

No. SC16-102

Lower Tribunal No. 161987CF006876AXXXMA

---

---

IN THE
Supreme Court of Florida

---

MARK JAMES ASAY,

Petitioner,

v.

JULIE L. JONES, SECRETARY,
FLORIDA DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS,

Respondent.

---

BRIEF OF AMICUS CURIAE,
THE CAPITAL HABEAS UNIT OF THE
OFFICE OF THE FEDERAL PUBLIC DEFENDER
FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF FLORIDA,
IN SUPPORT OF PETITIONER MARK JAMES ASAY

---

Billy H. Nolas
Chief, Capital Habeas Unit
Office of the Federal Public Defender
Northern District of Florida
227 N. Bronough Street #4200
Tallahassee, FL 32301
billy_nolas@fd.org
FL Bar No. 00806821

Counsel for Amicus Curiae

---

---

TABLE OF CONTENTS

TABLE OF CONTENTS ..... i

TABLE OF CITATIONS ..... ii

REQUEST FOR LEAVE TO FILE UNDER RULE 9.370 ..... iv

STATEMENT OF INTEREST OF AMICUS CURIAE ..... 1

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT ..... 3

ARGUMENT ..... 4

    I. Hurst Is Retroactive Under The Witt Test ..... 4

    II. The Scope of Hurst Retroactivity Should Not Be Truncated ..... 7

    III. Any Harmless Error Review Requires Trial Court Proceedings ..... 11

CONCLUSION ..... 15

TABLE OF CITATIONS

Apprendi v. New Jersey , 530 U.S. 466 (2000).....	7
Arizona v. Fulminante , 499 U.S. 279 (1991).....	11
Brecht v. Abrahamson , 507 U.S. 619 (1993).....	12
Bottoson v. Moore , 833 So. 2d 693 (Fla. 2002).....	7
Caldwell v. Mississippi , 472 U.S. 320 (1985) .....	14
Danforth v. Minnesota , 552 U.S. 264 (2008) .....	5
Downs v. Dugger , 514 So. 2d 1069 (Fla. 1987) .....	9
Eddings v. Oklahoma , 455 U.S. 104 (1982) .....	10
Falcon v. State , 162 So. 3d 954 (Fla. 2015) .....	passim
Gardner v. Florida , 430 U.S. 349 (1977).....	11
Graham v. Florida , 130 S. Ct. 2011 (2010) .....	9
Hall v. State , 541 So. 2d 1125 (Fla. 1989).....	9, 15
Hildwin v. Florida , 490 U.S. 638 (1989).....	8
Hitchcock v. Dugger , 481 U.S. 393 (1987) .....	3, 10
Hurst v. Florida , 136 S. Ct. 616 (2016).....	passim
Johnson v. State , 904 So. 2d 400 (Fla. 2005) .....	8
King v. Moore , 831 So. 2d 143 (Fla. 2002) .....	7, 8
Linkletter v. Walker , 381 U.S. 618 (1965).....	5
Lockett v. Ohio , 438 U.S. 586 (1978) .....	10
Lugo v. Secretary , 750 F.3d 1198 (11th Cir. 2014).....	1
Meeks v. Dugger , 576 So. 2d 713 (Fla. 1991) .....	10, 15
Miller v. Alabama , 132 S. Ct. 2455 (2012).....	8
Montgomery v. Louisiana , 136 S. Ct. 718 (2016) .....	6
Neder v. United States , 527 U.S. 1 (1999).....	12

Riley v. Wainwright , 517 So. 2d 656 (1987).....	9
Ring v. Arizona , 536 U.S. 584 (2002).....	3
Roper v. Simmons , 543 U.S. 551 (2005).....	9
Schriro v. Summerlin , 542 U.S. 348 (2004).....	5
Skipper v. South Carolina , 476 U.S. 1 (1986).....	10
Spaziano v. Florida , 468 U.S. 447 (1984).....	8
State v. Dixon , 283 So. 2d 1 (Fla. 1973).....	13
Stovall v. Denno , 388 U.S. 293 (1967).....	5
Teague v. Lane , 489 U.S. 288 (1989).....	4
Thompson v. Dugger , 515 So. 2d 173 (Fla. 1987).....	9
Witt v. State , 387 So. 2d 922 (Fla. 1980).....	passim

REQUEST FOR LEAVE TO FILE UNDER RULE 9.370

The Capital Habeas Unit (CHU) of the Office of the Federal Public Defender for the Northern District of Florida, as amicus curiae, respectfully requests leave to file the accompanying brief in support of habeas Petitioner Mark James Asay, whose execution is scheduled for March 17, 2016.

The Statement of Interest describes the interest of the CHU and its belief that the arguments presented in the amicus curiae brief will be helpful to the Court.

Counsel for Petitioner consents to the filing of this amicus brief. Counsel for Respondent does not object to the filing of this brief.

STATEMENT OF INTEREST OF AMICUS CURIAE

The Capital Habeas Unit (CHU) of the Office of the Federal Public Defender for the Northern District of Florida was established with the concurrence of the Chief Judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit (the Honorable Ed Carnes), the Chief Judge of the United States District Court for the Northern District of Florida (the Honorable M. Casey Rogers), and the Administrative Office of the United States Courts. The Capital Habeas Unit was established because of significant problems relating to the provision of meaningful defense services in a number of capital cases in Florida, a pattern that raised concerns for the bench and bar. As the Eleventh Circuit commented:

Establishing a CHU in one of [Florida's] . . . federal districts would have several benefits. Not only could it provide direct representation to capital inmates in some federal habeas proceedings, . . . but it could also provide critical assistance and training to private registry counsel who handle state capital cases in Florida's collateral proceedings.

Lugo v. Secretary, 750 F.3d 1198, 1215 (11th Cir. 2014). The office advises, assists, and trains counsel in capital cases. The office also represents a number of Florida death-sentenced individuals in federal habeas cases. This Court's resolution of the questions flowing from Hurst v. Florida, 136 S. Ct. 616 (2016), may well have a life-and-death impact on our clients.

The United States Supreme Court's decision in Hurst has marked ramifications on Florida's judicial and legislative branches. This Court stayed the first execution scheduled post-Hurst. This Court also ordered supplemental briefing related to the Hurst decision in nearly 20 pending post-conviction and direct appeals. At least one trial court ordered death penalty cases halted pending legislative action, and other proceedings in the state and federal courts have been continued until this Court addresses Hurst. The Florida Legislature is debating a statute to supplant Fla. Stat. §§ 921.141(2) and (3), which the United States Supreme Court invalidated as unconstitutional in Hurst.

This Court granted the undersigned leave to file an amicus brief in the Cary Michael Lambrix death warrant litigation. That brief broadly addressed the retroactivity of Hurst and some of the "harmless error" issues flowing from Hurst. For the Court's convenience, the Lambrix amicus brief is attached to this filing.

This amicus brief is intended to continue that dialogue in the context of Petitioner Mark James Asay's death warrant litigation. Specifically, this brief addresses our perspective on the scope of Hurst's retroactivity, explaining that the concept of "partial retroactivity" is antithetical to this Court's established law and fundamentally unfair. We also revisit the question of harmless error review, explaining that such review, if it can be conducted at all, should be conducted in the first instance in trial courts, notwithstanding any specific aggravators that may have been found by the trial judge or were at issue at sentencing.

We hope the Court will find our perspective helpful.

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

This Court should hold that Hurst is retroactive under the test established more than 30 years ago in Witt v. State, 387 So. 2d 922 (Fla. 1980).

The retroactivity of Hurst should not be truncated by limiting claimants to those whose sentences became final after the Supreme Court's decision in Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584 (2002). There is no basis under Witt for applying the unusual and problematic concept of "partial retroactivity" to Hurst. Considerations of fairness and uniformity make it impossible to justify depriving some inmates of their lives under a process no longer considered acceptable and no longer applied to indistinguishable cases. All death row inmates in Florida, regardless of when their sentences became final, should be permitted to file petitions in the trial court for Hurst relief and, if necessary, appeal to this Court. That is how the Court proceeded after the Supreme Court's decision in Hitchcock v. Dugger, 481 U.S. 393 (1987), was issued. Fundamental fairness counsels the same approach here, permitting Petitioners Lambrix and Asay and others similarly situated the opportunity to challenge their unconstitutional death sentences.

Hurst claims should not be subjected to harmless error analysis because the Sixth Amendment error identified in Hurst is structural. To the extent that Hurst claims are subject to harmless analysis, this Court should not perform that analysis in the first instance. Consistent with this Court's Witt precedent, trial courts should review Hurst claims first and should evaluate harmless based on the facts of each individual case, including the Hurst error's impact on the defense presentation, jury deliberations, and sentencing outcome.

ARGUMENT

I. Hurst Is Retroactive Under The Witt Test

As described by the CHU amicus brief in Lambrix, Hurst plainly is retroactive under Florida's test. This Court established that retroactivity test more than 30 years ago in Witt, and has applied it ever since. Under Witt, this Court applies new decisions favorable to criminal defendants retroactively when those decisions (1) emanate from the United States Supreme Court, (2) are constitutional in nature, and (3) constitute "a development of fundamental significance." Falcon v. State, 162 So. 3d 954, 960 (Fla. 2015) (citing Witt, 387 So. 2d at 931).

This Court's Witt test is distinct from, and not impacted by, the federal retroactivity test established in Teague v. Lane, 489 U.S. 288 (1989). See Falcon, 162 So. 3d at 955-56 (recognizing that determining retroactivity under Witt and Teague requires separate inquiries); see also Witt, 387 So. 2d at 928 ("We start by noting that we are not obligated to construe our rule concerning post-conviction relief in the same manner as its federal counterpart . . . . [T]he concept of federalism clearly dictates that we retain the authority to determine which ‘changes of law’ will be cognizable under this state’s post-conviction relief machinery.”). The federal retroactivity test was designed with “[c]omity interests and respect for state autonomy” in mind. Schriro v. Summerlin, 542 U.S. 348, 364 (2004). The federal test was never intended to prohibit a state from granting broader retrospective relief when reviewing its own state convictions. Danforth v. Minnesota, 552 U.S. 264, 277, 280-82 (2008). Florida traditionally has done so.

Hurst satisfies the first two Witt retroactivity factors—(1) it is a decision of the United States Supreme Court, and (2) its holding is constitutional in nature: the Sixth Amendment forbids a capital sentencing scheme that requires judges, as opposed to juries, to conduct the fact-finding that subjects a defendant to a death sentence. Hurst also satisfies the third Witt factor because it “constitutes a development of fundamental significance,” i.e., it is a change in the law which is “of sufficient magnitude to necessitate retroactive application as ascertained by the three-fold test of the United States Supreme Court’s decisions in Stovall v. Denno, 388 U.S. 293 (1967), and Linkletter v. Walker, 381 U.S. 618 (1965).” Falcon, 162 So. 3d at 961 (quoting Witt, 387 So. 2d at 929) (internal brackets omitted).

Hurst's purpose is the protection of capital defendants' rights to have the jury find all facts that expose them to a death sentence, a punishment that under Florida law is not authorized by any first-degree murder conviction alone. That purpose would be advanced by retroactive application. Retroactivity would ensure that all capital defendants' Sixth Amendment rights are protected, and is in keeping with this Court's understanding that "[c]onsiderations of fairness and uniformity make it very 'difficult to justify depriving a person of his liberty or his life under a process no longer considered acceptable and no longer applied to indistinguishable cases.'" Falcon, 162 So. 3d at 962 (quoting Witt, 387 So. 2d at 929).

Retroactive application of Hurst would not have a substantially injurious effect on the administration of justice, as the number of potential Hurst claimants is both finite and manageable. As of February 2014, Florida's total death row population was less than 400. See Death Row Roster, Florida Department of Corrections, available at <http://www.dc.state.fl.us/activeinmates/deathrow-roster.asp> (last accessed 2/10/16). Retroactive application of new rules affecting much larger populations have been approved. For example, in Montgomery v. Louisiana, 136 S. Ct. 718 (2016), the United States Supreme Court approved of retroactive application of a new rule prohibiting mandatory life sentences for juveniles, which one study estimated could impact as many as 2,300 cases nationwide. See John R. Mills, Anna M. Dorn, and Amelia C. Hritz, No Hope: Re-

Examining Lifetime Sentences for Juvenile Offenders, The Phillips Black Project, available at <http://www.phillipsblack.org/s/JLWOP-2.pdf> (last accessed 2/10/16).

For further discussion of Hurst retroactivity under Witt, the Court is respectfully referred to the attached amicus brief the undersigned filed in Lambrix.

II. The Scope of Hurst Retroactivity Should Not Be Truncated

During the oral argument in Lambrix, the Court asked questions regarding the scope of Hurst's retroactivity. Specifically, the Court inquired whether Hurst should be applied to all cases or limited to death sentences that were finalized after Ring or after Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466 (2000), which Ring relied upon. In subsequent briefing in Lambrix, the parties referred to this concept as "partial retroactivity." This Court should reject the idea that Hurst's retroactivity should be so truncated, i.e., limited to a subset of death sentences, such as those "finalized" after Ring or after Apprendi.

To be sure, Hurst should apply retroactively to all Florida death sentences finalized after Ring. But there are compelling reasons why Hurst should apply to all death row inmates, including Petitioners Asay and Lambrix. The United States Supreme Court rejected this Court's view, stated in multiple cases, that Ring has no applicability to Florida's capital sentencing scheme. Many of those cases involved petitioners whose death sentences became final before the decisions in Ring and Apprendi. Accordingly, in Bottoson v. Moore, 833 So. 2d 693 (Fla. 2002), King v.

Moore, 831 So. 2d 143 (Fla. 2002), and Johnson v. State, 904 So. 2d 400 (Fla. 2005), this Court held that Ring was inapplicable in Florida because the United States Supreme Court previously had approved of Florida’s capital sentencing scheme in Hildwin v. Florida, 490 U.S. 638 (1989), and Spaziano v. Florida, 468 U.S. 447 (1984). In Hurst, the Supreme Court explicitly overruled Hildwin and Spaziano, leaving this Court’s decisions in those cases no legs upon which to stand. See Hurst, 136 S. Ct. at 616 (“We now expressly overrule Spaziano and Hildwin in relevant part . . . . Time and subsequent cases have washed away the[ir] logic . . .”).

There is no basis in this Court’s retroactivity law to block pre-Ring or pre-Apprendi defendants from seeking Hurst relief. Under Witt, all death row inmates in Florida, regardless of when their sentences were finalized, are under a death sentence that is unconstitutional, and all should be permitted to seek Hurst relief. That is the procedure recently approved by this Court in Falcon. In Falcon, which applied Witt and ruled retroactive the Supreme Court’s decision in Miller v. Alabama, 132 S. Ct. 2455 (2012) (holding that mandatory life sentences for juveniles are unconstitutional), the Court announced that “any affected juvenile offender shall have two years from the time the mandate issues in this case to file a motion for postconviction relief in the trial court seeking to correct his or her sentence pursuant to Miller.” Falcon, 162 So. 3d at 954 (emphasis added). The Court did not limit Miller retroactivity to only some prisoners. The Court did not curtail relief for prisoners who were sentenced before the date when the Supreme Court issued the predicate decisions that laid the groundwork for Miller, such as Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551 (2005), or Graham v. Florida, 130 S. Ct. 2011 (2010).

Witt itself does not recognize the concept of “partial retroactivity,” and this Court has never held that a new Supreme Court decision is retroactive but then refused to allow some individuals to benefit because they were sentenced before some earlier predicate Supreme Court decision. That is because “[c]onsiderations of fairness and uniformity make it very ‘difficult to justify depriving a person of his liberty or his life under a process no longer considered acceptable and no longer applied to indistinguishable cases.’” Falcon, 162 So. 3d at 962 (quoting Witt, 387 So. 2d at 929) (emphasis added).

In the context of capital punishment, this Court rejected the dubious “partial retroactivity” approach after the decision in Hitchcock, which held that trial courts in capital cases are prohibited from instructing juries to consider only statutorily enumerated mitigating circumstances. See, e.g., Thompson v. Dugger, 515 So. 2d 173, 175 (Fla. 1987); Downs v. Dugger, 514 So. 2d 1069 (Fla. 1987); Riley v. Wainwright, 517 So. 2d 656, 660 (1987). The Court permitted all impacted individuals to seek Hitchcock relief pursuant to Florida Rule of Criminal Procedure 3.850, or if Rule 3.850 relief was unavailable, through a petition in this Court for a writ of habeas corpus. See Hall v. State, 541 So. 2d 1125 (Fla. 1989) (holding that Hitchcock claims should be raised in Rule 3.850 motions); Meeks v. Dugger, 576 So. 2d 713 n.1 (Fla. 1991) (“Because this petition was filed prior to our disposition of Hall . . . we will allow the instant claim to be raised in a petition for a writ of habeas corpus.”).

This Court did not truncate the retroactivity of Hitchcock by limiting it to those whose death sentences were “finalized” after Lockett v. Ohio, 438 U.S. 586 (1978). Nor did the Court limit Hitchcock relief to cases “finalized” after Skipper v. South Carolina, 476 U.S. 1 (1986), or Eddings v. Oklahoma, 455 U.S. 104 (1982)—the predicate decisions upon which Hitchcock actually relied. See Hitchcock, 481 U.S. at 394, 399.

And so, in circumstances precisely analogous to the current post-Hurst landscape, when the Supreme Court in Hitchcock rejected this Court’s interpretation of Lockett, this Court found Hitchcock retroactive to all death-sentenced prisoners, regardless of whether their cases became final before the predicate decisions in Skipper, Eddings, or Lockett. By way of example, in Meeks v. Dugger, 576 So. 2d 713 (Fla. 1991), this Court permitted a Hitchcock claim in a case where the death sentence had been finalized two years prior to Lockett. So too, the availability of Hurst relief should not be truncated by Ring or Apprendi.

The concept of “partial retroactivity” is recognized as uncommon and has been criticized as antithetical to basic notions of fairness. Arbitrarily denying relief to some defendants sentenced to death but not others is particularly egregious. After all, “death is a different kind of punishment from any other that may be imposed in this country,” and “[i]t is of vital importance . . . that any decision to impose the death sentence be, and appear to be, based on reason rather than caprice . . . .” Gardner v. Florida, 430 U.S. 349, 357-58 (1977).

Surely, the question should not be how many executions based upon unconstitutional death sentences Florida will tolerate before Hurst is given effect. In ruling Hurst retroactive under Witt, this Court should not truncate the scope of retroactivity. This Court’s history of adherence to principles of fundamental fairness opposes such a miserly approach. All death row inmates in Florida, including Petitioners Asay and Lambrix and others similarly situated, should be permitted to file petitions for Hurst relief.

III. Any Harmless Error Review Requires Trial Court Proceedings

In Hurst, the Supreme Court did not reach the issue of harmless error, observing that such analysis is ordinarily left to the state courts. Hurst, 136 S. Ct. at 616 (“[W]e do not reach the State’s assertion that any error was harmless.”). As the CHU amicus described in Lambrix, harmless error review is hard to square with Hurst because Hurst errors are “structural.” See Arizona v. Fulminante, 499 U.S. 279, 307-09 (1991) (distinguishing between “structural defects in the constitution of the trial mechanism,” which are not subject to harmless error review, and trial errors that occur “during the presentation of the case to the jury, which may be quantitatively assessed in the context of other evidence presented.”). The Sixth Amendment error identified in Hurst—stripping the capital jury of its constitutional fact-finding role at the penalty phase—represents a “defect affecting the framework within which the trial proceeds, rather than simply an error in the trial process itself.” Id. at 310. Hurst errors “infect the entire trial process,” Brecht v. Abrahamson, 507 U.S. 619, 630 (1993), and “deprive defendants of basic protections without which a [death penalty] trial cannot reliably serve its function as a vehicle for determination” of whether the elements necessary for a death sentence exist, Neder v. United States, 527 U.S. 1, 8 (1999).

However, even if Hurst errors are deemed subject to harmless error analysis, individualized trial court proceedings are required before this Court can properly evaluate harmless error analysis in particular cases. In a recent filing in Lambrix, the State agreed that harmless error analysis rests on the facts of each case. See State’s Response to Petitioner’s Second Motion to Supplement Reply, No. SC16-56 (filed Feb. 9, 2016) at 10. Because harmless error analysis will require fact-finding as to the impact of the Hurst error, this Court should allow trial courts to make those findings in the first instance.

This holds true even where the trial judge in a particular case found one or more aggravating circumstances based on the defendant’s prior or contemporaneous convictions. Although Ring referred to an exception allowing Arizona judges to find the fact of a prior conviction, Florida’s death penalty law, unlike the Arizona law at issue in Ring, requires not only that one or more aggravating factors be found to impose a death sentence, but also requires factual determinations that “sufficient aggravating circumstances exist” to impose a death sentence, and that “there are insufficient mitigating circumstances to outweigh the aggravating circumstances.” Fla. Stat. § 921.141(3) (emphasis added). As far back as four decades ago, this Court made clear that the “sufficiency” fact determination “is not a mere counting process of X number of aggravating circumstances and number of mitigating circumstances, but rather a reasoned judgment as to what factual situations require imposition of death and which can be satisfied by life imprisonment in light of the totality of the circumstances present.” State v. Dixon, 283 So. 2d 1, 9 (Fla. 1973). This is qualitatively different than the Arizona system at issue in Ring.

In the context of Florida’s capital sentencing structure, this Court cannot determine, without first remanding for trial court proceedings, whether a jury in a hypothetical capital sentencing proceeding that complied with Hurst would have made the same “sufficiency” findings as the trial judge in any particular case, even where one or more of the aggravating circumstances were permissibly found by the judge. A determination of whether an individual petitioner would have been sentenced to death, notwithstanding the Sixth Amendment infirmity baked into Florida’s now-invalidated capital sentencing system, would require the Court to hypothesize—in an imaginary proceeding consistent with Hurst—whether the jury would have found “sufficient” aggravating circumstances for a death sentence, and whether the jury would have found that any mitigating circumstances were “insufficient” to outweigh the aggravating circumstances.

Such hypotheses-based harmless error review is rendered even more problematic by the fact that capital penalty phase proceedings do not occur in a vacuum. For instance, a defense counsel’s entire approach to the presentation of evidence may have been different had the jury, as opposed to the judge, been required to make the “sufficiency” and “insufficiency” findings. And the jury’s consideration of the evidence may well have been different if the jury had been required to make the findings, instead of making only an “advisory” recommendation for a sentence of death or life imprisonment. See Caldwell v. Mississippi, 472 U.S. 320, 328-29 (1985) (recognizing the significant impact of a jury’s belief that the ultimate responsibility for determining whether a defendant will be sentenced to death lies elsewhere). Further complicating matters, the Florida Legislature has not yet enacted a statute in response to Hurst that can be measured against the record of individual cases for harmlessness.

This Court, like all appellate courts, is ill-equipped to determine how much influence the trial judge’s role as the “sufficiency” fact-finder had on defense counsel's presentation or the jury's deliberations. See Hall, 541 So. 2d at 1128 (explaining that “[a]ppellate courts are reviewing, not fact-finding courts . . .”). As this Court has recognized in the context of Hitchcock, such harmless error determinations should be made first by trial courts following an evidentiary hearing. See, e.g., Meeks, 576 So. 2d at 716; Hall, 541 So.2d at 1125.

CONCLUSION

Hurst is retroactive under Witt. Hurst's retroactivity should not be truncated by limiting claimants to those whose sentences were finalized after Ring, Apprendi, or some other point in time. All death row inmates in Florida, regardless of when their sentences were finalized, should be permitted to file petitions in the trial court for Hurst relief and, if necessary, appeal the trial court's ruling to this Court.

Hurst claims should not be subjected to harmless error analysis because the Sixth Amendment error identified in Hurst is structural. However, if the Court concludes Hurst claims should be subjected to harmless error analysis, this Court should not perform that analysis in the first instance. The trial courts that review Hurst claims should evaluate harmless error based on the facts of each individual case, including the Hurst error's impact on the defense presentation, jury deliberations, and sentencing outcome.

The Court should permit Petitioner Asay and other death-sentenced Petitioners to litigate their Hurst claims initially in the trial court.

Respectfully submitted,
/s/ Billy H. Nolas

Billy H. Nolas
Chief, Capital Habeas Unit
Office of the Federal Public Defender
Northern District of Florida
227 N. Bronough Street #4200
Tallahassee, FL 32301
billy_nolas@fd.org
FL Bar No. 00806821

Counsel for Amicus Curiae

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I HEREBY CERTIFY that a true and correct copy of the foregoing was furnished by email to the Office of the Attorney General at Charmaine.Millsaps@myfloridalegal.com, capapp@myfloridalegal.com, and warrant@flcourts.org, on February 12, 2016.

/s/ Billy H. Nolas
Billy H. Nolas

CERTIFICATE OF COMPLIANCE

I HEREBY CERTIFY that this computer-generated amicus curiae brief is in compliance with Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure 9.210 and 9.370.

/s/ Billy H. Nolas
Billy H. Nolas

APPENDIX

No. SC16-56
Lower Tribunal No. 221983CF000012CFAXMX

---

---

IN THE
Supreme Court of Florida

---

CARY MICHAEL LAMBRIX,

Petitioner,

v.

JULIE L. JONES, SECRETARY,
FLORIDA DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS,

Respondent.

---

BRIEF OF AMICUS CURIAE,
THE CAPITAL HABEAS UNIT OF THE
OFFICE OF THE FEDERAL PUBLIC DEFENDER
FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF FLORIDA,
IN SUPPORT OF PETITIONER LAMBRIX
AND CONSOLIDATED MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE

---

Billy H. Nolas
Chief, Capital Habeas Unit
Office of the Federal Public Defender
Northern District of Florida
227 N. Bronough Street #4200
Tallahassee, FL 32301
billy_nolas@fd.org
FL Bar No. 00806821

Counsel for Amicus Curiae

---

---

RECEIVED 01/15/2016 06:16 PM FLORIDA SUPREME COURT

TABLE OF CONTENTS

TABLE OF CONTENTS.....	i
TABLE OF CITATIONS .....	ii
MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE UNDER RULE 9.370 .....	iv
STATEMENT OF INTEREST OF AMICUS CURIAE.....	1
SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT .....	2
ARGUMENT .....	2
I. Hurst Claims Should Be First Brought In Florida’s Trial Courts .....	4
II. Hurst Is Retroactive Under The Witt Test.....	5
A. The Witt Test.....	5
B. Applying Witt to Hurst .....	6
C. This Court’s Retroactivity Decisions in Similar Contexts .....	11
D. The Supreme Court’s Decision in Summerlin .....	14
E. This Court’s Decision in Johnson .....	14
F. Hurst Should Be Applied Retroactively.....	16
III. Hurst Claims Present Harmless Error Analysis Problems Not Suited for Expedited Resolution by This Appellate Court in the First Instance.....	17
CONCLUSION.....	22

TABLE OF CITATIONS

Apprendi v. New Jersey , 530 U.S. 466 (2000) . . . . .	3
Arizona v. Fulminante , 499 U.S. 279 (1991) . . . . .	18
Brecht v. Abrahamson , 507 U.S. 619 (1993) . . . . .	18
Booth v. Maryland , 482 U.S. 496 (1987) . . . . .	17
Bottoson v. Moore , 833 So. 2d 693 (Fla. 2002) . . . . .	15
Danforth v. Minnesota , 552 U.S. 264 (2008) . . . . .	6
Downs v. Dugger , 514 So. 2d 1069 (Fla. 1987) . . . . .	12
Espinosa v. Florida , 505 U.S. 1079 (1992) . . . . .	12
Falcon v. State , 162 So. 3d 954 (Fla. 2015) . . . . .	passim
Gardner v. Florida , 430 U.S. 349 (1977) . . . . .	9
Gideon v. Wainwright , 372 U.S. 335 (1963) . . . . .	11
Hall v. State , 941 So. 2d 1125 (1989) . . . . .	4, 12, 21
Hildwin v. Florida , 490 U.S. 638 (1989) . . . . .	15
Hitchcock v. Dugger , 481 U.S. 393 (1987) . . . . .	4, 11
Hurst v. Florida , No. 14-7505, 2016 WL 112683 (U.S. Jan. 12, 2016) . . . . .	passim
Jackson v. Dugger , 547 So. 2d 1197 (Fla. 1989) . . . . .	17
Jackson v. State , 648 So. 2d 85 (Fla. 1994) . . . . .	13
James v. State , 615 So. 2d 688 (Fla. 1993) . . . . .	13
Johnson v. State , 904 So. 2d 400 (Fla. 2005) . . . . .	14, 15
King v. Moore , 831 So. 2d 143 (Fla. 2002) . . . . .	15
Linkletter v. Walker , 381 U.S. 618 (1965) . . . . .	7
Lockett v. Ohio , 438 U.S. 586 (1978) . . . . .	11
Lugo v. Secretary , 750 F.3d 1198 (11th Cir. 2014) . . . . .	1
Mapp v. Ohio , 367 U.S. 643 (1961) . . . . .	9
Maynard v. Cartwright , 486 U.S. 356 (1988) . . . . .	12

Meeks v. Dugger, 576 So. 2d 713 (Fla. 1991) . . . . . 4, 12, 21

Miller v. Alabama, 132 S. Ct. 2455 (2012) . . . . . 5

Neder v. United States, 527 U.S. 1 (1999) . . . . . 17, 19

Riley v. Wainwright, 517 So. 2d 656 (1987) . . . . . 12

Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584 (2002) . . . . . passim

Schriro v. Summerlin, 542 U.S. 348 (2004) . . . . . 6, 14, 21

Spaziano v. Florida, 468 U.S. 447 (1984) . . . . . 15, 16

Stovall v. Denno, 388 U.S. 293 (1967) . . . . . 7

Sullivan v. Louisiana, 508 U.S. 275 (1993) . . . . . 19, 20

Teague v. Lane, 489 U.S. 288 (1989) . . . . . 5

Thompson v. Dugger, 515 So. 2d 173 (Fla. 1987) . . . . . 12, 17

Witt v. State, 387 So. 2d 922 (Fla. 1980) . . . . . passim

MOTION FOR LEAVE TO FILE UNDER RULE 9.370

The Capital Habeas Unit (CHU) of the Office of the Federal Public Defender for the Northern District of Florida, as amicus curiae, respectfully moves for leave to file the accompanying brief in support of Petitioner Cary Michael Lambrix, whose execution is scheduled for February 11, 2016.

The Statement of Interest describes the interest of the CHU and its belief that the arguments presented in the amicus curiae brief will be helpful to the Court.

Counsel for Petitioner has agreed to the filing of the accompanying brief. Counsel for Respondent, representing the State, objects to the filing of the brief.

STATEMENT OF INTEREST OF AMICUS CURIAE

The Capital Habeas Unit (CHU) of the Office of the Federal Public Defender for the Northern District of Florida was established with the concurrence of the Chief Judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit (the Honorable Ed Carnes), the Chief Judge of the United States District Court for the Northern District of Florida (the Honorable M. Casey Rogers), and the Administrative Office of the United States Courts. The Capital Habeas Unit was established because of significant problems relating to the provision of meaningful defense services in a number of capital cases in Florida, a pattern that raised concerns for the Bench and Bar. As the Eleventh Circuit commented:

Establishing a CHU in one of [Florida's] . . . federal districts would have several benefits. Not only could it provide direct representation to capital inmates in some federal habeas proceedings, . . . but it could also provide critical assistance and training to private registry counsel who handle state capital cases in Florida's collateral proceedings.

Lugo v. Secretary, 750 F.3d 1198, 1215 (11th Cir. 2014). The office advises, assists, and trains counsel in capital cases. The office also represents a number of Florida death-sentenced individuals in federal habeas cases, and this Court's resolution may well have a life-and-death impact on our clients.

As the institutional federal capital defender office of Florida, our office, as a friend of the Court, hopes that the Court will find helpful our perspective on the retroactivity of the recent federal constitutional decision in Hurst v. Florida, No.

14-7505, 2016 WL 112683 (U.S. Jan. 12, 2016), as well as on some of the general “harmless error” questions that the Court will confront in light of Hurst.

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

Hurst raises highly consequential questions. Those questions include complex issues of retroactivity and harmless error analysis. This amicus curiae brief primarily addresses retroactivity and comments on harmless error, explaining that Hurst should be applied to cases on collateral review under the Witt test, and that Hurst claims may not be easily—if at all—subject to harmless error review.

Above all, amicus submits that Hurst retroactivity and harmless error analysis—life or death matters for many—should not be resolved by this Court in the first instance, mid-way through Petitioner’s state habeas proceeding, and under the constraints of an active death warrant. It is urged that this Court, consistent with its practice in similar cases, enter a stay of execution and permit Petitioner to litigate his Hurst claim initially in the trial court. At a minimum, it is urged that a stay of execution be granted and that Petitioner be permitted to file an amended petition in this Court so that he can make arguments based on the actual Hurst decision, as opposed to the preliminary and speculative arguments in his pre-Hurst petition.

ARGUMENT

“Florida’s capital sentencing scheme violates the Sixth Amendment . . . .”
Hurst, 2016 WL 112683, at *5. The Hurst Court invalidated as unconstitutional Fla.

Stat. §§ 921.141(2) and (3), which provide that a defendant who has been convicted of a capital felony may be sentenced to death only after (1) a penalty phase jury renders an advisory verdict, without specifying the factual basis for its recommendation, and (2) notwithstanding the recommendation of a majority of the jury, the court decides whether sufficient aggravating circumstances exist and that they are not outweighed by the mitigating circumstances. See id. at *3.

The Hurst ruling emanates from Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466 (2000), and Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584 (2002). In Apprendi, the Supreme Court held that the Sixth Amendment, in conjunction with the Due Process Clause, requires that any fact that “expose[s] the defendant to a greater punishment than that authorized by the jury’s guilty verdict” is an “element” that must be submitted to the jury. Apprendi, 530 U.S. at 494. In Ring, the Court applied Apprendi in the capital punishment context, ruling that Arizona’s capital sentencing scheme was unconstitutional because it required judges to independently find at least one aggravating circumstance before imposing a death sentence. Ring, 536 U.S. at 604.

In Hurst, the Supreme Court held that “[t]he analysis the Ring Court applied to Arizona’s sentencing scheme applies equally to Florida’s.” Hurst, 2016 WL 112683, at *5. That is because “Florida does not require the jury to make critical findings necessary to impose the death penalty,” but rather, “requires a judge to find these facts.” Id. Accordingly, the Court ruled that Florida’s capital sentencing scheme violated the Sixth Amendment. Id. at 6. The Court did not address whether its decision was retroactive to cases on collateral review, and indicated that any harmless error determinations will ordinarily be left to the state courts. Id. at 8.

I. Hurst Claims Should Be First Brought In Florida’s Trial Courts

The appropriate place to resolve the difficult retroactivity and harmless error questions raised by Hurst in the first instance is not mid-way through a state habeas corpus proceeding under the time constraints of an active death warrant. When Petitioner initiated these proceedings, Hurst had not yet been decided, meaning that his initial arguments were necessarily speculative and preliminary. Now that Hurst has issued, Petitioner Lambrix should be permitted, consistent with this Court’s practice, to return to the trial court to litigate his Hurst claims on the basis of the actual decision in Hurst. In similar situations in the past, this Court has permitted litigation based on recently-issued Supreme Court decisions to first occur in the trial court and later to be appealed. See, e.g., Hall v. State, 941 So. 2d 1125, 1128 (1989) (explaining that because “[a]ppellate courts are reviewing, not fact-finding courts,” claims under the Supreme Court’s recent decision in Hitchcock v. Dugger, 481 U.S. 393 (1987), “should be presented to the trial court in a rule 3.850 motion for postconviction relief . . . .”); Meeks v. Dugger, 576 So. 2d 713 (Fla. 1991); Falcon v. State, 162 So. 3d 954 (Fla. 2015) (permitting life-sentenced juvenile offenders two years to petition the trial court for relief under the Supreme Court's recent decision in Miller v. Alabama, 132 S. Ct. 2455 (2012)).

At a minimum, Petitioner Lambrix should be permitted to re-file an amended petition with the benefit of the Hurst opinion. His present petition, based on what he surmised the Supreme Court could say in Hurst, is by its very nature insufficient and not appropriate for adjudication under the actual Hurst opinion.

II. Hurst Is Retroactive Under The Witt Test

A. The Witt Test

This Court recently reaffirmed the continuing validity of Florida's long-applied retroactivity test, established in Witt v. State, 387 So. 2d 922 (Fla. 1980), for determining whether new decisions of the United States Supreme Court that are favorable to criminal defendants are to be applied to cases on collateral review in Florida's state courts. See Falcon, 162 So. 3d at 954 (holding that Miller v. Alabama is retroactive). This Court applies decisions retroactively provided that they (1) emanate from the United States Supreme Court, (2) are constitutional in nature, and (3) constitute "a development of fundamental significance." Id. at 960.

This Court's Witt test is distinct from, and not impacted by, the federal retroactivity test established in Teague v. Lane, 489 U.S. 288, 307 (1989). See Falcon, 162 So. 3d at 955-56 (recognizing that determining retroactivity under Witt and Teague requires separate inquiries); see also Witt, 387 So. 2d at 928 ("We start by noting that we are not obligated to construe our rule concerning post-conviction relief in the same manner as its federal counterpart . . . [T]he concept of federalism clearly dictates that we retain the authority to determine which ‘changes of law’ will be cognizable under this state’s post-conviction relief machinery.”). After all, the federal retroactivity test was designed with “[c]omity interests and respect for state autonomy” in mind. Schriro v. Summerlin, 542 U.S. 348, 364 (2004). The federal test was never intended to prohibit a state from granting broader retrospective relief when reviewing its own state convictions. Danforth v. Minnesota, 552 U.S. 264, 280-81 (2008). States may grant more expansive retroactive effect to new rules than is required by federal law, id. at 277, 282, and Florida traditionally has done so. The critical question, therefore, is whether Hurst meets Florida’s Witt test.

B. Applying Witt to *Hurst

Here, it is not debatable that Hurst satisfies the first two Witt retroactivity factors because (1) it is a decision of the United States Supreme Court, and (2) its holding—that the Sixth Amendment forbids a capital sentencing scheme that requires judges, as opposed to juries, to conduct the fact-findings that subject a defendant to a death sentence. See Witt, 387 So. 2d at 931; see also Falcon, 162 So. 2d at 960 (finding that Supreme Court decision that “the Eighth Amendment forbids a sentencing scheme that mandates life in prison without the possibility of parole for juvenile offenders is clearly constitutional in nature.”) (internal quotation omitted).

The determinative question therefore is whether the third factor is established, i.e., whether Hurst “constitutes a development of fundamental significance.” See Witt, 387 So. 2d at 931. The factor is established.

In determining whether a Supreme Court decision “constitutes a development of fundamental significance,” this Court has explained that, “[a]lthough specific determinations regarding the significance of various legal developments must be made on a case-by-case basis, history shows that most major constitutional changes are likely to fall within two broad categories.” Witt, 387 So. 3d at 929. The first category of fundamentally significant decisions includes “those changes in law ‘which place beyond the authority of the state the power to regulate certain conduct or impose certain penalties.’” Falcon, 162 So. 3d at 961 (quoting Witt, 387 So. 2d at 929). The second category includes “‘those changes of law which are of sufficient magnitude to necessitate retroactive application as ascertained by the three-fold test of the United States Supreme Court’s decisions in Stovall v. Denno, 388 U.S. 293 (1967), and Linkletter v. Walker, 381 U.S. 618 (1965).’” Falcon, 162 So. 3d at 961 (quoting Witt, 387 So. 2d at 929) (internal brackets omitted). “The three-fold analysis under Stovall and Linkletter includes an analysis of ‘(a) the purpose to be served by the new rule; (b) the extent of reliance on the old rule; and (c) the effect on the administration of justice of a retroactive application of the new rule.’” Id. (quoting Witt, 387 So. 2d at 926). While Stovall and Linkletter pre-date the comitybased Teague retroactivity test now used by federal courts, this Court has indicated as recently as 2015 that Florida approves the Stovall and Linkletter factors, and that it is these factors that guide its analysis under Witt of whether a new Supreme Court rule “constitutes a development of fundamental significance.” See Falcon, 162 So. 3d at 961. This is appropriate given Florida’s right to give retroactive effect to a broader range of new Supreme Court rules than would be mandated for federal courts under the comity-based Teague approach.

Here, Hurst is well-within the second category of fundamentally significant decisions described in Witt. With respect to the first Stovall and Linkletter consideration, the primary purpose of Hurst is to protect capital defendants’ inalienable Sixth Amendment right to have any fact that exposes them to a death sentence, a punishment which is not authorized by their conviction alone, be found by a jury. As to the second Stovall and Linkletter consideration, although Florida relied on the now-invalidated capital sentencing scheme in penalty phase proceedings, the number of affected cases is finite, easily determinable, and certainly as manageable, if not more manageable, than the cases at issue in Falcon.

The first two Stovall and Linkletter considerations indicate that Hurst’s “purpose would be advanced by making the rule retroactive,” Linkletter, 381 U.S. at 637, by ensuring that all capital defendants’ Sixth Amendment rights are protected, regardless of whether their sentences became final after Hurst’s publication. In that respect, Hurst is different from Linkletter itself, where the issue was whether the purpose of the exclusionary rule announced in Mapp v. Ohio, 367 U.S. 643 (1961)—detering police from committing Fourth Amendment violations—would be advanced if applied retroactively. Id. at 636-37. The Linkletter Court held that Mapp's purpose would not be advanced by retroactive application because the police could no longer be deterred from activity that had already occurred, and judicial chaos would result from “the wholesale release of guilty victims.” Id. at 637.

In contrast, retroactive application of Hurst would not be futile or produce undesirable results. Hurst's purpose is to ensure that death sentences are reached as the result of a constitutional proceeding, a purpose that would be advanced by extending the protection to all capital prisoners. And unlike retroactive application of the exclusionary rule, applying Hurst's Sixth Amendment imperative is in accord with the core idea that “death is a different kind of punishment from any other that may be imposed in this country,” and “[i]t is of vital importance . . . that any decision to impose the death sentence be, and appear to be, based on reason rather than caprice or emotion.” Gardner v. Florida, 430 U.S. 349, 357-58 (1977).

Put simply, death sentences imposed with a judge's, but not a jury's findings on the defendant's eligibility for capital punishment are unconstitutional. The question should not be how many executions based upon such unconstitutional sentences will Florida tolerate before Hurst is given effect. This Court's history of adherence to principles of fundamental fairness opposes such a miserly approach.

With respect to the remaining Stovall and Linkletter consideration, retroactive application of Hurst would not have any injurious effect on the administration of justice, but rather would promote "the integrity of the judicial process." Id. In Linkletter, the Court found that retroactive application of Mapp would "tax the administration of justice to the utmost" because it would require applying the exclusionary rule to innumerable cases and pieces of evidence. Here, by contrast, the retroactive application of Hurst would be finite in scope, limited to a specific number of current Florida death row inmates. The most that would be required would be a new sentencing placing the authority in the jury's hands to find the elements necessary for the court to decide whether to impose a sentence of death. The convictions of those inmates are not affected at all.

This Court has recognized in the retroactivity context that "[c]onsiderations of fairness and uniformity make it very 'difficult to justifying depriving a person of his liberty or his life under a process no longer considered acceptable and no longer applied to indistinguishable cases.'" Falcon, 162 So. 3d at 962 (quoting Witt, 387 So. 2d at 929). Retroactive application of Hurst is the only just result.

C. This Court’s Retroactivity Decisions in Similar Contexts

This Court has determined that decisions similar to Hurst have constituted “development[s] of fundamental significance” that warranted retroactive application under the Witt test.

Hurst is a Sixth Amendment decision. In Witt itself, this Court recognized the retroactivity of the Sixth Amendment ruling in Gideon v. Wainwright, 372 U.S. 335 (1963), which first announced that each state must provide counsel to every indigent defendant charged with a felony at all critical stages of the proceeding. See Witt, 387 So. 2d at 927. This Court’s retroactive application of Gideon asked whether an individual had a lawyer during a criminal proceeding. Surely as significant, Hurst asks who made the critical factual findings authorizing a death sentence. The question of who decides whether a death sentence can be imposed—whether a judge, in contravention of the Sixth Amendment, or a jury, in comportment with the Sixth Amendment—is fundamentally significant within the meaning of Witt.

Hurst is a death penalty decision. This Court found retroactive the Supreme Court’s decision in Hitchcock v. Dugger, 481 U.S. 393 (1987), which held that in death penalty cases, trial courts are prohibited from instructing juries to consider only statutorily enumerated mitigating circumstances. Hitchcock followed the Supreme Court’s prior decision in Lockett v. Ohio, 438 U.S. 586 (1978), which held that the Eighth Amendment prohibits the sentencer from refusing to consider or being precluded from considering any relevant mitigating evidence. Before Hitchcock, this Court interpreted Lockett to require that a capital defendant merely have had the opportunity to present any mitigation evidence, not to require an instruction that the jury must consider non-statutory mitigation. See, e.g., Downs v. Dugger, 514 So. 2d 1069, 1070 (Fla. 1987); Thompson v. Dugger, 515 So. 2d 173, 175 (Fla. 1987). Shortly after the Supreme Court issued Hitchcock, a death-sentenced individual with an active death warrant argued to this Court that he was entitled to benefit from Hitchcock retroactively because his jury did not receive a proper instruction. Applying the analysis adopted in Witt, this Court agreed and ruled that Hitchcock constituted a fundamental change in the law that must be retroactively applied. Riley v. Wainwright, 517 So. 2d 656, 660 (1987). The Court thereafter continued to apply Hitchcock retroactively. See, e.g., Hall, 941 So. at 1125; Meeks, 576 So. 2d at 713. Surely as significant is Hurst, which deals with who makes the findings determinative of death eligibility: jury or judge.

Hurst is about aggravation findings. This Court has found retroactive the Supreme Court's decision in Espinosa v. Florida, 505 U.S. 1079 (1992), which held that Florida's "heinous, atrocious or cruel" aggravating circumstances was, without a clarifying instruction, impermissibly vague under the Eighth Amendment and the Court's prior decision in Maynard v. Cartwright, 486 U.S. 356 (1988). Before Espinosa, this Court interpreted Maynard's vagueness analysis of a similar Oklahoma aggravating factor to be inapplicable to Florida's aggravating factor. Following the contrary decision in Espinosa, this Court applied the Witt test and determined that Espinosa was retroactive, permitting the revisiting of previously rejected challenges to the "heinous, atrocious or cruel" aggravating circumstance. James v. State, 615 So. 2d 688, 669 (Fla. 1993); see also Jackson v. State, 648 So. 2d 85, 90 (Fla. 1994). Again, Hurst is no less significant.

In sum, under the Witt test, Hurst is no less fundamentally significant than Hitchcock, which addressed a jury instruction on the scope of mitigating evidence that could be considered during a penalty phase. Hurst is also no less fundamentally significant than Espinosa, which concerned a limiting instruction required for the consideration of one statutory aggravator. Indeed, Hurst's reach is much broader than either Hitchcock's or Espinosa's. Hurst changes the nature of the penalty proceeding by shifting the authority to the jury to engage in fact-finding as to death eligibility. Not only does such a fundamental shift implicate the differences between judge and jury decision-making, but it also impacts the strategy and manner by which capital defense lawyers approach the penalty phase. Prior to Hurst, the focus of the penalty proceeding was on the scope and presentation of mitigating evidence to the jury. Under Hurst, the focus shifts towards combating aggravation.

D. The Supreme Court's Decision in *Summerlin

Any State arguments focused on the Supreme Court's decision in Summerlin, would be misplaced. Summerlin has no impact on this Court's retroactivity analysis. In Summerlin, the Supreme Court ruled that Ring would not be applied retroactively under the stringent Teague retroactivity standard applied by federal courts in a habeas corpus case. Those special federal standards were developed with "[c]omity interests and respect for state autonomy" in mind. Summerlin, 542 U.S. at 364. Such considerations are inapplicable when a state decides whether to apply a new Supreme Court decision to its own collateral review docket, particularly when, as in Petitioner's case, the relevant Supreme Court decision addressed that same state's procedures. This Court, as recently as last year, continues to apply Florida's retroactivity standard, as set down in Witt. Under Witt, this Court is empowered to apply Hurst retroactively in Florida and in accord with its tradition of respect for the rights of capital defendants. Amicus urges that the Court do so.

E. This Court's Decision in *Johnson

This Court's decision in Johnson v. State, 904 So. 2d 400 (Fla. 2005), is also not a barrier to this Court's Witt analysis of Hurst. Johnson is no longer good law.

In Johnson, the Court considered the retroactivity of Ring in circumstances entirely different from those presented by Hurst. The Johnson Court ruled that Ring—which arose from a challenge to Arizona's death penalty statute—was not retroactive under Florida law because Ring had no applicability to Florida's capital sentencing scheme. Johnson outlined earlier decisions espousing that Ring did not apply in Florida:

We first analyzed Ring's effect on Florida law in two plurality opinions, Bottoson v. Moore, 833 So. 2d 693 (Fla.), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1070, 123 S.Ct. 662, 154 L.Ed.2d 564 (2002), and King v. Moore, 831 So. 2d 143 (Fla.), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1067, 123 S.Ct. 657, 154 L.Ed.2d 556 (2002). Both opinions noted that the United States Supreme Court repeatedly has upheld Florida's capital sentencing scheme. Bottoson, 833 So. 2d at 695; King, 831 So. 2d at 143.

Johnson, 904 So. 2d at 406. However, contrary to Johnson, the Supreme Court not only made clear in Hurst that Ring's holding was applicable to Florida's capital sentencing scheme, but also directly addressed the underlying ideas that led to Johnson and ruled that they were violative of the Sixth Amendment.

In light of Hurst, the retroactivity perspective of Johnson no longer carries any weight, not only because Johnson espoused a view of Ring that has now been repudiated by the Supreme Court, but also because there is no longer any need to analogize the law at issue in Ring to Florida's law; Hurst addressed Florida's law directly. Moreover, Johnson cited this Court's previous decisions in Bottoson and King for the proposition that Florida's capital sentencing scheme had been approved by the Supreme Court despite Ring. Bottoson and King relied on the Supreme Court's decisions in Hildwin v. Florida, 490 U.S. 638 (1989), and Spaziano v.

Florida, 468 U.S. 447 (1984). Hurst explicitly overruled Hildwin and Spaziano, leaving Johnson no remaining legs to stand on. See Hurst, 2016 WL 112683, at *7-8 (“We now expressly overrule Spaziano and Hildwin in relevant part . . . . Time and subsequent cases have washed away the[ir] logic . . .”).

F. Hurst Should Be Applied Retroactively

Based on the foregoing, Hurst should be applied retroactively under this Court’s Witt test. The appropriate remedy, as this Court explained in Falcon, is to permit capital defendants in Florida, even those whose convictions have become final, an opportunity to file Rule 3.851 petitions in light of Hurst. Possibly following the Legislature’s enactment of a new death penalty statute, which the Legislature has already begun to draft, Florida courts presented with Hurst petitions should conduct resentencing proceedings in conformance with the new legislation. See Falcon, 162 So. 3d at 963 (“[W]e conclude that trial courts should apply chapter 2014-220, Laws of Florida, and conduct a resentencing proceeding in conformance with that legislation, when presented with a timely rule 3.850 motion for postconviction relief from any juvenile offender whose sentence is unconstitutional under Miller.”). This Court may impose a time limitation on the filing of Hurst petitions, as it has in other instances. See id. at 954 (“[A]ny affected juvenile offender shall have two years from the time the mandate issues in this case to file a motion for postconviction relief in the trial court seeking to correct his or her sentence pursuant to Miller.”).

At a minimum, this Court should grant stays of execution to Hurst petitioners under active death warrants, such as Petitioner Lambrix, pending a more complete presentation. See, e.g., Thompson v. Dugger, 515 So. 2d 173 (Fla. 1987) (granting stay of execution to determine whether Hitchcock was retroactive under Witt); Riley, 517 So. 2d at 660 (same); Jackson v. Dugger, 547 So. 2d 1197 (Fla. 1989) (granting stay of execution to determine whether Booth v. Maryland, 482 U.S. 496 (1987), was retroactive under Witt). The question of Hurst's retroactivity—a matter of life and death—is too consequential to decide mid-way through an appellate proceeding filed pre-Hurst and under the time constraints of an active death warrant.

III. Hurst Claims Present Harmless Error Analysis Problems Not Suited for Expedited Resolution by This Appellate Court in the First Instance

The Hurst Court declined to reach the State's argument that the Sixth Amendment error arising from the jury's diminished fact-finding role at the penalty phase was harmless. Hurst, 2016 WL 112683, at *8 (“[W]e do not reach the State’s assertion that any error was harmless.”). The Supreme Court observed that it “normally leaves it to state courts to consider whether an error is harmless.” Id. (citing Neder v. United States, 527 U.S. 1, 25 (1999) (explaining that it is ordinarily left to lower courts to pass on harmlessness in the first instance). This Court is therefore the appropriate forum to resolve whether Hurst claims are subject to harmless error review and, if so, the standards by which such analysis should be conducted. However, this Court should not decide those highly-consequential issues mid-way through the instant proceeding. Rather, the complexity of conducting proper harmless error analysis in the context of Hurst claims is appropriately resolved by trial courts in the first instance, and appealed to this Court with the opportunity for full, untruncated briefing and oral argument.

There is a serious question as to whether Hurst claims are subject to harmless error analysis at all, or whether they present claims of “structural” error that defy specific harmless review. See Arizona v. Fulminante, 499 U.S. 279, 307-09 (1991) (distinguishing between “structural defects in the constitution of the trial mechanism,” which are not subject to harmless error review, and trial errors that occur “during the presentation of the case to the jury, which may be quantitatively assessed in the context of other evidence presented.”). In determining whether Hurst errors are structural or instead subject to harmless error review, this Court must decide whether the Sixth Amendment error identified in Hurst—stripping the capital jury of its constitutional fact-finding role at the penalty phase—represents a “defect affecting the framework within which the trial proceeds, rather than simply an error in the trial process itself.” Id. at 310. Measured against that standard, Hurst errors are likely to be found structural because they “infect the entire trial process.” Brecht v. Abrahamson, 507 U.S. 619, 630 (1993). In other words, Hurst errors “deprive defendants of basic protections without which a [capital] trial cannot reliably serve its function as a vehicle for determination” or whether the elements necessary for a death sentence exist. See Neder, 527 U.S. 1 at 8.

The structural nature of Hurst claims is further underscored by what Justice Scalia, writing for the Court, called the “illogic of harmless-error review” in the context of the Sixth Amendment constitutional error at issue in Hurst. See Sullivan v. Louisiana, 508 U.S. 275, 280 (1993). Because Hurst made clear that Florida’s statute did not allow for a jury verdict on the necessary elements for a death sentence that was compatible with the Sixth Amendment, “the entire premise of [harmless error] review is simply absent.” Id. at 280. Harmless error analysis would require this Court to determine in the first instance “not whether, in a trial that occurred without the error, a [jury fact-finding of sufficient aggravating circumstances] would surely have been rendered, but whether the [death sentence] actually rendered in [original] trial was surely unattributable to the error.” Id. There being no jury findings on the requisite aggravating circumstances, it is not possible to review whether such findings would have occurred absent the Hurst error. In such cases:

There is no object, so to speak, upon which harmless-error scrutiny can operate. The most an appellate court can conclude is that a jury would surely have found petitioner guilty [of the aggravating circumstances] beyond a reasonable doubt—not that the jury’s actual finding of guilty [of the aggravators] beyond a reasonable doubt would surely not have been different absent the constitutional error. That is not enough. The Sixth Amendment requires more than appellate speculation about a hypothetical jury’s action, or else directed verdicts for the State would be sustainable on appeal . . . .

Id. For this Court “to hypothesize a [jury’s finding of aggravating circumstances] that was never in fact rendered—no matter how inescapable the findings to support the verdict might be—would violate the jury-trial guarantee.” Id. at 280.

The serious issues raised by the question of whether Hurst claims are subject to harmless error analysis at all underscores the practical problems the Court confronts at this juncture. A determination of whether an individual petitioner would have been sentenced to death, notwithstanding the Sixth Amendment infirmity baked into Florida’s capital sentencing scheme that Hurst invalidated, would require courts to hypothesize whether—in an imaginary proceeding consistent with the Hurst and the Sixth Amendment—the jury would have nonetheless found sufficient aggravating circumstances for a death sentence. The jury having never made findings as to aggravating circumstances, there is no way to determine whether it would still have made those findings absent the Sixth Amendment error.

Moreover, the Florida Legislature has not yet enacted any statute in response to Hurst that courts can measure against the records of individual cases to conduct harmless error review. Today, this Court would be simply guessing what the Legislature will enact and then using that estimation to measure against the record of individual cases for harmlessness.

A further practical problem for harmless error analysis in Hurst cases is that penalty phase presentations do not occur in a vacuum. In a hypothetical proceeding where the jury's Sixth Amendment fact-finding role is respected as paramount, defense counsel's entire approach to the presentation of evidence will be different, given the inherent differences between judges and juries as fact-finders. See Summerlin, 542 U.S. at 356 (recognizing the differences between judge and jury fact finding). Appellate courts are ill-equipped to determine how much if any impact the relative fact-finding roles of the judge and jury impacted defense counsel's presentation of the penalty case. As this Court has recognized in the context of Hitchcock retroactivity, such determinations should be made in trial courts following evidentiary hearings. See, e.g., Meeks, 576 So. 2d at 716; Hall, 541 So.2d at 1125.

This Court must ultimately determine whether Hurst errors are structural or subject to harmless error review, and if the Court determines that such errors are subject to harmless error review, it must come to terms with various fact patterns relating to how such review should be conducted. The Court should not decide such serious and consequential matters in the first instance, mid-way through Petitioner's current proceeding, and under the constraints of an active death warrant. As explained above, the appropriate course is to permit capital petitioners in Florida an opportunity to file Rule 3.851 petitions in light of Hurst. The trial courts can rule on the harmless error issue as to each case in the first instance, and the decisions can then be appealed to this Court.

CONCLUSION

Hurst raises significant and highly-consequential questions involving retroactivity and harmless error analysis. Amicus respectfully submits that Hurst should be applied to cases on collateral review under the Witt test, and that harmless error analysis of Hurst claims would be either inapplicable or extremely problematic. Because of the importance of these issues, this Court should not decide them in the first instance, mid-way through Petitioner's habeas corpus proceeding, and under the constraints of an active death warrant. It is urged that this Court, consistent with its practice in similar prior cases, enter a stay of execution and permit Petitioner to litigate his Hurst claim initially in the trial court. At a minimum, it is urged that a stay of execution be granted and Petitioner be permitted to re-file his petition so that he can make arguments based on the actual Hurst decision, as opposed to the speculative and preliminary arguments in his pre-Hurst filings.

Respectfully submitted,
/s/ Billy H. Nolas

Billy H. Nolas
Chief, Capital Habeas Unit
Office of the Federal Public Defender
Northern District of Florida
227 N. Bronough Street #4200
Tallahassee, FL 32301
billy_nolas@fd.org
FL Bar No. 00806821

Counsel for Amicus Curiae

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I HEREBY CERTIFY that a true copy of the foregoing was furnished by email to the Office of the Attorney General at Scott.Browne@myfloridalegal.com, capapp@myfloridalegal.com, and warrant@flcourts.org, on January 15, 2016.

/s/ Billy H. Nolas
Billy H. Nolas

CERTIFICATE OF COMPLIANCE

I HEREBY CERTIFY that this computer-generated amicus curiae brief is in compliance with Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure 9.210 and 9.370.

/s/ Billy H. Nolas
Billy H. Nolas