d DCA 1993); see also Smith v. Fed. Deposit Ins. Corp., 61 F.3d 1552, 1561 (11th Cir.1995); Erwin v. Crandall, 129 Fla. 45, 175 So. 862, 863 (1937); Spencer v. EMC Mortg., 97 So.3d 257, 260 (Fla. 3d DCA 2012).

In this case, after the borrower Harry Beauvais defaulted by failing to make the installment payment due on September 1, 2006, the lender (plaintiff Deutsche Bank's predecessor-in-interest) exercised its option to accelerate all amounts due on January 22, 2007. Deutsche Bank's instant foreclosure lawsuit was filed on December 18, 2012, well beyond the five-year statute of limitations.

Relying on almost eighty years of well-established Florida jurisprudence, the trial court granted the defendant's motion for summary judgment on this issue, and a panel of this Court unanimously affirmed the trial court's determination in that regard. Deutsche Bank Trust Co. Americas

v. Beauvais, No. 3D14–575, 2014 WL 7156961 (Fla. 3d DCA Dec. 17, 2014).

Relying on a sweepingly broad interpretation of Singleton v. Greymar Associates—a Florida Supreme Court case in which the term “statute of limitations” is not even mentioned—the en banc majority opinion reverses the summary judgment and, in the process: (i) creates the legal fiction that a lender's acceleration does not affect the installment nature of the note; (ii) rewrites the acceleration and reinstatement provisions of the parties' note and mortgage; and (iii) effectively rewrites the statute of limitations for mortgage foreclosure actions in Florida.

Specifically, the majority opinion holds both (a) that a borrower's obligation to make, and a lender's obligation to accept, monthly installment payments on an installment note continue after the lender's acceleration; and (b) that irrespective of the nature of the dismissal, as a matter of law, any dismissal of a foreclosure lawsuit nullifies the lender's prior acceleration and reinstates the installment nature of the previously accelerated note, as if the lender had never exercised acceleration.

In my view, not only are these two holdings inconsistent with each other, but, when taken together, these holdings effectively rewrite Florida statute of limitations jurisprudence in foreclosure cases. Singleton can, and should, be read in harmony with—rather than to upend—significant Florida precedent regarding installment note acceleration, mortgage foreclosure, and limitations of actions.

II. Facts

A. The Promissory Note

On February 10, 2006, Beauvais borrowed $1,440,000 from plaintiff's predeces-

12. 882 So.2d 1004 (Fla.2004)

sor-in-interest, American Broker's Conduit. Beauvais's loan was memorialized with a promissory note, requiring Beauvais to repay the loan by making monthly installment payments over thirty years.

The installment nature of the note (which obligates the borrower to repay the loan in prescribed monthly installments, and which obligates the lender to accept such payments) is plainly, precisely, and expressly defined in paragraphs 3(A) and (B) of the note:

I will make a payment every month

I will make my monthly payment on the 1st day of each month beginning on April 1, 2006. I will make these payments every month until I have paid all of the Principal and interest and any other charges described below that I may owe under this Note. Each monthly payment will be applied as of its scheduled due date, and if the payment includes both principal and interest it will be applied to interest before Principal I will make my monthly payments at [address of lender] My monthly payment will be in the amount of U.S. $10,050.00 for the first 120 months of this Note, and thereafter will be in the amount of U.S. $12,382.96. The Note Holder will notify me prior to the date of change in monthly payment.

The note's maturity date is expressly defined as March 1, 2036. Specifically, the note reads as follows: "If, on March 1, 2036, I still owe amounts under this Note, I will pay those amounts in full on that date, which is called the 'Maturity Date.'"

In its paragraph 6(C), the note contains the following default/acceleration provision that, upon the borrower's default, gives the lender an option to accelerate all amounts due under the note, thereby advancing the note's maturity date:

If I am in default, the Note Holder may send me a written notice telling me that if I do not pay the overdue amount by a certain date, the Note Holder may require me to pay immediately the full amount of Principal which has not been paid and all the interest that I owe on that amount. That date must be at least 30 days after the date on which the notice is mailed to me or delivered by other means.

Recognizing that the note is secured by a uniform mortgage (that is, a security instrument), paragraph 10 of the note contains the following language related to the default/acceleration provisions in the accompanying mortgage:

That Security Instrument describes how and under what conditions I may be required to make immediate payment in full of all amounts I owe under this Note. Some of those conditions are described as follows:

If Lender exercises this option, Lender shall give Borrower notice of acceleration. The notice shall provide a period of not less than 30 days from the date the notice is given . . . within which Borrower must pay all sums secured by this Security Instrument. If Borrower fails to pay these sums prior to the expiration of this period, Lender may invoke any remedies permitted by this Security Instrument without further notice or demand on Borrower.

B. The Mortgage

Beauvais's note was secured by a mortgage, encumbering a unit in the Chatham at Aqua condominiums in Miami Beach.

Consistent with the above-cited default language in the note, paragraph 22 of Beauvais's mortgage contains the following acceleration/remedy provision:

Acceleration; Remedies. Lender shall give notice to Borrower prior to acceleration following Borrower's breach of any covenant or agreement in this Security Instrument. . . . The notice shall specify: (a) the default; (b) the action required to cure the default; (c) a date, not less than 30 days from the date the notice is given to Borrower, by which the default must be cured; and (d) that failure to cure the default on or before the date specified in the notice may result in acceleration of the sums secured by this Security Instrument, foreclosure by judicial proceeding and sale of the Property. The notice shall further inform Borrower of the right to reinstate after acceleration and the right to assert in the foreclosure proceeding the non-existence of a default or any other defense of Borrower to acceleration and foreclosure. If the default is not cured on or before the date specified in the notice, Lender at its option may require immediate payment in full of all sums secured by this Security Instrument without further demand and may foreclose this Security Instrument by judicial proceeding.

In paragraph 19 of the Beauvais mortgage, the parties painstakingly and precisely detail the conditions precedent in order for the installment nature of the note to be reinstated after the lender has exercised its option to accelerate. Paragraph 19 reads as follows:

Borrower's Right to Reinstate After Acceleration. If Borrower meets certain conditions, Borrower shall have the right to have enforcement of this Security Instrument discontinued at any time prior to the earliest of: (a) five days before sale of the Property pursuant to any power of sale contained in this Security Instrument; (b) such other period as Applicable Law might specify for the termination of Borrower's right to reinstate; or (c) entry of judgment enforcing this Security Instrument. Those conditions are that Borrower: (a) pays Lender all sums which then would be due under this Security Instrument and the Note as if no acceleration had occurred; (b) cures any default of any other covenants or agreements; (c) pays all expenses incurred in enforcing this Security Instrument, including, but not limited to, reasonable attorneys' fees, property inspection and valuation fees, and other fees incurred for the purpose of protecting Lender's interest in the Property and rights under this Security Instrument; and (d) takes such action as Lender may reasonably require to assure that Lender's interest in the Property and rights under this Security Instrument, and Borrower's obligation to pay the sums secured by this Security Instrument, shall continue unchanged. Lender may require that Borrower pay such reinstatement sums and expenses in one or more of the following forms, as selected by Lender: (a) cash; (b) money order; (c) certified check, bank check, treasurer's check or cashier's check, provided any such check is drawn upon an institution whose deposits are insured by a federal agency, instrumentality or entity; or (d) Electronic Funds Transfer. Upon reinstatement by Borrower, this Security Instrument and obligations secured thereby shall remain fully effective as if no acceleration had occurred. However, this right to reinstate shall not apply in the case of acceleration under Section 18.

In sum, the parties' note and mortgage provide a contractual mechanism both: (i) for Beauvais to prevent the lender from exercising its right to acceleration after a default and the lender's notice thereof; and (ii) for Beauvais to reinstate the installment nature of the note after the lender has exercised its right to acceleration.

Neither the note nor the mortgage contain any provision reinstating the installment nature of the note if, after acceleration, a lender foreclosure action is dismissed.

C. The First Lawsuit and its Disposition

After Beauvais failed to make the September 2006 installment payment due on his promissory note, American Home Mortgage, Inc. (“AHMS”), the successor to Beauvais’s initial lender, exercised its contractual right to accelerate the total amount due on the note.¹³

In its January 22, 2007 complaint, AHMS alleged that Beauvais then owed AHMS the sum of $1,439,976.80 in principal, plus interest accrued from August 1, 2006. The complaint identifies the default date as September 1, 2006, and names as defendants both Beauvais and the Chat-ham at Aqua Condominium Association.¹⁴

Almost four years after AHMS’s foreclosure lawsuit was filed, the trial court set the matter for a December 6, 2010 case management conference. The trial court’s order setting the case management conference required the attendance of all parties at the conference. AHMS failed to appear at the conference. As a result, the trial court dismissed the case without prejudice. The adjudicative portion of the trial court’s form order, dated December 6, 2010, reads, in its entirety, as follows: “The Plaintiff failed to appear without explanation. Therefore, this case is dismissed without prejudice.”

Nothing in the trial court’s order reinstates the installment nature of the loan or adjudicates AHMS’s acceleration as ineffective in any regard.

Nothing in the record indicates that, upon entry of the trial court’s December 6, 2010 dismissal order, either AHMS or Beauvais treated this order as: (i) reinstating the installment nature of the loan, (ii) nullifying AHMS’s prior acceleration, or (iii) readjusting the note’s maturity date from January 22, 2007 (the advanced maturity date after acceleration), to March 1, 2036 (the pre-acceleration maturity date expressed in the note). Moreover, it is undisputed that Beauvais never exercised, nor sought to exercise, the “reinstatement after acceleration” provision of paragraph 19 of the mortgage.

D. The Instant Lawsuit and its Disposition

On November 2, 2012, Homeward Residential, Inc., a loan servicer working on behalf of AHMS’s successor, Deutsche Bank, sent Beauvais a pre-acceleration default notice.

This notice stated that Beauvais defaulted on the note by failing to make the installment payment due on October 1,

¹³ The lender’s acceleration is memorialized in its January 22, 2007 foreclosure lawsuit. Paragraph 4 of AHMS’s complaint reads as follows: “Defendant, HARRY BEAUVAIS, failed to pay the payment due on the Note on September 1, 2006, and Plaintiff elected to accelerate payment of the balance.” Similarly, paragraph 14 of the complaint reads as follows: “Plaintiff declares the full amount payable under the Note and Mortgage to be due.”

The record is unclear as to whether AHMS exercised its right to accelerate prior to the filing of its complaint. Even if AHMS had accelerated Beauvais’s note earlier, such a fact would have no relevance as to whether the statute of limitations had run by the time Deutsche Bank filed the instant action, more than five years after the first action was filed.

¹⁴ Subsequent to the recordation of the mortgage, Beauvais’s master condominium association placed an inferior lien on Beauvais’s condominium unit for unpaid condominium assessments. AHMS sought to foreclose this inferior lien.

2006 (as opposed to the September 1, 2006 default date alleged in AHMS's acceleration), and that Beauvais owed Deutsche Bank the sum of $796,161.19, which the letter describes as "the sum of payments that have come due on or after the date of default 10/01/2006, any late charges, periodic adjustments to the payment amount (if applicable) and expenses of collection."

This notice also purports to give Beauvais through December 7, 2012 (thirty-five days from the date of the notice), to make the $796,161.19 payment in order to avoid a second acceleration and foreclosure lawsuit.

Nothing in this November 2, 2012 letter references AHMS's January 22, 2007 acceleration, any nullification of that acceleration, any reinstatement of the installment nature of the loan, or why Homeward Residential waited more than six years after the alleged October 1, 2006 default to send this notice.

On December 18, 2012, Deutsche Bank filed the instant verified complaint for foreclosure. In its complaint, Deutsche Bank purports to exercise its option to accelerate a second time, alleging an October 1, 2006 default date (as opposed to the September 1, 2006 default date identified in the first complaint). The verified complaint alleges an accelerated amount then owed to plaintiff of $1,439,976.80 (the exact same accelerated amount alleged in AHMS's initial foreclosure complaint, filed almost six years earlier).

Deutsche Bank's complaint contains no allegations suggesting that AHMS's initial acceleration was, in any way, ineffective. In fact, Deutsche Bank's complaint contains no allegations whatsoever regarding the January 2007 acceleration, any reinstatement of the installment nature of note occurring after that January 2007 acceleration, or why the complaint is being filed more than six years beyond the date of the alleged October 1, 2006 default.

By the time Deutsche Bank filed its December 18, 2012 complaint, Beauvais's master condominium association, Aqua Master Association, Inc. ("Aqua"), had already foreclosed its previously recorded assessment lien, and had become the title owner of the condominium unit. Aqua filed an answer to Deutsche Bank's complaint, asserting, as its sole affirmative defense, that the five-year statute of limitations, prescribed in section 95.11(2)(c) of the Florida Statutes, barred Deutsche Bank's cause of action.

Specifically, Aqua asserted that more than five years had elapsed between AHMS's 2007 acceleration of the amounts due under Beauvais's note and the filing of Deutsche Bank's December 2012 purported re-acceleration and foreclosure lawsuit.

In December of 2013, Aqua filed a motion for summary judgment, seeking a declaration that the note and mortgage were unenforceable due to the expiration of the statute of limitations. The trial court granted Aqua's summary judgment motion and entered final summary judgment for Aqua. This appeal followed.

This Court's panel opinion affirmed that portion of the trial court's summary judgment declaring that the expiration of the statute of limitations barred the plaintiff's foreclosure action, but reversed the trial court's declaration cancelling the mortgage. Deutsche Bank Trust Co. Americas v. Beauvais, No. 3D14-575, 2014 WL 7156961 (Fla. 3d DCA Dec. 17, 2014). This Court granted en banc review, and the en banc majority opinion reverses the trial court's summary judgment. My dissent is explained below.

III. Analysis

A. Synopsis of Majority Opinion's Holding and My Dissent

The majority opinion concludes that the five-year statute of limitations for foreclosure actions does not bar Deutsche Bank's December 20, 2012 lawsuit, "[b]ecause the installment nature of the loan at issue did not terminate following acceleration and foreclosure and because dismissal of the foreclosure action returned the parties to the status quo existing before acceleration. . . ." See majority opinion at 947.

The majority opines that Singleton—which is a res judicata case and not a statute of limitations case—stands for the proposition that a lender's exercising its option to accelerate does not affect the installment nature of a loan. In other words, in the majority's view, Singleton necessarily holds that, subsequent to a lender's acceleration, a borrower's monthly installment payments continue to become due monthly, and a borrower's failure to make those post-acceleration monthly payments constitute subsequent defaults. See majority opinion at 6, 12.

In a separate part of its opinion, the majority also (and, in my view, inconsistently) holds that, under Singleton, any dismissal of a prior foreclosure action automatically, and as a matter of law, places the parties into their pre-acceleration positions (i.e., the status quo) and allows the lender to treat the note as if the lender had never accelerated the note. See majority opinion at 13, 19, 30.¹⁵

In my view, despite the majority's abundant number of citations to Singleton v. Greymar Associates, the majority's conclusions simply are not supported, much less required, by Singleton. The majority's conclusions are contrary to the express terms of the parties' note and mortgage, as well as the considerable body of Florida law that has governed this State's mortgage transactions for decades.

¹⁵ The majority's two principal conclusions are not only erroneous, they are also irreconcilable with each other. If acceleration does not terminate the installment nature of the Specifically, the majority's principal conclusions are untenable because they: (i) contradict the express language of Singleton that only an adjudication that denies acceleration and foreclosure reinstates the loan (Singleton, 882 So.2d at 1007); (ii) effectively rewrite the parties' contract documents, both by adding a new reinstatement provision and by redefining acceleration; (iii) rewrite Florida dismissal law, visiting upon a form dismissal order unprecedented adjudicatory effect; (iv) effectively rewrite the statute of limitations defense in foreclosure cases; and (v) conflate Florida's statute of limitations with Florida's statute of repose in foreclosure cases.

B. Singleton v. Greymar Associates

(i) Summary of Singleton

In Singleton, the lender brought its first foreclosure action against the borrower based on a September 1, 1999 default. Singleton, 882 So.2d at 1005. The trial court dismissed that first foreclosure action, with prejudice, as a sanction for the failure of the lender to appear at a case management conference. Id.

The lender brought its second foreclosure action based on an April 1, 2000 default. The trial court rejected the borrower's res judicata defense (that the adjudication of the first foreclosure lawsuit forever barred the lender from suing on the note and mortgage), and entered summary judgment for the lender. Id.

The borrower appealed, arguing that the trial court's dismissal, with prejudice, of the lender's first case constituted res judicata of any subsequent foreclosure case, loan, then dismissal is irrelevant because acceleration has not altered the parties' status quo in the first place.

and forever precluded the lender from suing the borrower on the note and mortgage.

On appeal, the Fourth District Court of Appeal affirmed the trial court's summary judgment, Singleton v. Greymar Assocs., 840 So.2d 356 (Fla. 4th DCA 2003), and the Florida Supreme Court upheld the district court's affirmance.^{16 17} The Supreme Court determined that res judicata does not necessarily bar a subsequent action based on a subsequent default. Singleton, 882 So.2d at 1005.

The Supreme Court in Singleton held that the trial court's adjudication of the first action "merely bars a second action relitigating the same alleged default." Id. at 1007. The Court held: "While it is true that a foreclosure action and an acceleration of the balance due based upon the same default may bar a subsequent action on that default, an acceleration and foreclosure predicated upon subsequent and different defaults present a separate and distinct issue." Id.

Critical to understanding Singleton's precedential value to the instant case—and how the majority opinion misinterprets same—is the following language from Singleton whereby the Court provides an illustration of when res judicata would not bar a second foreclosure case based on a subsequent default:

For example, a mortgagor may prevail in a foreclosure action by demonstrating that she was not in default on the payments alleged to be in default, or that the mortgagee had waived reliance on the defaults. In those instances, the mortgagor and mortgagee are simply placed back in the same contractual relationship with the same continuing obligations. Hence, an adjudication denying acceleration and foreclosure under those circumstances should not bar a subsequent action a year later if the mortgagor ignores her obligations on the mortgage and a valid default can be proven.

Id. (emphasis added)¹⁸

In other words, if the lender is unsuccessful in its foreclosure action—resulting in an adjudication denying acceleration and foreclosure—the parties are placed back into their same contractual relationship (that is, the installment nature of the loan is reinstated) and the doctrine of res judicata will not preclude a lender lawsuit based on a subsequent borrower non-payment default.¹⁹

16. The statute of limitations defense was not discussed in either the district court's or the Supreme Court's Singleton opinion. In fact, based on the dates of the opinions, it is apparent that, in Singleton, both the first and the second lawsuits were brought well within five years of the September 1, 1999 default.

17. The Florida Supreme Court's jurisdiction arose from a conflict between the Fourth District Court of Appeal's decision in Singleton and a Second District Court of Appeal decision, Stadler v. Cherry Hill Developers, 150 So.2d 468 (Fla. 2d DCA 1963). Stadler is also not a statute of limitations case. In fact, in Stadler the court concluded that res judicata barred the mortgagee's second lawsuit, filed a mere thirteen months after the filing of the first lawsuit which was dismissed with prejudice by the trial court.

18. In the Court's illustration, the lender's subsequent lawsuit is filed "a year later." Surely, had the Singleton Court intended to upend statute of limitations foreclosure law—as does the majority's interpretation of Singleton—the Court could have employed a hypothetical implicating the five-year statute of limitations.

19. This holding makes perfect sense in the context of res judicata law. If, for example, a lender sues a borrower, accelerates, and alleges that a particular payment was not paid, and the borrower is able to establish that the payment was made, the res judicata effect of that adjudication for the borrower would bar the lender from again suing on that alleged

(ii) The majority's construction of Singleton impermissibly rewrites the parties' contracts

The majority reads Singleton for the proposition that, despite a lender's acceleration, a borrower's obligation to pay—and a lender's obligation to accept—monthly post-acceleration installment payments continues; that is, there can be multiple, post-acceleration non-payment defaults, and multiple, post-acceleration accelerations, on the same note.

Consequently, under the majority's holding, when a borrower fails to make one of these post-acceleration monthly installment payments, a subsequent default has occurred, entitling the lender to accelerate again based on this subsequent default.

Yet, nowhere does Singleton say this; and, most certainly, nowhere do the parties' contract documents say this.

(a) Installment nature of loan terminates upon lender acceleration

The plain language of the Beauvais promissory note and mortgage establishes that, once the borrower defaults on a monthly payment and the lender accelerates, the borrower is obligated to pay immediately all sums due under the note.

The loan's installment nature is clearly and unequivocally spelled out in paragraph 3 of Beauvais's note (captioned "PAYMENTS"), requiring Beauvais to make monthly payments to retire his $1,440,000 indebtedness.

Paragraph 6 of the note (captioned, "BORROWER'S FAILURE TO PAY AS REQUIRED") expressly provides that if Beauvais defaults by failing to pay a monthly installment payment, and does not pay the "overdue amount by a certain date," then "the Note Holder may require me to pay immediately the full amount of Principal which has not been paid and all the interest that I owe on that amount." (emphasis added)

Paragraph 22 of the mortgage securing the note (captioned, "Acceleration; Remedies.") contains virtually identical acceleration language: "If the default is not cured on or before the date specified in the notice, Lender at its option may require immediate payment in full of all sums secured by this Security Instrument without further demand and may foreclose this Security Instrument by judicial proceeding." (emphasis added)

Similarly, Paragraph 10 of the note (captioned "UNIFORM SECURED NOTE"), describing the acceleration provisions of the mortgage securing the note (the Security Instrument) reads, in relevant part, as follows: "That Security Instrument describes how and under what conditions I may be required to make immediate payment in full of all amounts I owe under this Note." (emphasis added) missed payment. Because that adjudication denied the lender's acceleration and foreclosure (and placed the parties back into their contractual relationship), the res judicata doctrine would not preclude the lender from suing the borrower for a later missed payment (a subsequent and separate default).

Alternately, if, for example, the borrower successfully defends a foreclosure action asserting he never signed the note or mortgage, or never received the loan proceeds (that is, the parties never had a contractual relationship), the res judicata effect of that adjudication—which obviously would not place the parties back into any contractual relationship—would likely forever preclude the lender from again suing that borrower on that note.

While, in both of these examples, the mortgage prevailed in the litigation, the resulting adjudications' effect on the parties' relationship is vastly different. By simply concluding that all dismissals reinstate the installment nature of the loan, the majority significantly distorts Singleton and discounts the dramatic variances that can result from different dismissal orders.

As these documents clearly and unequivocally provide, once the lender exercises its option to require the borrower to pay immediately all amounts due under the note, the installment nature of the note terminates.

This construction of the parties' contract documents is expressly reinforced in the mortgage's reinstatement provision (paragraph 19 of the mortgage captioned, "Borrower's Right to Reinstate After Acceleration."). This post-acceleration provision requires the lender to reinstate the installment nature of the note—"as if no acceleration had occurred"—upon the defaulting borrower paying to the lender specifically defined "reinstatement sums and expenses," so long as such payment occurs prior to the entry of any foreclosure judgment.²⁰

Obviously, this reinstatement provision would be unnecessary and meaningless if, as the majority concludes, Singleton requires the installment nature of the note to continue after a lender accelerates. If, under Singleton, monthly installment payments continue to become due after acceleration, what is being "reinstated?"

20. The mortgage's reinstatement provision requires a borrower to exercise his post-acceleration reinstatement right prior to the entry of a foreclosure judgment. To the extent that the majority opinion somehow views acceleration as occurring only upon entry of a foreclosure judgment for the lender, such an interpretation would render this paragraph's timing provisions meaningless. Indeed, if acceleration occurs only upon judgment, and the borrower must exercise his reinstatement right after acceleration, but before entry of the judgment, the borrower's reinstatement right would be illusory.

21. The majority's conclusion is also irreconcilable with decades of case law holding that a loan acceleration—whether automatic or exercised at the option of the lender—causes the entire indebtedness immediately to become due. Baader v. Walker, 153 So.2d 51, 54 (Fla. 2d DCA 1963) (holding that lender's

Singleton should not be read in such a way as to render this reinstatement provision meaningless. See Bethany Trace Owners' Ass'n, Inc. v. Whispering Lakes I, LLC, 155 So.3d 1188, 1191 (Fla. 2d DCA 2014) ("When interpreting contractual provisions, courts 'will not interpret a contract in such a way as to render provisions meaningless when there is a reasonable interpretation that does not do so.'") (citation omitted).

Plainly, per the parties' contract documents, after acceleration the borrower no longer enjoys the contractual right to repay the loan in monthly installments because the lender has exercised its contractual right to require the borrower immediately to repay the entire loan.

(b) Majority creates post-acceleration fiction and "new" reinstatement provision

The majority's court-imposed fiction that, after acceleration, subsequent monthly installment payments somehow continue to become due is not only contrary to the parties' contract documents, it is simply fanciful.²¹ A borrower's monthly install-agent authorized to collect full amount of indebtedness after borrower's default on installment payment because note contained automatic acceleration provision); Cook v. Merrifield, 335 So.2d 297 (Fla. 1st DCA 1976) (holding that in the absence of acceleration option, entire indebtedness became due upon borrower default as a product of automatic acceleration provision); cf. Home Credit Co. v. E.B. Brown, 148 So.2d 257, 260 (Fla.1962) (finding note to be usurious because lender had option to accelerate full amount of note plus interest; computation under usury law based on lender's contractual right to accelerate even if lender chooses not to exercise full acceleration right). Nothing in this line of cases remotely suggests that, after acceleration, monthly installment payments continue to become due giving rise to successive accelerations. To tell a borrower that he owes everything immediately, and also owes next

ment payment obligations and a lender's acceleration after default do not, and cannot, coexist.²²

The majority opinion rewrites the parties' note and mortgage to create a reinstatement provision—i.e., reinstating the installment nature of the note, as if acceleration never occurred, upon any dismissal of any lawsuit—that the parties did not include when drafting their documents. Singleton does not say this; the parties' contract documents certainly do not say this; and Florida law is repugnant to the majority's insertion of a provision into the parties' private contract that the parties themselves most assuredly omitted.²³

(iii) The majority's construction of Singleton jettisons Singleton's express presupposition that an adjudication denying acceleration is required for any "subsequent and separate alleged default" to exist

In order for an adjudication to place the parties "back in the same contractual relationship with the same continuing obligations," so that subsequent non-payment defaults would exist, Singleton insists upon month's installment payment, makes little sense.

22. Oddly, the majority opinion cites to the non-waiver provisions of the note (paragraph 6) and mortgage (paragraph 12) as somehow supporting the notion that the installment nature of the note survives acceleration. See majority opinion at 15–17. These provisions say just the opposite: if the mortgagee accepts payments after acceleration, such acceptance shall not constitute a waiver of the mortgagee's rights.

The typical lender's practice is to refuse to accept a borrower's monthly installment payments after the lender has exercised acceleration. If, as the majority concludes, acceleration does not transform the installment nature

"an adjudication denying acceleration and foreclosure."²⁴

Yet, according to the majority opinion, after any dismissal of a foreclosure action, the parties are returned to their pre-acceleration positions. See majority opinion at 16. Then, unburdened by Florida's statute of limitations, the lender is free to: (i) treat its prior acceleration as a nullity, (ii) pick another month as the "new" default date,²⁵ and (iii) bring a new foreclosure action at any time seeking the identical sums sought in the dismissed lawsuit.

Again though, Singleton does not say this. Explicit in Singleton is that, in order to reinstate the parties' previous contractual relationship so that subsequent defaults may occur, the trial court's adjudication of the first foreclosure action must deny the lender's acceleration. Singleton, 882 So.2d at 1007. Otherwise, without such an adjudication denying acceleration, the lender's affirmative, contractually prescribed acceleration remains unaffected.

The majority's overbroad construction of Singleton not only undermines this crucial aspect of Singleton, but also, as more particularly described in section III.C.(i), below, visits unprecedented adjudicatory effect upon a form dismissal order.

of the note and advance the note's maturity date to the date of acceleration, not only would this non-waiver provision be entirely unnecessary, but a lender's refusal to accept post-acceleration installment payments could constitute a lender breach.

23. Brooks v. Green, 993 So.2d 58, 61 (Fla. 1st DCA 2008) (holding that a court is without authority to rewrite a clear and unambiguous contract between parties).

24. Singleton, 882 So.2d at 1007.

25. According to the majority opinion, the "new" default date alleged in the second lawsuit must be within five years of the filing of the second lawsuit.

C. The Majority Opinion Subverts Dismissal Law and Statute of Limitations Jurisprudence in Foreclosure Cases

As I describe in the three subsections below, the majority's interpretation of Singleton fundamentally alters, in a foreclosure setting, both Florida dismissal law and statute of limitations jurisprudence in profound, and certainly unintended, ways.

(i) The majority opinion visits upon a form dismissal order an array of inferred adjudications

The trial court's December 6, 2010 case management conference dismissal order—a form order—states: “The Plaintiff failed to appear without explanation. Therefore, this case is dismissed without prejudice.”

According to the majority, this simple form dismissal order, by operation of law, and without a scintilla of record support evidencing any such intention by the trial court: (i) nullified the lender's January 22, 2007 acceleration;²⁶ (ii) reinstated the installment nature of the loan; (iii) placed the parties back into their pre-acceleration positions, allowing Beauvais to make, and requiring Deutsche Bank to accept, monthly installment payments; and (iv) reset the note's maturity date to March 1, 2036.

Yet the trial court's form dismissal order adjudicated nothing. It simply dismissed the plaintiff's action, requiring the plaintiff to file a new lawsuit if the plaintiff wished to proceed with the action.

Indeed, the dismissal was without prejudice so it would not have had res judicata effect even if Deutsche Bank's second foreclosure lawsuit were to have alleged the exact same breach. Markow v. Am. Bay Colony, Inc., 478 So.2d 413 (Fla. 3d DCA 1986). It certainly was not an “adjudication denying acceleration and foreclosure” so as to place the parties back into their prior contractual provisions, as expressly contemplated by Singleton.

To illustrate the significant problem with the majority's conclusion in this regard, assume the following scenario: after the trial court announces the dismissal of the lender's foreclosure case for failure to attend the trial, the borrower's counsel requests the trial court to enter an ex parte order nullifying the lender's prior acceleration and reinstating the installment nature of the borrower's loan.

The trial court reviews the mortgage's detailed reinstatement provision (paragraph 19), and asks the borrower's counsel whether the borrower has cured all defaults and paid the lender all expenses, as is expressly required for a borrower to reinstate a loan. The borrower's counsel responds that the borrower has paid nothing to the lender in years and still owes tens, if not hundreds, of thousands of dollars to the lender.

Armed with this information, the trial court then grants the borrower's motion, nullifies acceleration and reinstates the installment nature of the loan. Clearly, no trial judge would ever enter such an order and, in the unlikely event such an order were entered, presumably it would be dead on arrival in any appellate court.

Yet the majority opinion's conclusion that the trial court's form dismissal order nullified the prior acceleration and reinstated Beauvais's loan does precisely what no trial judge would ever do. In my view, this conclusion turns procedural fairness

26. The majority's implicit, entirely court-created conclusion that the trial court's form dismissal order affects—much less nullifies—AHMS's acceleration is nothing short of remarkable. At no time in the case below, or on appeal, has any party challenged the effectiveness of AHMS's January 22, 2007 acceleration of Beauvais's note.

on its head by giving the sanctioned party (the lender) the after-the-fact benefit of reinstatement: a remedy that the prevailing party (the borrower) never would receive.

In my view, the majority traverses a dangerously slippery slope. We should be reluctant to hold that a trial court's form dismissal order visits upon the borrower and lender a host of critical, yet unarticulated, adjudications that fundamentally change the parties' contractual relationship and are entirely unsupported by the existing law or by the record below.

(ii) The majority opinion effectively rewrites the statute of limitations in foreclosure cases

The majority opinion states: "under Singleton, dismissal of a foreclosure action accelerating payment on one default does not bar a subsequent foreclosure action accelerating payment on a later default if the subsequent default occurred within five years of the subsequent action and acceleration." See majority opinion at 29 (paragraph 2). The majority supports this notion with citation to several, recent cases. See majority opinion at 12–13.

These cases implicitly hold what no Florida court, and certainly not the Singleton court, has ever explicitly held before: that payment default and not acceleration constitute the last element of a foreclosure cause of action. Despite the majority's characterization otherwise, this holding marks an upheaval of well-established Florida law.

In a foreclosure case such as this one, where the lender has exercised its contractual right to accelerate, the last element of the cause of action—triggering the running of the five-year statute of limitations—is the lender's affirmative act of acceleration, not the borrower's missed payment. Monte v. Tipton, 612 So.2d at 716 (declaring that the statute of limitations begins to run upon notice of acceleration, while noting that the initial payment default occurred more than fifteen years prior to the notice of acceleration); see also Penagos v. Capital Bank, 766 So.2d 1089 (Fla. 3d DCA 2000).²⁷

Recognizing that the lender's notice of acceleration, and not the borrower's payment default, triggers the statute of limitations, the note and mortgage in this case expressly reflect that the lender's forbearance in exercising its right to accelerate does not constitute a waiver of its right to accelerate later.²⁸ Requiring lender acceleration and the filing of the lender's foreclosure action to occur within five years of a default eviscerates these express contract provisions.²⁹

27. Presumably, if the lender's action sought only recoupment of missed payments, rather than the accelerated amount of the loan, then the borrower's default would constitute the last element of the cause of action. In this case, however, as a practical matter, lenders exercise their right to accelerate immediately prior to, or contemporaneously with, their foreclosure action. In such a case, the date of the borrower's default is irrelevant to the statute of limitations inquiry.

28. Paragraph 6(D) of the note reads, in its entirety, as follows: "No Waiver By Note Holder ... Even if, at a time when I am in default, the Note Holder does not require me to pay immediately in full as described above, the Note Holder will still have the right to do so if I am in default at a later time." Similarly, paragraph 12 of the mortgage reads, in relevant part, as follows: "Any forbearance by Lender in exercising any right or remedy ... shall not be a waiver of or preclude the exercise of any right or remedy."

29. It appears that the majority might have confused a lender's forbearance of a contractual right with a lender's exercise of a contractual right. See majority opinion at 29 (paragraph 1). In this case, the lender did not forbear (or waive) the exercise of its contractual right to accelerate; the lender affir-

Finally, the majority states: “We ... conclude that dismissal of a foreclosure action accelerating payment on one default does not bar a subsequent foreclosure action on a later default if the subsequent default occurred within five years of the subsequent action.” See majority opinion at 12. Yet the majority fails to explain how its conclusion would require reversal in this case. In this case, the lender’s subsequent action was brought on December 18, 2012, which alleged that the subsequent default had occurred on October 1, 2006. Even assuming that both the majority’s rewrite of the statute of limitations and the parties’ contract correctly express the state of the law (which, in my view, it does not), plainly Deutsche Bank’s subsequent action was not brought within five years of the alleged subsequent default.

(iii) The majority opinion conflates the statute of repose with the statute of limitations

The practical effect of the majority’s opinion is to conflate the statute of repose for foreclosure actions (section 95.281 of the Florida Statutes) with the statute of limitations for foreclosure actions.³⁰

Under the majority’s opinion, the only time a statute of limitations defense conceivably could be effective is when a lender tries to bring a foreclosure action more than five years after the maturity date expressed on the face of the note and mortgage. Yet, this is precisely what the legislature has already done by enacting section 95.281(1)(a), the statute of repose for foreclosure actions.

This provision reads, in relevant part, as follows: “(1) The lien of a mortgage ... shall terminate ... 5 years after the date of maturity.” § 95.281(1)(a), Fla. Stat. (2013).

If it had been the intent of the legislature to render acceleration meaningless, so that the statute of limitations and the statute of repose for foreclosure actions were identical, the statute of repose would have been unnecessary. In other words, by allowing the lender’s acceleration and potential re-accelerations to keep delaying the operation of the statute of limitations, the majority establishes the note’s maturity date as the only date that can trigger application of the five-year statute of limitations. The statute of limitations and the statute of repose, absurdly, would shake hands on March 1, 2041.

IV. Singleton Distinguished and Harmonized

A. Singleton’s Equitable Considerations Are Irrelevant to this Court’s Statute of Limitations Inquiry

Because Singleton is a res judicata case and not a statute of limitations case, equitable principles expressly underpin Single- matively exercised its contractual right to accelerate on January 22, 2007.

30. A cause of action accrues, and the statute of limitations begins to run, when the last element of the cause of action occurs. § 95.031(1), Fla. Stat. (2014). A statute of repose operates to set a time limit on a cause of action when the last element of the cause of action occurs beyond the repose statute’s outside date. Am. Bankers Life Assurance Co. of Fla. v. 2275 West Corp., 905 So.2d 189 (Fla. 3d DCA 2005). In a foreclosure action, the statute of limitations precludes an action to collect the debt if the action is brought more than five years from lender acceleration; while the statute of repose “establishes an ultimate date when the lien of the mortgage terminates and is no longer enforceable.” Houck Corp. v. New River, Ltd., Pasco, 900 So.2d 601 (Fla. 2d DCA 2005). In this case, because the maturity date is evident from the face of the mortgage (March 1, 2036), section 95.281(1)(a) sets this “ultimate” date as March 1, 2041.

ton's holding. Id. at 1007–08.³¹ In fact, it was upon this very foundation that the Florida Supreme Court rested its decision in Singleton:

We must also remember that foreclosure is an equitable remedy and there may be some tension between a court's authority to adjudicate the equities and the legal doctrine of res judicata. The ends of justice require that the doctrine of res judicata not be applied so strictly so as to prevent mortgagees from being able to challenge multiple defaults on a mortgage. See deCancino v. E. Airlines, Inc., 283 So.2d 97, 98 (Fla.1973) (“[T]he doctrine [of res judicata] will not be invoked where it will work an injustice. . .”).

Singleton, 882 So.2d at 1008 (alteration in original).

By contrast, statutes of limitations are “fixed limitations on actions . . . predicated on public policy and are a product of modern legislative, rather than judicial processes.” Major League Baseball v. Morisani, 790 So.2d 1071, 1074 (Fla.2001).

Equitable considerations, while relevant to the Supreme Court's res judicata analysis in Singleton, are entirely irrelevant to cases (such as this) involving the application of a statute of limitations.³² Proper application of a statute of limitations may by its very nature mean a plaintiff is barred from maintaining a suit that is otherwise meritorious. Nevertheless, the statute of limitations is the province of the legislative branch, and this Court's equitable powers (which may be exercised appropriately in the res judicata context) have no place in a statute of limitations analysis. As the Florida Supreme Court held more than eighty years ago:

Statutes should, when reasonably possible, be so construed as not to conflict with the Constitution or with long and well settled legal principles, but the language of this statute, considering it as a whole, cannot be given its apparent meaning and purpose without upsetting to some extent the principle of res judicata, and thus creating a somewhat anomalous situation, which will in some cases require a circuit judge to grant to a party a judgment at law on a cause of action, which, sitting as chancellor in a court of equity, he had already held such party was not, in equity and good conscience, entitled to enforce.

Cragin v. Ocean & Lake Realty Co., 101 Fla. 1324, 133 So. 569, 573–74 (1931); see also Dobbs v. Sea Isle Hotel, 56 So.2d 341, 342 (Fla.1952) (holding that courts must presume that the legislature, in establishing a statute of limitations, “thoroughly considered and purposely preempted the field of exceptions to, and possible reasons for tolling, the statute. We cannot write

31. Aeacus Real Estate Ltd. P'ship v. 5th Ave. Real Estate Dev., Inc., 948 So.2d 834, 836 (Fla. 4th DCA 2007) (observing that res judicata is an equitable doctrine). Res judicata is a judicially-created principle, rooted in equity, and “will not be invoked where it would defeat the ends of justice.” State v. McBride, 848 So.2d 287, 291 (Fla.2003).

32. In fact, section 95.051(1)(f) of the Florida Statutes expressly provides that only “[t]he payment of any part of the principal or interest of any obligation or liability founded on a written instrument” tolls the five-year statute of limitations. Section 95.051(2) limits statute of limitations tolling to the reasons specified in section 95.051(1)(a)-(i). HCA Health Servs. of Fla., Inc. v. Hillman, 906 So.2d 1094, 1100–01 (Fla. 2d DCA 2004) (providing that the legislature's enactment of section 95.051 establishes exclusive list of conditions that can toll a statute of limitations, effectively eliminating the concept of “equitable tolling”). The majority's sweeping interpretation of Singleton—holding that a borrower's installment payments continue after acceleration—disregards section 95.051(1)(f) altogether.

into the law any other exception, nor can we create by judicial fiat a reason or reasons, for tolling the statute since the legislature dealt with such topic and thereby foreclosed judicial enlargement thereof.”).

Yet it seems that equitable considerations—rather than any explicit pronouncement in Singleton—fuel the majority opinion’s sweeping construction of Singleton to the detriment of well-established precedent.

Regrettably, the lure of equity diverts the majority from a proper distinguishing of Singleton, and causes the majority effectively to overrule cases that Singleton does not mention, much less disrupt. Examples abound.

B. What Singleton Does Not Do

Singleton does not overrule Conner v. Coggins, 349 So.2d 780 (Fla. 1st DCA 1977), Locke v. State Farm Fire & Casualty Co., 509 So.2d 1375 (Fla. 1st DCA 1987), or Monte v. Tipton, 612 So.2d 714 (Fla. 2d DCA 1993). Singleton does not stand for the proposition that a lender’s acceleration is irrelevant to the calculation of the statute of limitations.

Singleton does not overrule Erwin v. Crandall, 129 Fla. 45, 175 So. 862 (1937), Casino Espanol de la Habana, Inc. v. Bussel, 566 So.2d 1313, 1314 (Fla. 3d DCA 1990), or Greene v. Bursey, 733 So.2d 1111, 1114–15 (Fla. 4th DCA 1999) (holding that entire debt becomes due, and loan’s maturity date is advanced, when the creditor takes affirmative action to alert the debtor that creditor has exercised option to accelerate). Singleton does not stand for the proposition that a lender’s acceleration does not advance the note’s maturity date.

Singleton does not overrule Baader v. Walker, 153 So.2d 51 (Fla. 2nd DCA 1963), or Cook v. Merrifield, 335 So.2d 297 (Fla. 1st DCA 1976). Singleton does not stand for the proposition that, despite a lender’s acceleration, a mortgagor’s obligation to pay—and a mortgagee’s corresponding obligation to accept—monthly installment payments continue.

Yet, relying on Singleton, the majority opinion makes each of these significant, unsupported leaps, as if Singleton, sub silentio, overturned decades of jurisprudence.³³

C. Harmonizing Singleton; Employing an Inquiry Consistent with Precedent

In my view, it is incumbent upon the district courts to apply Florida Supreme Court precedent in such a way as not to produce a wholesale upheaval of well-established law. A far more restrained reading of Singleton—in harmony, and not at odds, with Florida case law regarding lender acceleration and the statute of limitations—is more compatible with a district court’s place in Florida’s court hierarchy.

Thus, consistent with Singleton and decades of Florida statute of limitations case law, I suggest that the following inquiry be employed when, as in the instant case, both the first foreclosure action’s dismissal order and the parties’ contract documents are silent as to whether the dismissal has effected reinstatement: the court must consider relevant and highly probative, contemporaneous and post-dismissal factors to determine whether the prior case’s adjudication actually reinstated the installment nature of the loan. Such factors include: (i) whether the lender’s internal records treated the loan as being reinstated; (ii) how the lender characterized the loan for reporting purposes to any regu-

33. Puryear v. State, 810 So.2d 901, 905 (Fla. 2002) (“We take this opportunity to expressly state that this Court does not intentionally overrule itself sub silentio.”).

lator; (iii) if, when, and how the lender communicated reinstatement to the borrower; (iv) how the lender treated any post-dismissal installment payments tendered by the borrower; and (v) the nature of any other post-dismissal communications between the lender and borrower.³⁴

In the instant case, the record is devoid of any evidence indicating that, at any time contemporaneous with the December 6, 2010 dismissal, either party treated the trial court's form dismissal order as a reinstatement of the installment nature of the loan.³⁵ In sum, after the dismissal of the first case in 2010, the parties did not reinstate the installment nature of the loan; the contract documents did not reinstate the installment nature of the loan; and the trial court did not reinstate the installment nature of the loan. Why should we?

V. Conclusion

I am not unmindful of the moral imperative driving both the majority's opinion and a host of other State appellate court and federal decisions: borrowers should pay their mortgage obligations. The expiration of a statute of limitations, however, generally results in a windfall for the escaping defendant. In my view, neither the moral imperative that borrowers pay their obligations, nor Singleton, has abrogated decades of Florida jurisprudence governing the statute of limitations in foreclosure cases. I would affirm that part of the trial court's final judgment holding that the statute of limitations precludes Deutsche Bank's foreclosure action.

STATE of Florida, Appellee.

Nos. 4D13-2682, 4D13-2788.

District Court of Appeal of Florida,
Fourth District.

April 13, 2016.

Rehearing Denied April 18, 2016.

Background: Defendant was convicted in consolidated cases in the Circuit Court, Seventeenth Judicial Circuit, Broward County, Jeffrey R. Levenson, J., of grand theft and two counts of fraudulent use of personal identification information. Defendant appealed.

34. I recognize that the inquiry I suggest here is more nuanced than the inquiry suggested by the panel opinion with which I concurred. The panel opinion suggested a more formulaic approach to determining whether dismissal of the prior action reinstated the installment nature of the loan, i.e., a dismissal without prejudice does not reinstate the loan, while a dismissal with prejudice does reinstate the loan. Deutsche Bank Trust Co. Americas v. Beauvais, No. 3D14-575, 2014 WL 7156961 (Fla. 3d DCA Dec. 17, 2014). This reflected a thoughtful attempt to distinguish Singleton's equity-based res judicata analysis and to avoid an extension of Singleton to the case at bar;

however, I am left with little choice but to expound fully upon the inapplicability of Singleton in this context.

35. My approach is hardly novel. In order to avoid summary judgment on a statute of limitations defense, New York's appellate courts—certainly not outliers in the mortgage foreclosure arena—require an affirmative revocation of a lender acceleration prior to the expiration of the statute of limitations. See e.g. EMC Mortg. Corp. v. Patella, 279 A.D.2d 604, 720 N.Y.S.2d 161 (2001).

the two cases exists such that the above styled case should be considered a compulsory counterclaim to the foreclosure action.

(2) MERS had no interest in or claim to the property.

Motions granted.

WELLS FARGO BANK, N.A.; Flagstar Bank, FSB; and Mortgage Electronic Registration Systems, Inc., Defendants.

Case No. 13-80828-CIV.

United States District Court,

Nov. 5, 2013.

Background: Mortgagor brought action to quiet title against mortgagee, mortgage assignee, and the Mortgage Electronic Registration System (MERS), alleging that dismissal of earlier foreclosure action invalidated the note and mortgage, barring subsequent foreclosure actions for defaults on subsequent payments. Defendants filed motions to dismiss.

Holdings: The District Court, Kenneth L. Ryskamp, J., held that:

(1) note and mortgage remained a valid and enforceable lien against the property after foreclosure action was dismissed, and

1. Quieting Title $\S$ 34(5), 35(2)

To state a claim to quiet title in Florida, the plaintiff must not only allege plausible facts showing his title to the land at issue, but also plausible facts showing that a cloud on that title exists.

2. Quieting Title $\S$ 34(5)

To state a claim to quiet title in Florida, not only must the matter which constitutes the alleged cloud be shown, but facts must be alleged which give the claim apparent validity as well as those which show its invalidity.

3. Mortgages $\S$ 475

Quieting Title $\S$ 7(2)

Under Florida law, voluntary dismissal of mortgage assignee's earlier foreclosure action did not invalidate the note and mortgage, as would bar subsequent foreclosure actions for defaults on subsequent payments; rather, the note and mortgage remained a valid and enforceable lien against mortgagor's property and did not constitute a cloud on the property supporting a quiet title claim.

4. Quieting Title $\S$ 17

Mortgage Electronic Registration System (MERS) had no interest in or claim to mortgagor's real property, as would support mortgagor's claim against MERS to quiet title, under Florida law, where MERS merely assigned the mortgage in its nominal capacity for mortgagee.

ORDER GRANTING MOTIONS TO DISMISS

KENNETH L. RYSKAMP, District Judge.

THIS CAUSE comes before the Court pursuant to Flagstar Bank, FSB's ("Flagstar") motion to dismiss, filed August 26, 2013 [DE 8]. Plaintiff Ronald Kaan ("Plaintiff") responded on October 21, 2013 [DE 22]. Flagstar replied on October 25, 2013 [DE 23]. This motion is also before the Court pursuant to Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. ("Wells Fargo") and Mortgage Electronic Registration Systems, Inc.'s ("MERS") motion to dismiss, filed August 26, 2013 [DE 8]. Plaintiff responded on October 21, 2013 [DE 22]. Wells Fargo and MERS replied on October 25, 2013 [DE 24]. These motions are ripe for adjudication.

I. BACKGROUND

On September 6, 2006, Plaintiff executed and delivered a note and security payment of same to MERS, as nominee for Aegis Wholesale Corporation, with regard to residential property located at 2115 South Ocean Boulevard, # 2, Delray Beach, Florida 33483. The mortgage was recorded in the public records of Palm Beach County on September 14, 2013. The mortgage was assigned to Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., as Trustee for The Holders of Harborview 2006-12¹ on January 9, 2008. Flagstar holds a home equity line of credit mortgage on the property.

Plaintiff defaulted under the note and mortgage by failing to pay the payment due July 1, 2007. Wells Fargo brought a foreclosure action on February 15, 2008. The foreclosure action alleged a default of Plaintiff's July 1, 2007 through February 1, 2008 note and mortgage payments and that Plaintiff owed $773,132.70, representing principal due on the note and mortgage, interest from June 1, 2007 and title search expenses for ascertaining necessary parties to the foreclosure action.² Plaintiff never answered or responded to either the foreclosure action. Wells Fargo voluntarily dismissed the action without prejudice in September 2011.³

Plaintiff brings this quiet title action, alleging that because the state court dis-

1. Plaintiff named "Wells Fargo Bank, N.A." in its national banking capacity only, rather than naming Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. in its capacity "As Trustee For" the Trust. Nevertheless, it is clear that Plaintiff is seeking relief in this quiet title action against "Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. As Trustee For The Holders Of Harborview 2006-12" (defined above as the "Trust").

2. An amended complaint in the foreclosure action alleged that Plaintiff "defaulted under the Note and Mortgage by failing to pay the payment due July 1, 2007, and all subsequent payments." (DE 11, Ex. A ¶ 6) (emphasis added).

"It is the law in this circuit that 'when the exhibits contradict the general and conclusory allegations of the pleading, the exhibits govern.'" Crenshaw v. Lister, 556 F.3d 1283, 1292 (11th Cir.2009) (per curiam) (citations omitted). "Although analysis of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion is limited primarily to the face of the complaint and attachments thereto, a court may consider documents attached to the motion to dismiss if they are referred to in the complaint and are central to the plaintiff's claim." Starship Enter. of Atlanta, Inc. v. Coweta County, Ga., 708 F.3d 1243, 1252, n. 13 (11th Cir.2013); Fed.R.Civ.P. 10(c).

3. The information in this paragraph is largely taken from exhibits attached to Wells Fargo's motion to dismiss. See Starship, 708 F.3d at 1252 n. 13 (exhibits attached to a motion to dismiss may be considered on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion without converting the motion to one for summary judgment).

missed the foreclosure action, any recovery under the note or mortgage between now and the note's October 1, 2046 maturity date is barred by Florida's five year statute of limitations. All Defendants move to dismiss for failure to state a claim.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

On a motion to dismiss, while the Court takes the plaintiff's allegations as true, "conclusory allegations, unwarranted factual deductions or legal conclusions masquerading as facts will not prevent dismissal." Davila v. Delta Air Lines, Inc., 326 F.3d 1183, 1185 (11th Cir.2003) (citing South Florida Water Mgmt Dist. v. Montalvo, 84 F.3d 402, 406 (11th Cir.1996)). Plaintiff's obligation to provide the grounds for his entitlement to relief requires more than "labels and conclusions," and a "formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do." Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678, 129 S.Ct. 1937, 173 L.Ed.2d 868 (2009) (quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555, 127 S.Ct. 1955, 167 L.Ed.2d 929 (2007)). "The point is to 'give the defendant fair notice of what the claim is and the grounds upon which it rests.'" Davis v. Coca-Cola Bottling Co., 516 F.3d 955, 974 (11th Cir.2008) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555, 127 S.Ct. 1955 and finding allegations insufficient to meet Twombly standard). A complaint's factual allegations "must be enough to raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555, 127 S.Ct. 1955. "Only a complaint that states a plausible claim for relief survives a motion to dismiss." Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679, 129 S.Ct. 1937. A determination of whether a complaint states a plausible claim for relief requires the reviewing court "to draw on its judicial experience and common sense." Id. When a plaintiff fails to plead factual content permitting the court to infer more than the mere possibility of misconduct, it has not "shown" entitlement to relief. Id. (quoting Fed.R.Civ.P. 8(a)(2)).

III. DISCUSSION

A. Wells Fargo

[1,2] To state a claim to quiet title in Florida, Plaintiff must not only allege plausible facts showing his title to the land at issue, but also plausible facts showing that a cloud on that title exists. Stark v. Frayer, 67 So.2d 237, 239 (Fla.1953). "Not only must the matter which constitutes the alleged cloud be shown, but facts must be alleged which give the claim apparent validity as well as those which show its invalidity." Id. (citations omitted). See also McDaniel v. McElvy, 91 Fla. 770, 108 So. 820, 830 (1926) ("Thus, if the suit is brought to remove a particular cloud, the facts which show the existence—actual, apparent, or potential—of that cloud are essential parts of the complainant's cause of action, and must be alleged.") (citation omitted).

[3] Plaintiff contends that the dismissal of the foreclosure action invalidates the note and mortgage and therefore bars subsequent foreclosure actions for defaults on subsequent payments. Singleton v. Grey-mar Assoc., 882 So.2d 1004 (Fla.2004), asked whether a first foreclosure action alleging default on mortgage payments running from September 1999 through February 2000, which was dismissed with prejudice, barred a consecutive foreclosure action alleging default of mortgage payments due beginning in April 2000. Id. at 1005. Singleton held that a first foreclosure action did not bar a second foreclosure action:

[A]cceleration and foreclosure predicated upon subsequent and different defaults present a separate and distinct issue.... This seeming variance from the traditional law of res judicata rests upon a recognition of the unique nature of the mortgage obligation and the continuing obligations of the parties in that relationship. . . . If res judicata prevented a mortgagee from acting on a subsequent default even after an earlier claimed default could not be established, the mortgagor would have no incentive to make future timely payments on the note. The adjudication of the earlier default would essentially insulate her from future foreclosure actions on the note—merely because she prevailed in the first action. Clearly, justice would not be served if the mortgagee was barred from challenging the subsequent default payment solely because he failed to prove the earlier alleged default.

Id. at 1007–08 (internal citations omitted). See also Star Funding Solutions, LLC v. Krondes, 101 So.3d 403, 403 (Fla.Dist.Ct. App.2012) (“A new default, based on a different act or date of default not alleged in the dismissed action, creates a new cause of action. . . . Thus, the trial court’s dismissal with prejudice of Star Funding’s first foreclosure action does not preclude Star Funding from instituting a new foreclosure action.”); PNC Bank, N.A. v. Neal, et al., Case No. 1D12–2544, — So.3d —, 2013 WL 5779048 (Fla.Dist.Ct. App.2013), (DE 24–1, Ex. 1) (“[T]he dismissal with prejudice of PNC Bank’s foreclosure action against the Neals does not preclude PNC Bank from instituting a new foreclosure action based on a different act or a new date of default not alleged in the dismissed action.”).

The foreclosure action at issue here alleged a default of Plaintiff’s July 1, 2007 through February 1, 2008 Note and Mortgage payments. While any claims relating to individual payment defaults that are now more than five years old may be subject to the statute of limitations, each payment default that is less than five years old, i.e., since October, 2008, created a basis for a subsequent foreclosure and/or acceleration action. Singleton, 882 So.2d at 1008. See also Fl. Stat. § 95.11(2)(c) (setting a five year statute of limitation for actions to foreclose on a mortgage). Plaintiff does not allege that he has made any payments on the mortgage since 2007. Considering Florida’s statute of limitations in a light most favorable to Plaintiff, Wells Fargo has anywhere from October 1, 2013 until November 1, 2018 to file a second foreclosure action based on the default of any payment owed since October 1, 2008. See Fla. Stat. § 95.11(2)(c); Singleton, 882 So.2d at 1007–08. Accordingly, the note and mortgage remain a valid and enforceable lien against Plaintiff’s property, and do not, as a matter of law, constitute a cloud on Plaintiff’s property supporting a quiet title claim. Singleton, 882 So.2d at 1007–08; Stark, 67 So.2d at 239.

Even if the statute of limitations barred foreclosure due to payment defaults within the last five years, the lien would still be enforceable if Plaintiff breaches or defaults in other ways. Plaintiff not sell or transfer any interest in his property without the prior written consent of Wells Fargo. (DE 21, Ex. C ¶ 18, titled “Transfer of the Property or a Beneficial Interest in Borrower.”). Wells Fargo’s right to consent to a sale, and right to foreclose if it does not consent, confers separate rights that cannot be cancelled or lost because of the passage of time after a payment default.

B. MERS

[4] Plaintiff has failed to allege that MERS has any interest in or claim to Plaintiff’s property. At most, Plaintiff refers to the pleadings from the foreclosure action, which include the mortgage and an assignment, executed by MERS in its nominal capacity only. Plaintiff does not allege any other facts giving rise to an interest in or claim to his property by MERS. As such, Plaintiff has failed to state a quiet title claim against MERS.

C. Flagstar

Plaintiff does not allege any facts with regard to Flagstar. Plaintiff fails to state a claim for quiet title against Flagstar.

IV. CONCLUSION

THE COURT, being fully advised and having considered the pertinent portions of the record, hereby

ORDERS AND ADJUDGES that the motions to dismiss are GRANTED. The above-styled action is DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE. That this dismissal is with prejudice does not bar Plaintiff from bringing a subsequent quiet title action predicated on other facts. The Clerk of Court shall CLOSE this case and DENY any pending motions as MOOT.

v.

Elizabeth DUDEK, in her official capacity as Secretary, Florida Agency for Health Care Administration, Defendant.

Case No. 11-20684-CIV.

United States District Court,

Nov. 5, 2013.

Background: Medicaid-eligible minors, who were diagnosed with autism or autism spectrum disorders (ASD) during early and periodic screening, diagnostic, and treatment services (EPSDT), brought action against Florida Agency for Health Care Administration (AHCA), seeking coverage for prescribed applied behavioral analysis (ABA) treatment. After entry of preliminary injunction, 839 F.Supp.2d 1254, the District Court, 864 F.Supp.2d 1314, found that exclusion of ABA treatment violated federal Medicaid Act, and issued permanent injunction. AHCA appealed. The Court of Appeals, 731 F.3d 1152, affirmed in part, vacated in part, and remanded.

Holding: On remand, the District Court, Joan A. Lenard, J., held that minors were entitled to permanent injunction requiring Florida to pay for ABA.

Ordered accordingly.

1. Injunction ¶1032

To obtain permanent injunction, plaintiffs must show by preponderance of evidence that: (1) they have prevailed in establishing violation of right asserted in his complaint; (2) there is no adequate remedy at law for violation of this right; (3) irreparable harm will result if court does not order injunctive relief; and (4) if issued, injunction would not be adverse to public interest.

2. Health ¶476

Florida's exclusion of applied behavioral analysis (ABA) for Medicaid-eligible minors diagnosed with autism or autism spectrum disorder (ASD) violated broad "early and periodic screening, diagnostic, and treatment services" (EPSDT) mandate in federal Medicaid Act, and thus Medicaid-eligible minors were entitled to permanent injunction requiring Florida to pay

Applying this line of cases to the present facts, this Court construes §§ 40–1–82 and –83 in favor of Debtor, and concludes that Debtor has sufficiently proven that he maintained continuous possession of the Property sufficient to invoke his indefinite right of redemption under § 40–10–82.

Can Debtor's Tax Arrears be Cured and His Property Redeemed Via His Chapter 13 Payment Plan?

[14] Angel Homes' Motion for Relief from Stay requests that if this Court finds that Debtor's right of redemption exists and is property of the estate, that he be disallowed from exercising his right of redemption through the Chapter 13 plan payments, and instead that Debtor be required to redeem by making a lump sum payment to Angel Homes for the statutory amount required to redeem under Ala. Code § 40–10–122. (Docs.15, 36).

The Court finds this request to be untimely under 11 U.S.C. § 1327(a). Section 1327(a) states “[t]he provisions of a confirmed plan bind the debtor and each creditor, whether or not the claim of such creditor is provided for by the plan, and whether or not such creditor has objected to, has accepted, or has rejected the plan.” Therefore, Angel Homes is bound by the terms of the plan as it was confirmed by this Court's Confirmation Order entered on March 14, 2016. See In re Young, 281 B.R. 74 (Bankr.S.D.Ala.2001); In re Torres, 193 B.R. 319 (Bankr.N.D.Cal.1996); In re Davis, 160 B.R. 577 (Bankr.E.D.Tenn. 1993); In re Harvey, 213 F.3d 318 (7th Cir.2000); In re O'Neal, 142 B.R. 411 (Bankr.D.Or.1992)(an unobjected-to-plan bound the movant to its terms, and the issue it sought to raise was res judicata and could not be raised on subsequent motion); Marlow v. Sweet Antiques (In re Marlow), 216 B.R. 975, 979 (Bankr. N.D.Ala.1998) (“Pursuant to § 1327, the order of confirmation in a chapter 13 case constitutes res judicata as to all justiciable issues which were or could have been raised prior to confirmation”).

Because the issue of whether Debtor must redeem by lump sum or through his plan is not properly before the Court, the Court will abstain from a determinative outcome. This narrow abstention does not affect the remainder of this ruling.

Considering the legal and factual analysis above under the totality of the circumstances standard on a motion for relief from stay in this District, the Court concludes that Debtor has proven that cause does not exist sufficient upon which the stay should lift. Therefore, Angel Homes is bound by the terms of the plan as confirmed, and its Motion for Relief from Stay is DENIED.

Case No: 6:15-cv-1302-Orl-31

United States District Court,
M.D. Florida,
Orlando Division.

Signed May 5, 2016

Background: Chapter 13 debtor-mortgagor objected to secured nature of claim for balance allegedly owing on mortgage debt, and sought determination as to invalidity of mortgage lien due to mortgagee's delay in foreclosing. The Bankruptcy Court, Cynthia C. Jackson, J., 534 B.R. 834, overruled objection. Debtor appealed.

Holdings: The District Court, Gregory A. Presnell, J., held that:

- (1) debtor was required to bring adversary proceeding to obtain determination as to invalidity of mortgage lien, as opposed to simply treating objection and motion as contested matters, and
- (2) the bankruptcy court did not err in concluding that note and mortgage remained enforceable against debtor, despite mortgagee's earlier attempted foreclosure and acceleration.

Affirmed.

1. Bankruptcy ⚖️2825

Pursuant to the Bankruptcy Code, the bankruptcy court "shall allow" a creditor's claim over a debtor's objection except to the extent that, inter alia, such claim is unenforceable against the debtor or the property of the debtor. 11 U.S.C.A. § 502(b)(1).

2. Bankruptcy ⚖️2156

Although most objections to claims are resolved as contested matters, when such objections challenge the validity, priority, or extent of a lien, the objecting party must file an adversary complaint. Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3007(b), 7001(2).

3. Bankruptcy ⚖️2156

Chapter 13 debtor was required to bring adversary proceeding to obtain determination as to invalidity of mortgage lien, as opposed to simply treating dispute as contested matter and filing motion; although debtor argued that he was seeking to determine validity of claim, that is, the promissory note, rather than validity of lien, namely, the mortgage, under the Bankruptcy Code a determination that note was unenforceable would have rendered mortgage invalid, such that debtor's objection and motion were attacks on mortgage, not just note. 11 U.S.C.A. § 506(d); Fed. R. Bankr. P. 3007(b), 7001(2).

4. Mortgages ⚖️424

Mere fact that, as result of mortgagee's failure to complete foreclosure action following debtor-mortgagor's default and acceleration of mortgage debt, Florida's five-year statute of limitations had run on mortgagee's ability to foreclose for earlier payment defaults did not affect mortgagee's ability to foreclose for subsequent defaults; the note and mortgage remained enforceable against debtor despite the earlier attempted foreclosure and acceleration. Fla. Stat. Ann. § 95.112(c).

ORDER

GREGORY A. PRESNELL, United States District Judge

This matter comes before the Court on Appellant's Initial Brief (Doc. 12) appealing the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Middle District of Florida's order (Doc. 10-13) overruling his objection to a claim of U.S. Bank, N.A. ("U.S. Bank") and denying without prejudice his Motion to Determine Secured Status (Doc. 10-1). In resolving this appeal, the Court has also considered the Appellee's Brief (Doc. 15) filed by U.S. Bank and Ocwen Loan Servicing, LLC ("Ocwen").

I. Background

Anthony owns a home in Cocoa Beach, Florida. U.S. Bank holds a note secured by a mortgage on Anthony's home. Ocwen services the mortgage on behalf of U.S. Bank. As set forth in the Bankruptcy Court's order, U.S. Bank initiated a foreclosure action on its mortgage in state court in May 2009.¹ (Doc. 10-13 at 2). By way of the complaint in that case, U.S. Bank "declare[d] the full amount due under [the] note and mortgage." (Doc. 10-13 at 2). The case proceeded to trial but the state court judge dismissed it without prejudice in 2013.² (Doc. 10-13 at 2).

[1] On August 18, 2014, Anthony filed a voluntary petition pursuant to Chapter 13 of the Bankruptcy Code. On February 4, 2015, Anthony filed a proof of claim on behalf of U.S. Bank and Ocwen (henceforth, the "Secured Creditors"). Anthony asserted that the claim was based on a recorded mortgage and that the value was $0.00. Three weeks later, Anthony filed an objection to the Secured Creditors' claim (henceforth, the "Objection"), arguing inter alia that the mortgage was unenforceable due to the running of the statute of limitations. (Doc. 12-2 at 22). On April 14, 2015, Anthony filed a motion to determine secured status (henceforth, the "Motion"). Anthony argues that he sought the status determination pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 506(d). (Doc. 12 at 5). With some exceptions not applicable to the instant case, 11 U.S.C. § 506(d) provides that "[t]o the extent that a lien secures a claim against the debtor that is not an allowed secured claim, such lien is void."³

After an evidentiary hearing regarding the Objection and the Motion, the Bankruptcy Court ruled in favor of the Secured Creditors, for two reasons: First, because Anthony was required to bring an adversary proceeding rather than simply treating the Objection and the Motion as contested matters, and second, on the merits Anthony's argument had been rejected by most Florida courts. (Doc. 10-13). By way of the instant appeal, Anthony challenges both of these conclusions.

II. Legal Standard

Generally speaking in reviewing a decision of the Bankruptcy Court, the District Court must accept the Bankruptcy Court's factual findings unless they are clearly erroneous, but any legal conclusions are reviewed de novo. See, e.g., In re Englander, 95 F.3d 1028, 1030 (11th Cir.1996). The parties agree that the Bankruptcy Court's determinations as to the necessity of an adversary proceeding and the running of the statute of limitations are legal conclusions, subject to de novo review on appeal.

III. Analysis

A. Adversary Proceeding or Contested Matter

When controversies arise in bankruptcy cases, they can usually be categorized as an adversary proceeding or a contested matter. Contested matters are resolved

1. According to his brief, Anthony defaulted on his payments on February 1, 2009.
2. Anthony's counsel (who also represented him in the state court foreclosure case) states that that action was dismissed because the lender was unable to establish that it possessed the note and mortgage (and therefore the right to enforce them) before filing suit. (Doc. 10-1 at 2 n. 1).

3. Pursuant to the Bankruptcy Code, the Bankruptcy Court "shall allow" a creditor's claim over a debtor's objection except to the extent that, inter alia, such claim is unenforceable against the debtor or the property of the debtor. 11 U.S.C. § 502(b)(1).

by motion practice. . . . Bankruptcy Rule 7001 sets forth 10 types of proceedings that constitute adversary proceedings. . . . If a dispute does not fall within the definition of an adversary proceeding, it is a contested matter. . . . As one court has noted, the Bankruptcy Rules give “an adversary proceeding all the trappings of traditional civil litigation.”

1 Howard J. Steinberg, Bankruptcy Litigation § 5:1 (2d ed. 2007 & Supp. 2015).

[2, 3] Most objections to claims are resolved as contested matters; but when such objections challenge “the validity, priority, or extent of a lien,” the objecting party must file an adversary proceeding. Fed.R.Bankr.P. 3007(b); 7001(2). Before the Bankruptcy Court, Anthony argued that he was not obligated by Fed. R.Bankr.P. 7001(2) to bring an adversary proceeding because he was seeking to determine the validity of a claim—i.e., the note—rather than the validity of a lien—i.e., the mortgage.

The Bankruptcy Court disagreed, finding that regardless of however else the relief sought might be characterized, in substance Anthony was seeking a determination as to the validity and extent of the mortgage. Upon review, this Court finds that the Bankruptcy Court did not err in overruling the Objection and dismissing the Motion due to the failure to file an adversary proceeding. Pursuant to Section 506(d), a determination that the note was unenforceable would have rendered the mortgage invalid. The Objection and Motion were attacks on the mortgage, not just the note.

B. Statute of Limitations

[4] Florida law provides a five-year statute of limitations for foreclosure actions. Fla. Stat. § 95.112(c).⁴ In both the Objection and in the Motion, Anthony argued that U.S. Bank accelerated his debt obligation no later than May 2009, when it filed the foreclosure action. Because more than five years have passed since that date, the statute of limitations has run and the debt is unenforceable and therefore worthless. As such, the argument continues, U.S. Bank’s claim is not an “allowed claim,” and the lien securing that claim must be stripped off under 11 U.S.C. § 506(d).

Before the Bankruptcy Court, Anthony relied on the opinion in Deutsche Bank Tr. Co. v. Beauvais, 2014 WL 7156961 (Fla. 3d DCA Dec. 17, 2014), which held, in essence, that when a lender accelerates the underlying debt and sues to foreclose the mortgage, and then has its foreclosure case dismissed without prejudice, the statute of limitations precludes any subsequent actions to collect the accelerated debt. (Doc. 10-13 at 5). The Bankruptcy Court rejected the Beauvais decision in favor of a line of cases originating with Singleton v. Greymar Associates, 882 So.2d 1004 (Fla.2004). Singleton also involved an acceleration and foreclosure; however, the foreclosure action in Singleton had been dismissed with prejudice. Id. at 1005. The lender subsequently filed another foreclosure action, based on a different default. Id. Despite the fact that judgment had been entered against the lender in the first action after an acceleration, the Florida Supreme Court held that res judicata did not bar the second suit.

While it is true that a foreclosure action and an acceleration of the balance

4. Before the Bankruptcy Court, Anthony also argued that Florida’s statute of repose, Fla. Stat. § 95.281, precluded a foreclosure action by U.S. Bank. On appeal, however, Anthony argues that the statute of repose “has no application nor relevancy” to his case. (Doc. 12 at 31).

due based upon the same default may bar a subsequent action on that default, an acceleration and foreclosure predicated upon subsequent and different defaults present a separate and distinct issue. See [Olympia Mortgage Corp. v. Pugh, 774 So.2d 863, 866 (Fla. 4th DCA 2000)] (“We disagree that the election to accelerate placed future installments at issue.”); see also Greene v. Boyette, 587 So.2d 629, 630 (Fla. 1st DCA 1991) (holding that a mortgagee can successfully recover twice on one mortgage for multiple periods of default because the payments were different “installments”). For example, a mortgagor may prevail in a foreclosure action by demonstrating that she was not in default on the payments alleged to be in default, or that the mortgagee had waived reliance on the defaults. In those instances, the mortgagor and mortgagee are simply placed back in the same contractual relationship with the same continuing obligations. Hence, an adjudication denying acceleration and foreclosure under those circumstances should not bar a subsequent action a year later if the mortgagor ignores her obligations on the mortgage and a valid default can be proven.

Singleton, 882 So.2d at 1007 (emphasis added). Under this line of cases, an unsuccessful acceleration does not bar later actions based on subsequent defaults – and therefore the note is enforceable.

The decision in Beauvais was recently withdrawn on rehearing en banc; it has been superseded by an opinion in which the Third District Court of Appeals determined that Singleton controlled its decision and the lender could file a second foreclosure action despite the dismissal of the first one:

We reverse because we, like our sister courts, find the Florida Supreme Court’s decision in Singleton v. Greymar Associates, 882 So.2d 1004 (Fla. 2004), applicable to the instant action, and that it mandates reversal. See Evergrene Partners, Inc. v. Citibank, N.A., 143 So.3d 954, 956 (Fla. 4th DCA 2014) (applying Singleton and concluding that the statute of limitations would not bar foreclosure of an accelerated loan where an earlier, voluntarily dismissed, foreclosure had been brought to enforce the same loan accelerated for a separate default); see also Nationstar Mortg., LLC v. Brown, 175 So.3d 833, 834–35 (Fla. 1st DCA 2015) (applying Singleton to hold that the statute of limitations did not bar an action to foreclose an accelerated loan brought more than five years after a prior action to foreclose on the same accelerated loan had been brought but then voluntarily dismissed without prejudice); accord Hicks v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 178 So.3d 957, 959 (Fla. 5th DCA 2015) (citing Singleton and concluding “we reject Homeowners’ implication in their brief that Bank is now forever barred from bringing an action to foreclose. Despite the previous acceleration of the balance owed in both the instant suit and prior suit, Bank is not precluded from filing a new foreclosure action based on different acts or dates of default not previously alleged, provided that the subsequent foreclosure action on the subsequent defaults is brought within the statute of limitations period found in section 95.11(2)(c), Florida Statutes”).

Deutsche Bank Trust Co. Americas v. Beauvais, 188 So.3d 938, 941 (Fla. 3d DCA 2016). In his brief, Anthony has not pointed to any other case reaching the result he now advocates. As such, the Court finds that the Bankruptcy Judge did not err in concluding that the Note and Mortgage remain enforceable against Anthony despite the earlier attempted foreclosure and acceleration.

United States District Court,

Signed 02/18/2016

Background: Mortgage servicer filed motion in bankruptcy court to reopen debtors' Chapter 7 case and compel surrender of residence and for sanctions. The United States Bankruptcy Court of the Southern District of Florida entered orders reopening the bankruptcy case and compelling debtors to withdraw their answer and affirmative defenses in servicer's state court foreclosure action, and denying sanctions for debtors' and their counsel's failure to comply with statement of intention indicating surrender of residence in the bankruptcy proceeding. Debtors appealed.

Holdings: The District Court, Donald M. Middlebrooks, J., held that:

- (1) bankruptcy court's orders were "final order," from which appeal would lie;
- (2) debtors never properly raised issue whether filing a statement of intention with respect to property securing creditor's claim constituted "surrender" of real property before the bankruptcy court, and thus failed to preserve the issue on appeal; and
- (3) debtors' counsel did not have an injury in fact and therefore lacked standing to seek appellate review of bankruptcy court's orders.

Plaintiffs,

v.

CASE NO: 8:15-CV-2714-T-30UAM

RUSHMORE LOAN MANAGEMENT SERVICES, LLC,

Defendant.

ORDER

THIS CAUSE comes before the Court upon Defendant's Motion to Dismiss (Dkt. 15) and Plaintiff's Response in Opposition (Dkt. 37). The Court, upon review of the motion, response, and being otherwise advised in the premises, concludes that the motion should be denied.

BACKGROUND

This action arises from Defendant Rushmore Loan Management Services, LLC's alleged violations of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act ("FDCPA") and the Florida Consumer Collection Practices Act ("FCCPA"). Plaintiff Steven Sanchez alleges that Rushmore Loan sent him a letter in collection of a debt that violated the FDCPA and FCCPA in several respects. Plaintiff contends that the letter, titled "Notice of Intent to Foreclose," referred, in relevant part, to debt that was barred by the applicable statute of limitations.

Specifically, the letter is dated July 6, 2015, and demands payments due from April 1, 2009, to the present. The letter also states that it is “AN ATTEMPT TO COLLECT A DEBT AND ANY INFORMATION OBTAINED WILL BE USED FOR THAT PURPOSE. RUSHMORE IS ACTING AS A ‘DEBT COLLECTOR’ AS THAT TERM IS DEFINED IN THE FEDERAL FAIR DEBT COLLECTION PRACTICES ACT.” (Dkt. 14-1). Plaintiff also alleges that the letter was misleading because it did not notify him that the loan had been previously accelerated. Further, the letter misstated the amount due.

Rushmore Loan now moves to dismiss the complaint for failure to state a claim under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6).

STANDARD OF REVIEW

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) allows a complaint to be dismissed for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. When reviewing a motion to dismiss, a court must accept all factual allegations contained in the complaint as true, and view the facts in a light most favorable to the plaintiff. See Erickson v. Pardus, 551 U.S. 89, 93-94 (2007). However, unlike factual allegations, conclusions in a pleading “are not entitled to the assumption of truth.” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1950 (2009). On the contrary, legal conclusions “must be supported by factual allegations.” Id. Indeed, “conclusory allegations, unwarranted factual deductions or legal conclusions masquerading as facts will not prevent dismissal.” Davila v. Delta Air Lines, Inc., 326 F.3d 1183, 1185 (11th Cir. 2003).

DISCUSSION

The FDCPA generally prohibits “debt collectors” from engaging in abusive, deceptive, or unfair debt-collection practices. See 15 U.S.C. § 1692. Its purpose is “to eliminate abusive debt collection practices by debt collectors, to insure that those debt collectors who refrain from using abusive debt collection practices are not competitively disadvantaged, and to promote consistent State action to protect consumers against debt collection abuses.” 15 U.S.C. § 1692(e). Among other things, the FDCPA regulates when and where a debt collector may communicate with a debtor, restricts whom a debt collector may contact regarding a debt, prohibits the use of harassing, oppressive, or abusive measures to collect a debt, and bans the use of false, deceptive, misleading, unfair, or unconscionable means of collecting a debt. See 15 U.S.C. §§ 1692a-1692p. The FCCPA is “a Florida state analogue to the federal FDCPA” and has similar requirements. Oppenheim v. I.C. Sys., Inc., 627 F.3d 833, 836 (11th Cir. 2010) (per curiam).

The Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals has adopted the “least sophisticated consumer” standard to analyze claims of deception or misrepresentation under section 1692e. Jeter v. Credit Bureau, Inc., 760 F.2d 1168, 1175 (11th Cir. 1985). This objective standard analyzes whether a hypothetical least sophisticated consumer would be deceived or misled by the debt collector’s practices. See id. at 1175-76.

Rushmore Loan’s motion does not dispute Plaintiff’s allegation that the July 6, 2015 letter is a debt collection activity under the FDCPA and FCCPA. Rushmore Loan also does not dispute that it is a “debt collector” as defined by the FDCPA and FCCPA. Rushmore Loan's motion argues that the letter did not violate the FDCPA and FCCPA because the debt referenced in the letter was not barred by the statute of limitations.¹ As such, Rushmore Loan contends that its communication was not false, deceptive, or misleading.

The Court agrees with Rushmore Loan's motion if Plaintiff's claims were based solely on an assumption that the letter was false because the five-year statute of limitations completely barred Rushmore Loan from accelerating the loan for a second time and initiating a second foreclosure action. But they are not. Plaintiff acknowledges that, under Florida law, a mortgagee may foreclose on a loan that was previously accelerated in a previous foreclosure action. See Deutsche Bank Trust Co. Americas v. Beauvais, No. 3D14-575, --- So.3d ---, 2016 WL 1445415 (Fla. 3d DCA Apr. 13, 2016) (holding that the five-year statute of limitations does not bar a second foreclosure suit filed on a subsequent payment default occurring within the five-year statutory period preceding the commencement of the second suit); U.S. Bank Nat'l Ass'n v. Bartram, 140 So. 3d 1007, 1014 (Fla. 5th DCA 2014), review granted, 160 So. 3d 892 (Fla. 2014) ("Therefore, we conclude that a foreclosure action for default in payments occurring after the order of dismissal in the first foreclosure action is not barred by the statute of limitations found in section 95.11(2)(c), Florida Statutes, provided the subsequent foreclosure action on the subsequent defaults is brought within the limitations period."). However, as Plaintiff points out, Rushmore Loan cannot demand payments due over five years before the commencement of the second foreclosure. See Collazo v. HSBC

Bank USA, N.A., No. 3D14-2208, --- So.3d ---, 2016 WL 1445419, at *1 (Fla. 3d DCA Apr. 13, 2016) (holding same).

As explained in more detail above, Rushmore Loan's letter omitted the fact that Plaintiff's home was subjected to a prior foreclosure action and failed to exclude from the amount due the monthly installment payments that exceeded five years. At this stage, these allegations are sufficient to establish that the letter may have been deceptive or misleading to a least sophisticated consumer.

It is therefore ORDERED AND ADJUDGED that:

1. Defendant's Motion to Dismiss (Dkt. 15) is denied.
2. Defendant shall file its answer within fourteen (14) days of this Order.

DONE and ORDERED in Tampa, Florida on June 3, 2016.
