STATE OF FLORIDA, STATE'S ATTORNEY OFFICE

Clerk Take Judicial Notice and Claim Writ of QUO W

To: Clerk of the Supreme Court of FLORIDA, Florida Supreme Court 500 South Duval Street Tallahassee, FL 3239, In matters of jurisdiction Article V, section 12(c) rules provision "and Article V, 3(b)(4)" – all writs. Turner, 295 So. 2d at 611-12, but not limited to, case no. 2013-CA-693.

Clerk can take Judicial notice sua sponta Writ of QUO WARRANTO given by through Notary: State of Florida having power of attorney claim by right Writ of Habeas Corpus PURSUANT TO: Supreme Court Florida, by right Revised Statutes Annotated, common law Rules of the Supreme Court of Florida (Refs & Annos), common law, Quo Warranto

The writ of quo warranto is a "writ of inquiry," meaning "by what authority. Although historically developed by the English crown to use against its subjects, it generally is used in Florida as "the means by which an interested party can test whether any individual improperly claims or has usurped some power or right derived from the State of Florida. One of the Florida Supreme Court's highest profile decisions in 2008 was a quo warranto writ to the governor of Florida.

At the behest of the Florida Legislature, the Florida Supreme Court issued a writ of quo warranto in Florida House of Representatives v. Crist, 999 So. 2d 601 (Fla. 2008), invalidating a "compact" (a contract between two sovereigns) between the governor of Florida and the Seminole Indian Tribe of Florida that expanded casino gambling on tribal lands and granted the tribe the exclusive right to conduct certain types of gaming. The legislature had not approved the compact, and the court held the governor lacked “the constitutional authority to bind the [s]tate to a gaming compact that clearly departs from the [s]tate’s public policy by legalizing types of gaming that are illegal everywhere else in the [s]tate. Case no. 2013-CA-693.

The court concluded it had jurisdiction to grant quo warranto relief to preclude a state officer or agency from improperly exercising a power or right derived from the state. The majority rejected the complaint of Justice Lewis’ “concurring-in-result-only opinion” that the court was expanding its “quo warranto jurisdiction to include issues normally reserved for declaratory actions.”⁵ Pointing to settled separation of powers precepts, the court declared “the importance and immediacy of the issue justifies our deciding this matter now rather than transferring it for resolution in a declaratory action. See: Apostille, Department of State case no. 2013-CA-693, but not limited to.
