PETITIONER'S REPLY ARGUMENT

Respondent's brief on the merits states that there is no express and direct conflict between Thompson v. State, 808 So. 2d (Fla. 5th DCA 2002) and Huss v. State, 771 So. 2d 591 (Fla. 1st DCA 2000). The Petitioner strongly disagrees with the Respondent's position.

The Court in Thompson held that Huss represents a change in law, which is not to be applied retroactively. Thompson, 808 So. 2d at 808. The Court in Thompson interpreted the Huss decision as holding that Huss did create new law for which a retroactive analysis must be done under Witt v. State, 387 So.2d 922 (Fla. 1980).

However, the decision in Huss does not state that there was a creation of new law, which would require a retroactive analysis under Witt. On the contrary, the decision in Huss is the exact opposite of what the Respondent is arguing and what the Court in Thompson held.

Huss stated that the law under which the appellant received his prior convictions was no longer in effect. Huss, 771 So. 2d at 593. The Court went further and stated that the statute by its "plain wording" only applies to convictions under the new statute. Id. Therefore, the Court in Huss, status that its decision was based on interpreting the new statute by its plain meaning, not creating new law. In the Court's interpretation of the new statute, it did not create new law, but merely interpreted the statute. Therefore, the holding in Huss is not one for which a retroactive analysis is needed under Witt.

The holding in Thompson is in direct conflict with the holding in Huss, as the Court in Thompson interpreted the Huss decision as creating new law, which is in direct conflict with the decision of Huss.

Applying the Huss decision, no retroactive analysis will ever be needed in determining what convictions can be used for enhancing a conviction under § 322.34 (2) (c), Fla. Stat. (Supp.1998). Under the plain word reading of the Statute, if a conviction occurred prior to 1997, then that conviction can not be used to enhance an individual's sentence to that of a third degree felony under § 322.34 (2) (c), Fla. Stat. (Supp.1998), because the amended statute was not in effect prior to 1997.

Furthermore, the holding of Stutts vs. The State of Florida,

821 So. 2d 449 at 441, (Fla. $1^{\rm st}$ DCA 2002) also certifies a direct conflict with Thompson. The Court in Stutts held that Huss merely stated the plain meaning of the new statute, and did not require a retroactive analysis under Witt.

Therefore, there does exist a direct and express conflict between Thompson and Huss. Furthermore, there does exist a direct and express conflict between Stutts and Thompson.

CONCLUSION

Based upon the foregoing analysis, arguments, and authorities, Petitioner urges the Court to remand his case to the trial court to be disposed of as a misdemeanor.
