

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF FLORIDA

CASE NO. SC13-1472

RONNIE KEITH WILLIAMS,

Appellant,

v.

STATE OF FLORIDA,

Appellee.

ON APPEAL FROM THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE SEVENTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT, IN AND FOR BROWARD COUNTY, FLORIDA

SUPPLEMENTAL INITIAL BRIEF OF APPELLANT

NEAL A. DUPREE
Capital Collateral Regional Counsel—
Southern Region

NICOLE M. NOËL
Assistant CCRC

MARTA JASZCZOLT
Staff Attorney
CAPITAL COLLATERAL REGIONAL
COUNSEL—SOUTH
1 East Broward Blvd., Suite 444
Fort Lauderdale, Florida 33301

COUNSEL FOR WILLIAMS

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This proceeding involves the appeal of the circuit court's denial of Williams's motion for post-conviction relief following an evidentiary hearing. The motion was brought pursuant to Florida Rule of Criminal Procedure 3.851. This Court granted Williams's motion requesting the opportunity to provide supplemental briefing to this Court in light of Hurst v. Florida. This brief follows.

The following symbols will be used to designate references to the record in this appeal:

“V/#” – volume and page number of the record on direct appeal to this Court;

“PCR/#” – volume and page number of the postconviction record on appeal.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

PRELIMINARY STATEMENTi

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES iii

SUMMARY OF THE ARGUMENT1

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND FACTS2

ARGUMENT6

 A jury did not make the findings of fact necessary to render Williams eligible for a death sentence.....6

 The elements a jury must find in order to subject a defendant to death must be found unanimously.....12

Hurst is a development of fundamental significance under Witt v. State and must be given retroactive effect.....15

 This Court’s prior discussions regarding the retroactivity of Apprendi and Ring do not resolve or affect in any way Hurst’s retroactivity.20

Hurst error is structural and can never be harmless.....23

CONCLUSION AND RELIEF SOUGHT25

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Cases

Almeida v. State , 748 So. 2d 922 (Fla. 1999)	10
Anderson v. State , 267 So. 2d 8 (Fla. 1972)	16, 17
Apprendi v. New Jersey , 530 U.S. 466 (2000).....	passim
Arizona v. Fulminante , 499 U.S. 279 (1991).....	24
Ballard v. State , 66 So. 2d 912 (Fla. 2011)	9
Besaraba v. State , 656 So. 2d 441 (Fla. 1995)	10
Bottoson v. Moore , 833 So. 2d 693 (Fla. 2002).....	passim
Brecht v. Abrahamson , 507 U.S. 619 (1993).....	24
Caldwell v. Mississippi , 472 U.S. 320 (1985)	11
Caruthers v. State , 465 So. 2d 496 (Fla. 1985)	10
Chaky v. State , 651 So. 2d 1169 (Fla. 1995)	10
Clark v. State , 609 So. 2d 513 (Fla. 1992).....	10
DeAngelo v. State , 616 So. 2d 440 (Fla. 1993).....	10
Falcon v. State , 162 So. 3d 954 (Fla. 2015)	19
Furman v. Georgia , 408 U.S. 238 (1972).....	passim
Gideon v. Wainwright , 372 U.S. 335 (1963)	18
Green v. State , 975 So. 2d 1081 (Fla. 2008).....	10
Gregg v. Georgia , 428 U.S. 153 (1976)	15

Hall v. Florida , 134 S. Ct. 1986 (2014).....	6
Hardy v. State , 716 So. 2d 761 (Fla. 1998)	10
Harrington v. Richter , 562 U.S. 86 (2011).....	22
Hildwin v. Florida , 490 U.S. 638 (1989).....	9
Hughes v. State , 901 So. 2d 837 (Fla. 2005)	20, 21, 22, 23
Hurst v. Florida , 136 S. Ct. 616 (2016).....	passim
Johnson v. State , 904 So. 2d 400 (Fla. 2005)	20, 21, 23
Jones v. State , 705 So. 2d 1364 (Fla. 1998).....	10
Jones v. State , 92 So. 2d 261 (Fla. 1956).....	12
Jones v. State , 963 So. 2d 180 (Fla. 2007).....	10
Jones v. United States , 526 U.S. 227 (1999)	8
Jorgenson v. State , 714 So. 2d 423 (Fla. 1998).....	10
Klokoc v. State , 589 So. 2d 219 (Fla. 1991)	10
Knowles v. State , 632 So. 2d 62 (Fla. 1993).....	10
Lloyd v. State , 524 So. 2d 396 (Fla. 1988).....	10
McKinney v. State , 579 So. 2d 80 (Fla. 1991)	10
Menendez v. State , 419 So. 2d 312 (Fla. 1982)	10
Mitchell v. Moore , 786 So. 2d 521 (Fla. 2001).....	15
Neder v. United States , 527 U.S. 1 (1999).....	25
Nibert v. State , 574 So. 2d 1059 (Fla. 1990)	10

Offord v. State , 959 So. 2d 187 (Fla. 2007)	10
Patrick v. Young , 18 Fla. 50 (Fla. 1881)	12
Proffitt v. State , 510 So. 2d 896 (Fla. 1987)	10
Rembert v. State , 445 So. 2d 337 (Fla. 1984)	10
Ring v. Arizona , 536 U.S. 584 (2002)	passim
Ring v. State , 25 P.3d 1139 (Ariz. 2001)	8
Ross v. State , 474 So. 2d 1170 (Fla. 1985)	10
Roy v. Wainwright , 151 So. 2d 825 (Fla. 1963)	18
Sinclair v. State , 657 So. 2d 1138 (Fla. 1995)	10
Smalley v. State , 546 So. 2d 720 (Fla. 1989)	10
Songer v. State , 544 So. 2d 1010 (Fla. 1989)	10
Spaziano v. Florida , 468 U.S. 447 (1984)	9, 20
State v. Whitfield , 107 S.W. 3d 253 (Mo. 2003)	21
Sullivan v. Louisiana , 508 U.S. 275 (1993)	25
Teague v. Lane , 489 U.S. 288 (1989)	21, 22
Thompson v. State , 647 So. 2d 824 (Fla. 1994)	10
White v. State , 616 So. 2d 21 (Fla. 1993)	10
Williams v. State , 37 So. 3d 187 (Fla. 2010)	9
Williams v. State , 707 So. 2d 683 (Fla. 1998)	10
Williams v. State , 792 So. 2d 1207 (2001)	2

Williams v. State , 967 So. 2d 735 (Fla. 2007)	5, 6
Williams v. Taylor , 529 U.S. 362 (2000)	21
Witt v. State , 387 So. 2d 922 (Fla. 1980)	1, 15, 19, 20
Woods v. State , 733 So. 2d 980 (Fla. 1999)	10
Yacob v. State , 136 So. 3d 539 (Fla. 2014)	9

Statutes

Fla. Stat. § 775.082	1, 16, 17, 18
Fla. Stat. § 921.137	11
Fla. Stat. § 921.141	passim

Other Authorities

Florida Standard Jury Instruction 3.10	13
Robert A. Burt, Disorder in the Court: The Death Penalty and the Constitution, 85 Mich. L. Rev. 1741 (1987)	16

Rules

Criminal Procedural Rule 1	18
Fla. R. Crim. P. 3.440	12, 13
Fla. R. Crim. P. 3.850	18
Fla. R. Crim. P. 3.851	18

Constitutional Provisions

U.S. CONST. amend. VI	passim
U.S. CONST. amend. VIII	19

SUMMARY OF THE ARGUMENT

On January 12, 2016, the United States Supreme Court rendered its decision in Hurst v. Florida, 136 S. Ct. 616 (2016). The Court held that Florida's death penalty scheme was unconstitutional because it allowed a judge, not a jury, to find each fact necessary to impose a death sentence, and that a jury's mere recommendation is not enough. Id. at 619. After Hurst, a Florida death sentence unsupported by jury findings of sufficient aggravating circumstances not outweighed by mitigating circumstances has no basis in law, is invalid, void, and unconstitutional.

Hurst requires a global paradigm shift in our understanding of the Sixth Amendment aspects of Florida's death penalty scheme. Hurst establishes that our most basic assumptions about the constitutional integrity of Florida's scheme were wrong. The declaration that Florida's capital sentencing statute is unconstitutional can only be described as a development of fundamental significance and jurisprudential upheaval. Thus, Hurst is undoubtedly a "development of fundamental significance" within the meaning of Witt v. State, 387 So. 2d 922, 931 (Fla. 1980), and must be given retroactive effect.

Hurst error is structural and not amenable to harmless error analysis. Because Williams was sentenced to death under an unconstitutional statute, he must be resentenced to life imprisonment in accordance with Fla. Stat. § 775.082.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND FACTS

This Court reversed Williams's initial conviction and death sentence, and remanded the case for a new trial. Williams v. State, 792 So. 2d 1207 (2001). Prior to his 2004 retrial, Williams filed a motion to declare Fla. Stat. § 921.141 unconstitutional because a bare majority of jurors was sufficient to recommend a sentence of death (V3/276). He also filed a "Motion for Special Verdict Form Containing Findings of Fact by the Jury" (V3/250) arguing that a form documenting jury fact-findings would aid "the review of this proceeding, as well as the jury's responsibility to weigh the evidence" (V3/250-51). Both motions were denied.

During voir dire, prospective jurors were repeatedly told by the court that their sentencing role was advisory and that they would merely be asked to return a nonbinding, non-unanimous recommendation. See, e.g., V8/98 ("Now the verdict as to the guilt phase must be unanimous, must be beyond a reasonable doubt. If you find that the defendant is guilty of Murder in the First Degree and you go to the penalty phase, you give a recommendation. The recommendation does not have to be unanimous, it has to be by a majority vote. I then will consider your verdict . . . and then I make the final determination as far as what the sentence is"). See also (V19/1505; V19/1536).

Before penalty phase deliberations began, the judge again instructed the jurors that it was their duty "to render to the Court [an] advisory sentence" (V20/1551) regarding punishment and that the “final decision as to what punishment shall be imposed is the responsibility of the judge” (V20/1703). The trial court then instructed the jurors to consider three aggravating circumstances: (1) prior violent felony (prior murder or prior indecent assault); (2) felony murder (sexual battery); and (3) heinous, atrocious, and cruel (HAC) (V20/1703-04). The jurors were again reminded that their duty was to “advise and recommend” a sentence to the court and that the final decision would be made by the judge (V20/1707, 1708, 1712).

After deliberating for thirteen minutes, the jury reached a decision (V20/1716). The recommendation was read aloud: “The jury, on a vote by a verdict of ten to two, advises and recommends to the Court that it impose the death penalty” (V20/1717). The form signed by the jury simply recommended that the court impose death (V5/399). It is unknown what aggravators the jury relied on to support this recommendation.

After dismissing the jury, the judge informed the parties that he would be considering an additional aggravator, stating that “based on my research, I think there may be sufficient evidence to prove [the cold, calculated, and premeditated] aggravator beyond a reasonable doubt” (V20/1721). Defense counsel objected based on Apprendi,¹ arguing that the jury was not instructed on the CCP aggravator (V20/1721).

¹ Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466 (2000).

In its written sentencing order, the court found four aggravators: (1) prior violent felony; (2) felony murder; (3) HAC; and (4) cold, calculated, and premeditated (CCP) (V5/414-18). In acknowledging that the jury was not instructed on CCP and that the State had not argued it to the jury, the court explained that the “sentencing judge is not precluded from considering . . . this CCP statutory aggravator in imposing [a] sentence,” citing to Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584 (2002) (V5/421-22). The court found that CCP had been proven by the State and assigned it moderate weight (V5/423).

On direct appeal, Williams challenged the trial court’s finding of CCP, arguing specifically that “the state neither advocated nor endorsed a CCP finding” (Point XV, Initial Brief, Williams v. State, No. SC04-857 at 103). Williams also raised a Ring claim.

Under Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584 (2002), the question of death eligibility must be determined beyond a reasonable doubt by a jury pursuant to the Jury and Due Process Clauses. The jury determination must be unanimous. There must also be notice of aggravating factors in the charging document. The jury proceeding under section 921.141 does not comport with the requirements of the Jury and Due Process Clauses of the state and federal constitutions because the jury renders an advisory non-unanimous verdict at which it is not required to make the eligibility determination by proof beyond a reasonable doubt and the normal rules of evidence do not apply. Nor is proper notice given. Hence, Florida’s death penalty sentencing scheme is unconstitutional, and this court should vacate appellant’s death sentence.

Appellant recognizes that this Court has rejected similar arguments in, e.g., Bottoson v. Moore, 833 So. 2d 693 (Fla. 2002). He respectfully submits, however, that such decisions did not consider the rule that the statute must be strictly construed in favor of the defense so that one is death eligible only on a finding of sufficient aggravating circumstances and insufficient mitigation.

(Point XXII, Initial Brief, Williams v. State, No. SC04-857 at 116-18).

In its answer brief, the State argued that Williams’s Ring claim was not preserved, “[e]xcept for the complaint [that] the jury’s decision should be unanimous under a Ring analysis” (Id. at 100). The State also asserted that because Williams “has a prior violent felony . . . and this Court has rejected challenges under Ring in these situations,” then his death sentence was constitutional. (Id., citing Williams v. State, 855 So.2d 611, 619 (Fla. 2003)).

This Court agreed with Williams that the trial court had erred by finding the CCP aggravator. Williams v. State, 967 So. 2d 735, 764 (Fla. 2007). However, this Court found the error harmless “because the jury was not instructed with regard to this statutory aggravator, and the trial court expressly stated that its imposition of the death penalty was not contingent on the finding of this aggravator” Id. at 765.

The Court also rejected Williams’s Ring claim:

This Court has already rejected Williams’s assertions in prior decisions, and, therefore, he is not entitled to relief. This Court has held that Florida’s capital sentencing scheme does not violate the United States Constitution under Ring. See Jones v. State, 845 So. 2d 55, 74 (Fla. 2003). Furthermore, one of the aggravating factors found by the trial court in this case was Williams’s prior convictions for two violent felonies, and this is a factor “which under Apprendi and Ring need not be found by the jury.” Jones v. State, 855 So. 2d 611, 619 (Fla. 2003).

Williams v. State, 967 So. 2d at 767.

The judge—and the judge alone—made the findings of fact required by the statute; i.e., that sufficient aggravating circumstances existed to justify a sentence of death and that sufficient mitigating circumstances did not exist to outweigh the aggravators. See § Fla. Stat. 921.141(3) (V5/427). The jury made no findings of fact. The jury merely made a non-unanimous, nonbinding recommendation in accordance with the law at the time of Williams’s retrial, and the judge made his own findings and imposed an aggravator that the jury did not consider.

In postconviction, Williams filed a motion for determination of [intellectual disability (ID)] (PCR 5/783-85). The trial court denied relief after an evidentiary hearing (PCR 17/2837-2925). Williams appealed, arguing in part that the trial court erred in denying his ID claim and requesting a remand for a new evidentiary hearing in light of Hall v. Florida, 134 S. Ct. 1986 (2014).

ARGUMENT

A jury did not make the findings of fact necessary to render Williams eligible for a death sentence.

Hurst held that “[t]he Sixth Amendment requires a jury, not a judge, to find each fact necessary to impose a sentence of death. A jury’s mere recommendation is not enough.” Hurst, 136 S. Ct. at 619. There is no conviction of capital murder in Florida without the jury findings required by Hurst. Hurst identified what those critical factfindings are, leaving no doubt as to how Florida’s capital sentencing statute must be read:

The State fails to appreciate the central and singular role the judge plays under Florida law. As described above and by the Florida Supreme Court, the Florida sentencing statute does not make a defendant eligible for death until “findings by the court that such person shall be punished by death.” Fla. Stat. § 775.082(1) (emphasis added). The trial court alone must find “the facts . . . [t]hat sufficient aggravating circumstances exist” and “[t]hat there are insufficient mitigating circumstances to outweigh the aggravating circumstances.” § 921.141(3). “[T]he jury’s function under the Florida death penalty statute is advisory only.” The State cannot now treat the advisory recommendation by the jury as the necessary factual finding that Ring requires.

Id. at 622 (citations omitted).

Hurst pointed out that “the maximum sentence a capital felon may receive on the basis of the conviction alone is life imprisonment.” Id. at 619 (citing Florida Statutes § 775.082(1)). Under Florida law, death eligibility depends on the presence of certain statutorily defined facts, in addition to the verdict unanimously finding the defendant guilty of first degree murder: (1) that sufficient aggravating circumstances exist; and (2) that there are insufficient mitigating circumstances to outweigh the aggravating circumstances. See § 921.141(3); Hurst, 136 S. Ct. at 622. Under Hurst, these findings of fact must be made by a jury. Neither of these factual determinations was made by Williams’s jury, and because they were not, Williams was not death-eligible and must be sentenced to life imprisonment.

The findings of fact statutorily required to render a defendant death-eligible are elements of the offense which separate first degree murder from capital murder under Florida law, and form part of the definition of the crime of capital murder. See Apprendi, 530 U.S. at 476 (applying the ruling of Jones v. United States, 526 U.S. 227 (1999) that “any fact (other than prior conviction) that increases the maximum penalty for a crime must be charged in an indictment, submitted to a jury, and proven beyond a reasonable doubt” to state sentencing schemes under the Fourteenth Amendment).

In Ring, the U.S. Supreme Court applied the Apprendi rule to Arizona’s capital sentencing scheme and found that it violated the Sixth Amendment.² The U.S. Supreme Court in Hurst found that this Court in Bottoson v. Moore, 833 So. 2d 693 (Fla. 2002) had wrongly failed to recognize that Ring and Apprendi meant that Florida’s capital sentencing statute was also unconstitutional. Much of the basis for this Court’s erroneous conclusion that Ring and Apprendi were inapplicable in ² In Arizona, the factual determination required by Arizona law before a death sentence was authorized was at least one aggravating factor. Ring v. State, 25 P.3d 1139, 1151 (Ariz. 2001). Unlike the Arizona law at issue in Ring, Florida law only permits the imposition of a death sentence upon the findings of sufficient aggravating circumstances and insufficient mitigating circumstances to outweigh the aggravators. Fla. Stat. § 921.141(3).

Florida was its continued reliance on Hildwin v. Florida, 490 U.S. 638 (1989), which held that the Sixth Amendment “does not require that the specific findings authorizing the imposition of the sentence of death be made by the jury.” This Court’s reliance in Bottoson upon the continued vitality of Hildwin (and related findings in Spaziano v. Florida, 468 U.S. 447 (1984)) was misplaced and contrary to Apprendi and Ring. “Spaziano and Hildwin summarized earlier precedent to conclude that ‘the Sixth Amendment does not require that specific findings authorizing the imposition of the sentence of death be made by the jury.’ Their conclusion was wrong, and irreconcilable with Apprendi.” Hurst, 136 S. Ct. at 623.

The fact that sufficient aggravating circumstances must be found under Florida law to render a capital defendant death-eligible is unlike the Arizona law that was at issue in Ring, and has at least two important consequences in assessing Hurst’s scope and impact in Florida: (1) the finding of a prior violent felony does not cure Hurst error, and (2) a finding of the felony murder aggravator does not cure Hurst error. Before a death sentence can be imposed, there must be a finding that those circumstances—if present—are sufficient in a given case to justify a death sentence.³ Not all prior violent felonies are equal. The sufficiency finding required by the statute means that there must first be a case-specific assessment of the facts of the prior crime and a determination by the jury as to whether those facts—in conjunction with the factual basis for any other aggravators—are sufficient to justify the imposition of a death sentence. Then the jury must likewise evaluate the mitigating factors and make a finding that they are not sufficient to outweigh the aggravators.

³ Evidencing this are the numerous cases whether this Court has found single aggravating circumstances to be insufficient to support a death sentence during proportionality review. See, e.g., Yacob v. State, 136 So. 3d 539 (Fla. 2014) (felony murder and pecuniary gain merged); Ballard v. State, 66 So. 3d 912 (Fla. 2011) (CCP); Williams v. State, 37 So. 3d 187 (Fla. 2010) (avoid arrest); Green v. State,

Williams’s jury did not make any such findings. In fact, they made no findings at all. The jury was repeatedly told that its role in determining punishment was 975 So. 2d 1081 (Fla. 2008) (prior conviction); Jones v. State, 963 So. 2d 180 (Fla. 2007) (felony murder and pecuniary gain merged); Offord v. State, 959 So. 2d 187 (Fla. 2007) (HAC); Almeida v. State, 748 So. 2d 922 (Fla. 1999) (prior conviction); Woods v. State, 733 So. 2d 980 (Fla. 1999) (prior conviction); Hardy v. State, 716 So. 2d 761 (Fla. 1998) (victim was law enforcement); Jones v. State, 705 So. 2d 1364 (Fla. 1998) (felony murder and pecuniary gain merged); Jorgenson v. State, 714 So. 2d 423 (Fla. 1998) (prior conviction); Williams v. State, 707 So. 2d 683 (Fla. 1998) (pecuniary gain); Besaraba v. State, 656 So. 2d 441 (Fla. 1995) (prior conviction); Chaky v. State, 651 So. 2d 1169 (Fla. 1995) (prior conviction); Sinclair v. State, 657 So. 2d 1138 (Fla. 1995) (felony murder); Thompson v. State, 647 So. 2d 824 (Fla. 1994) (felony murder); DeAngelo v. State, 616 So. 2d 440 (Fla. 1993) (CCP); Knowles v. State, 632 So. 2d 62 (Fla. 1993) (prior conviction); White v. State, 616 So. 2d 21 (Fla. 1993) (prior conviction); Clark v. State, 609 So. 2d 513 (Fla. 1992) (pecuniary gain); Klokoc v. State, 589 So. 2d 219 (Fla. 1991) (CCP); McKinney v. State, 579 So. 2d 80 (Fla. 1991) (felony murder); Nibert v. State, 574 So. 2d 1059 (Fla. 1990) (HAC); Smalley v. State, 546 So. 2d 720 (Fla. 1989) (HAC); Songer v. State, 544 So. 2d 1010 (Fla. 1989) (under sentence); Lloyd v. State, 524 So. 2d 396 (Fla. 1988) (felony murder); Proffitt v. State, 510 So. 2d 896 (Fla. 1987) (felony murder); Caruthers v. State, 465 So. 2d 496 (Fla. 1985) (felony murder); Ross v. State, 474 So. 2d 1170 (Fla. 1985) (HAC); Rembert v. State, 445 So. 2d 337 (Fla. 1984) (felony murder); Menendez v. State, 419 So. 2d 312 (Fla. 1982) (felony murder).

merely advisory, and that it was only required to provide the court with an advisory opinion or recommendation. The form signed and returned to the court stated that “a majority of the jury . . . advise and recommend to the Court that it impose the death penalty” (V2/353-54). The jury made no findings as to the facts necessary to make Williams death-eligible and the State “cannot now treat the advisory recommendation by the jury as the necessary factual finding that Ring requires.” Hurst, 136 S. Ct. at 622; Caldwell v. Mississippi, 472 U.S. 320 (1985).

Although the U.S. Supreme Court did not specifically address whether Petitioner Hurst was entitled to a jury determination of his intellectual disability (ID), the logic of Hurst dictates that the Sixth Amendment right must also attach to an ID claim. The Hurst Court ruled that “[t]he Sixth Amendment requires a jury, not a judge, to find each necessary to impose a sentence of death.” Florida Statute § 921.137(2) provides that “[a] sentence of death may not be imposed upon a defendant convicted of a capital felony if it is determined in accordance with this section that the defendant is intellectually disabled.” Thus, a defendant’s lack of ID is a factual finding necessary to impose death. But in Florida, the determination of whether someone is ID is made by a judge, not a jury. Fla. Stat. § 921.137(4).

Williams is categorically ineligible for death if he is ID. Once there is evidence raising a question of fact as to a defendant’s ID, there must be a factual finding that the defendant is not ID before he can be subjected to a death sentence.

Under Hurst, such a factual finding must be made by a jury, not a judge.

The elements a jury must find in order to subject a defendant to death must be found unanimously.

Apprendi, Ring, and Hurst hold that the facts necessary to render a capital defendant death-eligible are elements which must be found by a jury. “If a State makes an increase in a defendant’s authorized punishment contingent on the finding of a fact, that fact—no matter how the State labels it—must be found by a jury beyond a reasonable doubt.” Hurst, 136 S. Ct. at 602.

The requirement that Florida juries find elements unanimously has been an “inviolable tenet of Florida jurisprudence since the State was created.” Bottoson, 833 So. 2d at 714 (Shaw, J., concurring). This Court has held true to that requirement over the years, stating in Patrick v. Young, 18 Fla. 50 (Fla. 1881) that “[t]he record of a verdict implies a unanimous consent of the jury, and is conclusive evidence of that fact,” and later in Jones v. State, 92 So. 2d 261 (Fla. 1956) that “[i]n this state, the verdict of the jury must be unanimous.”

This Court memorialized the unanimity requirement in Florida Rule of Criminal Procedure 3.440, which provides that “[n]o verdict may be rendered unless all of the trial jurors concur in it,” that a court may not even correct matters of form in a verdict without “the unanimous consent of the jurors,” and that a verdict cannot be entered of record if “disagreement is expressed by one or more” jurors. Fla. R.

Crim. P. 3.440 (Rendition of Verdict; Reception and Recording). The requirement also appears in Florida Court’s Standard Jury Instruction 3.10, which admonishes juries that “[w]hatever verdict you render must be unanimous, that is, each juror must agree to the same verdict.” The right to a unanimous jury finding on elements of crime is foundational in Florida law.

This means that Hurst’s application of Apprendi to the § 921.141(3) findings comes with a concomitant requirement of unanimity. At issue in Apprendi was a sentencing statute in which the New Jersey Legislature “decided to make the hate crime enhancement a ‘sentencing factor,’ rather than an element of an underlying offense,” so that it would be found by a judge, rather than a jury. Apprendi, 530 U.S. at 471. This violated the Sixth Amendment and the right to a jury trial embodied therein, as the United States Supreme Court explained in Apprendi:

“[T]o guard against a spirit of oppression and tyranny on the part of rulers,” and “as the great bulwark of [our] civil and political liberties,” trial by jury has been understood to require that “the truth of every accusation, whether preferred in the shape of indictment, information, or appeal, should afterwards be confirmed by the unanimous suffrage of twelve of [the defendant’s] equals and neighbours”

Apprendi, 530 U.S. at 477 (alterations and emphasis in original) (citations omitted).

Observing that “[a]ny possible distinction between an ‘element’ of a felony offense and a ‘sentencing factor’ was unknown to the practice of criminal indictment, trial by jury, and judgment by court as it existed during the years surrounding our Nation’s founding,” Id. at 478 (footnote omitted), the Apprendi Court ruled that any finding of fact which “expose[s a defendant] to a penalty exceeding the maximum he would receive if punished according to the facts reflected in the jury verdict alone,” is an element, and thus must be found by a jury. Ring, 536 U.S. at 586 (citing Apprendi).

Because in Florida “the maximum sentence a capital felon may receive on the basis of the conviction alone is life imprisonment,” Hurst, 136 S. Ct. at 620, the § 921.141(3) findings are an element of the offense of capital murder. This conclusion necessarily follows from Hurst, because the only way the Sixth Amendment would have applied to those findings was if they were elements. There is no Hurst without § 921.141(3) delineating elements of the crime of capital murder.

Now that Hurst has held that Bottoson erred in failing to find Florida’s capital sentencing scheme unconstitutional under Apprendi and Ring, the factual determinations set forth as prerequisites for the imposition of a death sentence in § 921.141(3) are now, in fact, Apprendi elements which must be found unanimously by a jury.

Williams’s jury never made any findings. No sufficiency determination was made, and no elements were found, unanimously or otherwise. Under Hurst, the jury’s advisory recommendation is meaningless, unconstitutional, and void.

Hurst* is a development of fundamental significance under Witt v. State and must be given retroactive effect.

The essential principle of Florida’s retroactivity law is that only the very important cases should be retroactively applied. Only a “sweeping change of law” of “fundamental significance” constituting a “jurisprudential upheaval” will qualify. Mitchell v. Moore, 786 So. 2d 521, 529 (Fla. 2001) (brackets omitted) (citing Witt, 387 So. 2d at 925, 929, 931). Hurst, perhaps more so than virtually any other case, satisfies this standard.

Before Hurst, Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238 (1972) was the paradigmatic example.⁴ In Furman, the U.S. Supreme Court found that the death penalty “could not be imposed under sentencing procedures that created a substantial risk that it would be inflicted in an arbitrary and capricious manner.” Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 188 (1976); see also Furman, 408 U.S. at 239-40. Furman was a difficult decision for the Supreme Court, which “had not been so visibly fragmented since its earliest days,” agreeing only on a “terse per curiam statement announcing the result reached,” and issuing nine separate opinions, four in dissent. Robert A. Burt, ⁴ When Hurst’s predecessor Ring issued and it appeared that Ring’s holding would do essentially what Hurst’s has now done, Justice Anstead commented that “Ring is clearly the most significant death penalty decision of the U.S. Supreme Court since the decision in Furman v. Georgia,” that “we cannot simply stand mute in the face of such a momentous decision,” and that “[t]he question is where do we go from here.” Bottoson, 833 So. 2d at 703. (Anstead, J., concurring).

Disorder in the Court: The Death Penalty and the Constitution, 85 Mich. L. Rev. 1741, 1758 (1987).

On the basis of Furman, this Court ordered life sentences imposed on all capital defendants who had been under a sentence of death. Anderson v. State, 267 So. 2d 8, 9-10 (Fla. 1972).⁵ There was no question, no statutory interpretation, no retroactivity analysis, no harmless error analysis, no recalcitrance, and no attempts to save prior death sentences and still go forward with undeniably unconstitutional executions.

The Florida Legislature, in anticipation of the holding in Furman, enacted Florida Statutes § 775.082(2) which provides:

In the event the death penalty in a capital felony is held to be unconstitutional by the Florida Supreme Court or the United States Supreme Court, the court having jurisdiction over a person previously sentenced to death for a capital felony shall cause such person to be brought before the court, and the court shall sentence such person to life imprisonment as provided in subsection (1).

This Court read this statute to leave absolutely no discretion for Florida courts when, as in Hurst, the death penalty was found unconstitutional in Furman. This Court found that the statute requires “an automatic sentence and a reduction from the sentence previously imposed,” because “[t]he Court has no discretion.” Anderson, 267 So. 2d at 9. The Court found simply that “[u]nder the circumstances of these particular cases, it is our opinion that we should correct the illegal sentences previously imposed without returning the prisoners to the trial court,” and vacated the sentences. Id. at 10. Everyone who had received a sentence of death under the capital sentencing scheme declared unconstitutional in Furman received the benefit of the decision.

⁵ In Anderson, this Court explained that after Furman issued, the Attorney General of Florida filed a motion asking that life sentences be imposed in 40 capital cases in which the defendant was under a death sentence. Anderson, 267 So. 2d at 9 (“The position of the Attorney General is, that under the authority of Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 92 S.Ct. 2726, 33 L.Ed.2d 346, the death sentence imposed in these cases is illegal.”).

The imposition of life sentences on defendants sentenced under the death penalty scheme found unconstitutional in Furman was a ministerial, administrative matter. There was no inquiry into retroactivity. There was no argument that a harmless error analysis should be conducted. There was no parsing of the language of Furman to attempt to minimize its impact. There was no discretion to exercise. Life sentences were mandated for everyone sentenced to death under the unconstitutional sentencing scheme.

Because Williams was sentenced under an unconstitutional scheme, he should be resentenced to life imprisonment according to §775.082. However, if a retroactivity analysis is deemed necessary, Hurst must be found to apply retroactively under Florida law. Hurst, unlike Furman, directly assessed Florida’s scheme and found it unconstitutional. Hurst, unlike Furman, did not fragment the Court at all. On the contrary, Hurst was an 8-1, resoundingly unified pronouncement from the Supreme Court that Florida's sentencing of capital defendants has long been unconstitutional. In Florida, Hurst is just as much a sweeping jurisprudential upheaval of fundamental significance as was Furman.

The retroactive treatment of Gideon v. Wainwright, 372 U.S. 335 (1963) is instructive here. This Court took up the matter of how to provide a means for convicted defendants to vindicate their Sixth Amendment rights identified in Gideon. Roy v. Wainwright, 151 So. 2d 825, 826 (Fla. 1963) (“As we read Gideon, the rule now simply is that the Sixth Amendment's guarantee of counsel is one of the fundamental rights essential to a fair trial.”). To preserve the effectiveness of judicial administration but still give retroactive effect to Gideon, this Court adopted and made effective Criminal Procedural Rule 1 on April 1, 1963. This rule provided a postconviction vehicle for seeking relief on the basis of Gideon, and was the forerunner of the current Rule 3.850 and Rule 3.851. Id. It is clear from Roy that this Court accepted that the burden on the court system was an unavoidable fact in light of the ruling in Gideon and Florida's history of not guaranteeing counsel to all criminal defendants.

At most, Hurst would affect roughly 400 death-sentenced prisoners, compared to Gideon's unimaginable 4,500. The most that a death-sentenced prisoner could obtain under Hurst is a life sentence without parole. Section 775.082(2) can be used to permit death row inmates to automatically receive life sentences with minimal expenditure of resources.

This Court explained in Falcon v. State, 162 So. 3d 954, 962 (Fla. 2015), that the principles of fairness underlying Witt “make it very ‘difficult to justify depriving a person of his liberty or his life, under process no longer considered acceptable and no longer applied to indistinguishable cases.’” In Falcon, this Court found that applying a constitutional rule to some but not other similarly situated juvenile offenders meant that some would “serve lesser sentences merely because their convictions and sentences were not final” when the rule was announced. Id. The Court stated that “[t]he patent unfairness of depriving indistinguishable juvenile offenders of their liberty for the rest of their lives, based solely on when their cases were decided, weighs heavily in favor of [retroactivity].” Id.

If the unfairness resulting from loss of liberty demands retroactive application, then so too does loss of life. If the unfairness to juveniles in indistinguishable cases receiving different non-capital sentences is too great, then so too is the unfairness of executing Williams while other defendants with indistinguishable cases will receive the benefit of Hurst (and not be put to death under an unconstitutional death penalty scheme). Such patent unfairness and arbitrariness, certainly great enough to implicate the Eighth Amendment principles enunciated in Furman v. Georgia, requires that Hurst be applied retroactively.

This Court's prior discussions regarding the retroactivity of Apprendi and Ring do not resolve or affect in any way Hurst's retroactivity.

This Court engaged in a retroactive analysis of Apprendi in Hughes v. State, 901 So. 2d 837, 838 (Fla. 2005), and of Ring in Johnson v. State, 904 So. 2d 400 (Fla. 2005). However, the Witt analyses in both Hughes and Johnson were infused with this Court's failure to recognize that Apprendi and Ring do in fact apply in Florida, and that as a result, Florida's capital sentencing scheme was unconstitutional. In neither Hughes nor Johnson did this Court resolve the retroactivity of Hurst.

Hughes and Johnson, decided on the same day, both presumed the inapplicability of Ring in Florida in assessing the impact of Apprendi and Ring under Witt. Because the Witt analysis depends on the impact of the change in the law, a prior finding that there is little to no change profoundly affects the Witt analysis. Now that we know from Hurst that Apprendi renders Florida's capital sentencing scheme unconstitutional and caused Hildwin and Spaziano to be overruled, we must do a new assessment under Witt. Hurst's retroactivity in Florida must be assessed, not Apprendi's (which was not a capital case), and certainly not Ring's (which contemplated Arizona's sentencing scheme).

When this Court adopted the Witt retroactivity standard, the Court specifically ruled that it was not bound by the federal standard. Witt, 387 So. 2d at 926. This Court found federal retroactivity law too restrictive, and crafted Witt specifically to provide greater, more expansive, more inclusive protection. See Johnson, 904 So. 2d at 409 (reaffirming commitment to “our longstanding Witt analysis, which provides more expansive retroactivity standards than those adopted in Teague [v. Lane, 489 U.S. 288 (1989”)]; see also Hughes, 901 So. 2d at 857 (Anstead, J., dissenting) (observing that the federal standard is “considerably more restrictive” than Witt).

The decision to have a more expansive retroactivity standard was wise because the federal standard was “fashioned upon considerations wholly inapplicable to state law systems.” Id. at 861 (Anstead, J., dissenting). The federal standard in Teague is “focus[ed] on the impropriety of disturbing a final conviction, it diverts attention from constitutional violations and prohibits relief except in the very rare case.” State v. Whitfield, 107 S.W. 3d 253, 268 n. 15 (Mo. 2003) (quotations omitted). “[T]he Teague plurality’s main focus and concern in adopting a more restrictive view of retroactivity was to limit the scope of federal habeas review of state convictions.” Hughes, 901 So. 2d at 862. Indeed, federal habeas courts, in capital cases, are directed to uphold state court decisions that they find to be incorrect, as long as there is some reasoning to support the incorrect ruling. See Williams v. Taylor, 529 U.S. 362, 410 (2000).

It would thus seem that some reasoning would be required on the part of state courts, but it is not. Federal habeas courts must supply their own reasoning—asking “what arguments or theories supported or . . . could have supported[] the state court’s decision,” Harrington v. Richter, 562 U.S. 86, 102 (2011)—support, and ultimately uphold incorrect state court ruling by no reasoning at all. The reason for this is that “requiring a statement of reasons [from state courts] could undercut state practices designed to preserve the integrity of the case-law tradition.” Id. The goal is “deference and latitude” for state courts. Id. It is not to do justice on the facts. Teague arises from these same considerations and has been “universally criticized by legal commentators ‘as being fundamentally unfair, internally inconsistent, and unreasonably harsh.’” Hughes, 901 So. 2d at 862 (Anstead, J., dissenting).

Thus, “[i]t would make little sense for state courts to adopt the Teague analysis when a substantial part of Teague’s rationale is deference to a state’s substantive law and review.” Hughes, 901 So. 2d at 863 (Anstead, J., dissenting). On the contrary, “[i]f anything, the more restrictive standards of federal review place increased and heightened importance upon the quality and reliability of the state proceedings.” Id. This nation’s judicial system presumes that Florida courts will do justice, will get it right, will be hypersensitive to constitutional violations in the first instance, and require federal habeas review only in the rarest of cases. The reliability and confidence in Florida’s judicial system depends on Florida courts being more protective of constitutional rights, not less.

Thus, it is hugely problematic that the Hughes Court “rel[ied] almost exclusively on federal decisions that evaluate retroactivity under the irrelevant and considerably more restrictive federal standard announced in the plurality opinion in Teague” Hughes, 901 So. 2d at 857 (Anstead, J., dissenting). It is hugely problematic that the Johnson Court “[d]eferr[ed] to the United States Supreme Court’s assessment of its own decision in Ring,” Johnson, 904 So. 2d at 410, where “in Schriro v. Summerlin, 542 U.S. 348 (2004), [it found] that Ring does not apply retroactively for purposes of federal law.” Id. at 408 (citation partially omitted).

In Hughes and Johnson, Justice Anstead warned that the Court, in its retroactivity analyses, “simply turned a blind eye to the most important and unique feature of the American justice system upon which we have relied for centuries to ensure fairness and justice for our citizens: the right to trial by jury,” lamenting that “[n]o other right in our system has been so jealously guarded, until today.” Hughes, 901 So. 2d at 858 (Anstead, J., dissenting)(citation omitted). Hughes and Johnson should have no bearing on this Court’s assessment of Hurst’s retroactivity.

Hurst error is structural and can never be harmless.

After declaring Florida’s capital sentencing scheme unconstitutional, Hurst reversed the judgment of this Court and remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with the Hurst opinion. The U.S. Supreme Court specifically, and as a matter of course, left it for this Court to consider on remand “the State’s assertion that any error was harmless.” Hurst, 136 S. Ct. at 624. The U.S. Supreme Court stated, “[t]his Court normally leaves it to state courts to consider whether an error is harmless, and we see no reason to depart from that pattern here.” Id. It is important to note that the Court’s only purpose in addressing the State’s assertion of harmless error was to decline to address it in any way. Nothing in Hurst requires or endorses a harmless error analysis. And indeed, such an analysis would be inappropriate, because Hurst found a structural error that can never be harmless. Florida cannot correct its error in allowing trial judges to do the work of juries by substituting postconviction or appellate judges to do the work of juries.

The U.S. Supreme Court recognized a limited class of fundamental constitutional errors that defy harmless error analysis in Arizona v. Fulminante, 499 U.S. 279, 309 (1991). Structural errors of this type are so intrinsically harmful as to require automatic reversal without regard to their effect on the outcome. The Hurst error in Williams’s sentencing—stripping the capital jury of its constitutional fact-finding role at the penalty phase—was a “defect affecting the framework within which the trial proceeds, rather than simply an error in the trial process itself.” See id. at 310. Indeed, the Hurst error “infected the entire trial process” in Williams’s case (see Brecht v. Abrahamson, 507 U.S. 619, 630 (1993)) and deprived Williams of “basic protections without which a [capital] trial cannot reliably serve its function as a vehicle for determination” of whether the elements necessary for a death sentence exist. Neder v. United States, 527 U.S. 1, 8 (1999).

Harmless error analysis would require this Court to determine in the first instance “not whether, in a trial that occurred without the error, a [jury fact-finding of sufficient aggravating circumstances] would surely have been rendered, but whether the [death sentence] actually rendered in [original] trial was surely unattributable to the error.” Sullivan v. Louisiana, 508 U.S. 275, 280 (1993). Since there are no jury findings, it is not possible to review whether such findings would have occurred absent the Hurst error.

It is impossible to guess how the makeup of the jury would have been different if the prospective jurors had known it would be their responsibility to unanimously decide whether Williams would live or die. It cannot be known how counsel’s trial preparation and penalty phase strategies were impacted by the now unconstitutional capital sentencing scheme. If a harmless error analysis is deemed necessary, a trial court would first have to conduct fact-finding as to the impact of the Hurst error.

CONCLUSION AND RELIEF SOUGHT

Williams asks that this Court vacate his unconstitutional death sentence and impose a life sentence; or vacate and remand for an evidentiary hearing and/or jury trial on his ID claim; or grant any other relief that this Court deems just and proper.

Respectfully submitted,

/s/ Nicole M. Noël

NICOLE M. NOËL

Assistant CCRC

Florida Bar No. 41744

noeln@ccsr.state.fl.us

MARTA JASZCZOLT

Staff Attorney

Florida Bar No. 119537

jaszczolm@ccsr.state.fl.us

CCRC-South

1 East Broward Boulevard, Suite 444

Fort Lauderdale, FL 33301

(954) 713-1284

(954) 713-1299 (fax)

COUNSEL FOR WILLIAMS

CERTIFICATES OF SERVICE AND FONT

I certify that a true copy of the foregoing was electronically served to Leslie Campbell, Esq. at leslie.campbell@myfloridalegal.com on March 2, 2016.

I further certify that this brief was typed in Times New Roman 14 point font.

/s/ Nicole M. Noël

NICOLE M. NOËL

Assistant CCRC

Florida Bar No. 41744