STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND FACTS

Ronnie Keith Williams ("Williams") was indicted on single count of first-degree murder of Lisa Dyke ("Dyke") (4ROA.1 1-2). Following remand for a retrial, Williams v. State, 792 So.2d 1207 (Fla. 2001) the jury convicted him as charged, finding both premeditated and felony murder (04ROA.4 382) and voted ten to two for the death penalty. This Court affirmed¹ Williams v. State, 967 So. 2d 735 (Fla. 2007) and on March 24, 2008 certiorari review was denied. Williams v. Florida, 128 S. Ct. 1709 (2009). Presently, Williams' postconviction appeal is pending which includes a challenge to the denial of his Intellectual Disability claim after an evidentiary hearing.

SUMMARY OF THE ARGUMENT

Issue I - Williams is not entitled to relief under Hurst v. Florida, 136 S.Ct. 616 (2016) as it does not require jury sentencing, is not retroactive under Witt v. State, 387 So.2d 922, 925 (1980), and does not implicate §775.082(2). Williams has a prior violent felony which rendered him death eligible, Williams, 967 So.2d at 767.

Furthermore, one of the aggravating factors found by the trial court in this case was Williams's prior convictions for two violent felonies, and this is a factor "which under Apprendi and Ring need not be found by the jury." Jones v. State, 855 So.2d 611, 619 (Fla.2003).

thus, his sentence is constitutional under Almendarez-Torres v. United States, 523 U.S. 224 (1998); Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584 (2002); Alleyne v. United States, 133 S. Ct. 2151 (2013).

SUPPLEMENTAL ISSUE 1

WILLIAMS IS NOT ENTITLED TO RELIEF UNDER HURST (restated)

Williams Hurst rendered Florida's asserts capital sentencing unconstitutional entitling him to relief as the jury did not make any findings regarding his sentence or that he was not intellectually disabled (ID). Hurst does not entitle Williams to relief as Hurst is not retroactive. Also, Hurst does not apply there is a recidivist aggravator in this case which qualifies as an exception as jury findings do not apply to such aggravators. Almendarez-Torres v. United States, 523 U.S. 224 (1998). Even if Hurst does apply, any error is harmless.

In Hurst, the Supreme Court declared certain aspects of Florida's capital sentencing, which allowed "the judge alone to find the existence of an aggravating circumstance" violated the Sixth Amendment right-to-a-jury-trial. The statute was unconstitutional because, under Florida law, a "jury's mere recommendation is not enough" as the judge's sentencing order must "reflect the trial judge's independent judgment about the existence of aggravating and mitigating factors." Hurst, 136 S.Ct. at 619-20. The Court explained that the Sixth Amendment and due process "requires that each element of a crime be proved to a jury beyond a reasonable doubt." Hurst, 136 S.Ct. at 621 quoting Alleyne v. United States, 133 S.Ct. 2151, 2156 (2013). It then noted that Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466, 494, (2000), held "any fact that exposes the defendant to a greater punishment than that authorized by the jury's guilty verdict is an element that must be submitted to a jury. Hurst, 136 S.Ct. at 621. Turning to Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584, 608, n. 6 (2002), the Court noted it had expanded Apprendi to Arizona capital defendants and the same analysis applied to Florida. Hurst, 136 S.Ct. at 621-622. The problem the Court identified was the "central and singular role the judge plays under Florida law" because under Florida's statute a defendant was not "eligible for death" until there were "findings by the court." Hurst, 136 S.Ct. at 622. The Court then overruled Spaziano v. Florida, 468 U.S. 447 (1984), and Hildwin v. Florida, 490 U.S. 638 (1989).

A. STANDARD OF REVIEW - The standard of review for a purely legal claim raising a Sixth Amendment claim is de novo. Cf. Plott v. State, 148 So. 3d 90, 93 (Fla. 2014)

B. HURST DOES NOT REQUIRE JURY SENTENCING - Williams asserts that Hurst mandates jury sentencing as it requires the jury to find not only that the aggravators, but that sufficient aggravators exist, and that insufficient mitigators exist to outweigh the aggravators. He also claims jury findings, in his case, must include that he is not ID (Brief at 7 and 11). Hurst does not require anything more the jury find the defendant death eligible; it does not require jury sentencing.

Hurst is an expansion of Ring to Florida and Ring was based on Apprendi. The holding in Apprendi was that any fact, other than the fact of a prior conviction, that "increases the penalty for a crime" beyond the prescribed statutory maximum must be submitted to a jury, and proved beyond a reasonable doubt. Apprendi, 530 U.S. at 490. As explained by Ring, because aggravators "operate as the functional equivalent of an element of a greater offense, the Sixth Amendment requires that they be found by a jury." Ring, 536 U.S. at 609 (citation omitted).

The Hurst court cited Alleyne, which held any facts that increase the mandatory minimum sentence for an offense must be submitted to the jury and found beyond a reasonable doubt because "the Sixth Amendment applies where a finding of fact both alters the legally prescribed range and does so in a way that aggravates the penalty." Alleyne, 133 S. Ct. at 2151, 2155, 2161 n.2. The Alleyne Court explained, "this is distinct from factfinding used to guide judicial discretion in selecting a punishment within limits fixed by law." Id (emphasis supplied). "While such findings of fact may lead judges to select sentences that are more severe than the ones they would have selected without those facts, the Sixth Amendment does not govern that element of sentencing." Alleyne, 133 S.Ct. at 2161, n.2. It is only facts that increase or aggravate the penalty that are treated as elements that must be found by the jury. As such, neither mitigators nor ID, which is akin to mitigation, are not jury questions under the Sixth Amendment.

The only facts in Florida's death penalty statute that increase the penalty to death are aggravating circumstances. In Florida, eligibility is determined by the existence of at least one aggravating factor. State v. Steele, 921 So. 2d 538, 543 (Fla. 2005) ("[t]o obtain a death sentence, the State must prove beyond а reasonable doubt at least one aggravating circumstance"); Ault v. State, 53 So.3d 175, 205 (Fla. 2010) (2010) (stating that "to return an advisory sentence in favor of death a majority of the jury must find beyond a reasonable doubt the existence of at least one aggravating circumstance listed in the capital sentencing statute."); Zommer v. State, 31 So.3d 733, 754 (Fla. 2010) (State v. Dixon, 283 So.2d 1 (Fla. 1973), interpreted "sufficient aggravating circumstances" to mean one or more such circumstance); Tuilaepa v. California, 512 U.S. 967, 971-72 (1994) ("[t]o render a defendant eligible for the death penalty in a homicide case, we have indicated that the trier of fact must convict the defendant of murder and find one 'aggravating circumstance' (or its equivalent) at either the quilt or penalty phase") citing Lowenfield v. Phelps, 484 U.S. 231, 244-246 (1988). Presumptively, death is the appropriate sentence. Dixon, 283 So.2d at 9. As eligibility is a matter of state law, this Court's determination controls. Ring, 536 U.S. 603 (noting Arizona's construction of own at law is authoritative). The suggestion Hurst requires juries find there are insufficient mitigators to outweigh aggravators or that a defendant is not ID is meritless. ID is a mitigating factor and weighing is not even a fact. Rather, weighing is a judgment call. Kansas v. Carr, 136 S.Ct. 633 (2016) (noting aggravating factors are "purely factual determination" but, in contrast, whether mitigation exists is "largely a judgment call (or perhaps a value call)" and the ultimate question whether mitigating circumstances outweigh aggravating circumstances is "mostly a question of mercy."). Hurst specifies constitutional error occurs when a judge alone finds the existence of an aggravator. Hurst, 136 S.Ct. at 624. Likewise, the fact that a defendant is not ID does not increase his punishment. Under Hurst and Carr, only aggravators must be found by the jury.

C. HURST IS NOT RETROACTIVE - Regardless of the scope of Hurst, it is not retroactive. Williams' conviction and death sentence became final with the denial of certiorari on March 24, 2008. Williams, 128 S.Ct. at 1709. When a constitutional rule is announced, its requirements apply to those cases on direct review. Griffith v. Kentucky, 479 U.S. 314, 323 (1987). Once a case is final, application of a new rule of constitutional criminal procedure is limited.² Such new rules apply retroactively only if they fit within one of two narrow exceptions.³ Schriro v. Summerlin, 542 U.S. 348, 351 (2004). The Supreme Court determined Ring was not retroactive as it was a procedural, not a substantive change; Ring only "altered the range of permissible methods for determining whether a defendant's conduct is punishable by death, requiring that a jury rather than a judge find the essential facts bearing on punishment." Summerlin, 542 U.S. at 349, 352-53.

The right to jury trial is fundamental to our system of criminal procedure, and States are bound to enforce the Sixth Amendment's guarantees as we interpret them. But it does not follow that, when a criminal defendant has had a full trial and one round of appeals in which the State faithfully applied the Constitution as we understood it at the time, he may nevertheless continue to litigate his claims indefinitely in hopes that we will one day have a change of heart. Ring announced a new procedural rule that does not apply retroactively to cases already final on direct review.

Summerlin, 542 U.S. at 358.⁴ Ring did not create a new right.

² Williams challenged his sentence under Ring on direct appeal. Such was rejected. Williams, 967 So.2d at 767. This renders the claims procedurally barred. See Rodriguez v. State, 919 So.2d 1252, 1281 n.16 (Fla. 2005); Hardwick v. Dugger, 648 So.2d 100, 105 (Fla. 1994). While Hurst is constitutional in nature, it is not retroactive and cannot revive barred claims.

³ Relevant for this argument is the exception: (2) procedural rule constituting a watershed rule of criminal procedure implicating fundamental fairness and accuracy of criminal proceedings. Teague v. Lane, 498 U.S. 288, 310-13 (1989).

That right was created by the Sixth Amendment guaranteeing the right to a jury trial.⁵ Ring merely created a new procedural rule. Under Teague v. Lane, 498 U.S. 288, 310-13 (1989), a new rule generally applies only to cases on direct review. Whorton v. Bockting, 549 U.S. 406, 416 (2007) (Crawford v. Washington, 541 U.S. 36 (2004) not retroactive).

Given Ring is not retroactive, it follows Hurst cannot be retroactive⁶ as it is not only an expansion of Ring to Florida, but in deciding Hurst, the Supreme Court overrule decades old precedent (Spaziano and Hildwin) finding Florida's capital sentencing constitutional. Hurst, 136 S.Ct. at 623-24. Like than 50 cases). Since Ring, some 14 years passed without the Supreme Court accepting a case, until Hurst, challenging Florida's capital sentencing statute under Ring. There were significant differences between the Arizona and Florida statutes that rendered the Hurst decision far less than certain. See Hurst, 136 S.Ct. at 625 (Alito, Justice, dissenting) (observing unlike Arizona, in Florida "the jury plays a critically important role" and the Court's "decision in Ring did not decide whether this procedure violate[d] the Sixth Amendment"). 5 The right to a jury trial was extended to the States in Duncan v. Louisiana, 391 U.S. 145 (1968) and the Court declined to find retroactivity. DeStefano v. Woods, 392 U.S. 631 (1968) Apprendi, 530 U.S. at 494 merely extended the right to the sentencing phases when an increase in possible punishment was sought. Hurst is based on an entire line of jurisprudence, none of which has been held retroactive. See DeStefano, 392 U.S. at 631; McCoy v. United States, 266 F.3d 1245, 1255-59 (11th Cir. 2001) (Apprendi not retroactive); Varela v. United States, 400 F.3d 864, 866-67 (11th Cir. 2005) (explaining decisions such as Ring, Blakely, and Booker applying Apprendi's "prototypical procedural rule" are not retroactive); Crayton v. United States, 799 F.3d

623, 624-25 (7th Cir. 2015) cert. denied, 136 S. Ct. 424 (2015) (Alleyne v. United States, 133 S. Ct. 2151, 2156 (2013), which extended Apprendi did not apply retroactively).

Ring, Hurst is a new procedural rule, not dictated by Ring as prior Supreme Court precedent was overruled. As provided in Bockting, Crawford was a new rule because it was not "dictated" by prior precedent, but overruled Ohio v. Roberts, 448 U.S. 56, 66 (1980). The announcement of a new rule, where prior precedent is overruled, runs from the date of the new case; here, from January 12, 2016 for Hurst. Hurst will not apply to any case final before January 12, 2016. Williams' case was final on March 24, 2008. Williams, 128 S.Ct. at 1709; Hurst does not apply.

In Johnson v. State, 904 So.2d 400, 411-12 (Fla. 2005) this Court decided Ring was not retroactively under Witt v. State, 387 So.2d 922 (Fla. 1980)⁷ specifically noting the severe and unsettling impact retroactive application would have on our justice system with nearly 400 death sentenced inmates:

...the three Witt factors, separately and together, weigh against the retroactive application of Ring in Florida. To apply Ring retroactively "would, we are convinced, destroy the stability of the law, render punishments uncertain and therefore ineffectual, and burden the judicial machinery of our state...beyond any tolerable limit." Witt, 387 So. 2d at 929-30. Our analysis reveals that Ring, although an important development in criminal procedure, is not a "jurisprudential upheaval" of "sufficient magnitude to necessitate retroactive application." Id. at 929. We therefore hold that Ring does not apply retroactively...

The Arizona Supreme Court reached the same conclusion after Ring. See State v. Towery, 204 Ariz. 386, 393-94, 64 P.3d 828, 835-36 (2003) ("[c]onducting new sentencing hearings, many requiring witnesses no longer available, would impose a substantial and unjustified burden on Arizona's administration of justice" and would be inconstant with duty to protect victims' rights under State Constitution).

Williams claims other cases such as Gideon v. Wainwright, 373 U.S. 335 (1963) Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238 (1972); Hitchcock v. Dugger, 481 U.S. 393 (1987); and Flacon v. State, 162 So.3d 954 (Fla. 2015) were given retroactive application necessitating the same treatment of Hurst. These cases do not further his position.

Gideon,⁸ is one of the few examples of a "watershed"

⁸ Fundamental fairness is not implicated as one can envision a system of "ordered liberty" where elements of a crime are proven to a judge, not to the jury. United States v. Shunk, 113 F.3d 31, 37 (5th Cir. 1997). An example of a new "watershed" procedural rule is the right to counsel established in Gideon v. Wainwright, 372 U.S. 335, 344 (1963). See Saffle v. Parks, 494 U.S. 484, 495 (1990)(Gideon is retroactive; it seriously increases accuracy of conviction). The exception to nonretroactivity for procedural rules is limited to a small core of rules which seriously enhance accuracy. Graham v. Collins, 506 U.S. 461, 478 (1993). A trial conducted with a procedural error "may still be accurate" and for that reason, "a trial procedural rule under the Sixth Amendment supporting retroactive application. However, it does not mandate retroactive application for Hurst as both Apprendi and Ring have been determined not to be retroactive. While Falcon recognized Miller v. Alabama, 132 S.Ct. 2455 (2012) to have retroactive application, it, like Furman was addressed to the Eighth Amendment, not a Sixth Amendment procedural issue. Falcon and Furman are on a different footing than Hurst and its procedural rule. The fact one constitutional announcement is retroactive and another is not, does not render the decision unfair, but balances the need for fairness and finality.⁹ Johnson, discussed above, dealt with the Sixth Amendment jury trial right and Ring, not the Eighth Amendment, and Williams offers no compelling justification for revisiting Johnson. Assuming, a new Witt analysis would be appropriate, the same factors in Johnson apply with equal force to hold Hurst not retroactive. A different conducted under a procedure found to be unconstitutional in a later case does not, as a general matter, have the automatic consequence of invalidating a defendant's conviction or sentence;" generally, procedural rules are not retroactive. Montgomery v. Louisiana, 136 S.Ct. 718, 730 (2016).

⁹ As noted in Calderon v. Thompson, 523 U.S. 538, 556 (1998): Only with an assurance of real finality can the State execute its moral judgment in a case. Only with real finality can the victims of crime move forward knowing the moral judgment will be carried out. ... To unsettle these expectations is to inflict a profound injury to the "powerful and legitimate interest in punishing the guilty," ... an interest shared by the State and the victims of crime alike. result would be highly deleterious to finality and unsettle reasonable expectations for justice citizens and victims alike.

In Butterworth v. United States, 775 F.3d 459, 467-68 (1st Cir. 2015), cert. denied, 135 S. Ct. 1517 (2015), the Court rejected an attempt to justify retroactive application of Alleyne v. United States, 133 S.Ct. 2151 (2013) based on Apprendi hindsight noting neither the Supreme Court, nor any other federal court, had found a new procedural rule not retroactive under the watershed exception only later to change its mind after "the law's intervening evolution." There is no reason for this Court to depart from its prior determination Ring is not retroactive. Such a departure would represent a clear break from precedent. See Chandler v. Crosby, 916 So.2d 728 (Fla. 2005) (Witt weighs against retroactive application of Crawford and noting "new rule does not present a more compelling objective that outweighs the importance of finality."); Hughes v. State, 901 So.2d 837, 838 (Fla. 2005) (Apprendi not retroactive); State v. Statewright, 300 So.2d 674 (Fla. 1974) (Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U.S. 436 (1966) not retroactive).

Hurst does not provide for retroactive application.¹⁰ This is noteworthy given Teague's reminder "'whether a decision

 $^{^{10}}$ Following oral arguments in Hurst, the Court denied a stay of execution in Jerry Correll v. Florida, 2015 WL 6111441 (Oct. 29, 2015). Correll had applied for the stay based on the pending decision in Hurst; yet the Court denied the stay. It may be [announcing new rule should] be given prospective or retroactive effect should be faced at the time of [that] decision'" and a general acceptance that "...new rules generally should not be applied retroactively to cases on collateral review." Teague, 498 U.S. at 300-05. Like Ring, Hurst is not retroactive.

D. §775.082(2), FLA. STAT. IS NOT IMPLICATED - Williams suggests §775.082(2) requires he receive a life sentence. Hurst did not find "capital punishment" unconstitutional; it only invalidated a procedure thus, by its own terms, §775.082(2) does not apply.¹¹ Anderson v. State, 267 So.2d 8 (Fla. 1972) does not support commutation of his sentence; neither does Donaldson v. Sack, 265 So.2d 499 (Fla. 1972). Donaldson is not a statutory construction case, but one of jurisdiction,¹² the focus which was on cases pending for prosecution when Furman issued, not pipeline cases on direct appeal. This Court's determination to assumed the Court would have granted a stay if it had intended a retroactive application of Hurst.

¹¹ That section provides life sentences are mandated "[i]n the event the death penalty in a capital felony is held to be unconstitutional," as enacted following Furman, to protect society in the event capital punishment as a whole were deemed unconstitutional. Coker v. Georgia, 433 U.S. 584 (1977) ¹² Pased on Florida constitution (1972). Denaldson W. Sack 265

¹² Based on Florida constitution (1972), Donaldson v. Sack, 265 So.2d 499 (Fla. 1972) held circuit courts no longer had jurisdiction of capital cases as there was no valid capital statute; no capital cases existed, as the definition of capital referred to cases where capital punishment was an option. This Court observed §775.082(2) was conditioned on invalidation of the death penalty, but clarified, that provision was not before it, but "we touch on it only because of its materiality in considering the entire matter." Donaldson, 265 So. 2d at 505.

remand all pending death cases for imposition of life sentences was discussed in Anderson where it explained the Attorney General had moved to relinquish jurisdiction to the circuit courts for resentencing to life, taking the position those death sentences were illegal. This Court did not elucidate why commutation of 40 sentences was required, but it is interesting this predated Teague, Witt, and their rules for retroactivity.

Another difference between Furman and Hurst bodes against commutation of death sentences includes that Furman was a decision invalidating all death sentences while Hurst is a specific ruling extending Sixth Amendment protections first noted in Ring to Florida cases and remanding for harmless error. It is telling Hurst does not disturb Proffitt v. Florida, 428 U.S. 242 (1976). Unlike Furman, following Hurst, the Supreme Court denied certiorari on direct appeal decisions¹³ leaving intact the denial of Sixth Amendment error. Hurst provides no basis to disturb a sentence supported by a prior conviction.

E. EVEN IF HURST WERE TO APPLY, ANY ERROR IS HARMLESS -

¹³ Both were supported by prior violent felony convictions. Fletcher v. State, 168 So.3d 186 (Fla. 2015), cert. denied, 2016 WL 280859 (Jan. 25, 2016); Smith v. State, 170 So.3d 745 (Fla. 2015), cert. denied, 2016 WL 280862 (Jan. 25, 2016). In Carr, 136 S.Ct. at 647-49, the Court discussed the distinct factors of eligibility and selection under capital sentencing. It found an eligibility determination was limited to findings related to aggravators. Those of mitigation and weighing were selection determinations, noting such were not factual findings, but were "judgment call[s]" and "question[s] of mercy." Id.

Hurst did not have a prior violent felony conviction.¹⁴ This Court, consistently has held deficient jury factfinding, under the Sixth Amendment, often is harmless.¹⁵ Galindez v. State, 955 So. 2d 517, 521-23 (Fla. 2007); Johnson v. State, 994 So.2d 960, 964-65 (Fla. 2008). A Florida defendant is death eligible if at least one aggravating factor applies. Steele, 921 So.2d at 543. Williams was death eligible based on a recidivist aggravator, his second-degree murder conviction found by a unanimous jury.

The Supreme Court recognized the critical distinction of an enhanced sentence supported by a prior conviction in Almendarez-Torres, 523 U.S. 224; Ring, 536 U.S. at 598 n.4; Alleyne, 133 S.Ct. at 2160 n.1. Hurst did not disturb this precedent that a Ring claim is harmless in the face of a prior felony conviction.

CONCLUSION

Based upon the foregoing, relief should be denied.

¹⁴ Hurst v. State, 147 So.3d 435, 445-47 (Fla. 2014).

¹⁵ Hurst did not find structural error. Moreover, it permits application of harmless error. In Neder v. United States, 527 U.S. 1 (1999), the Court rejected the argument that a conviction returned after one element of the offense was mistakenly not submitted to the jury presented a case of structural error. Neder explains why reliance on Sullivan v. Louisiana, 508 U.S. 275 (1993), is misplaced. Although Sullivan found constitutional error which prevented a jury from returning a "complete verdict" could not be harmless, it reviewed Neder and determined reversal was not required where evidence of the omitted element was overwhelming and uncontested. Neder, 527 U.S. at 19. The determination that deficient factfinding under the Sixth Amendment can be harmless is cemented by Washington v. Recuenco, 548 U.S. 212 (2006), where the Supreme Court reversed the state holding that Blakely v. Washington, 542 U.S. 296 (2004) error, was structural and could never be harmless.
