

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF FLORIDA
CASE NO. SC17-1179

ANTHONY LAMARCA,

Appellant,

v.

STATE OF FLORIDA,

Appellee.

RESPONSE TO ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE AND MOTION FOR GUIDANCE
AS TO THE STANDARD FOR DETERMINING WHAT CONSTITUTES CAUSE

COMES NOW the Appellant, ANTHONY LAMARCA, in the above-entitled matter and respectfully responds to this Court's September 25th Order to Show Cause and requests that the Court provide guidance as to what constitutes cause and permit further briefing on this issue after such guidance has been provided. For his reasons, Mr. Lamarca states:

1. Mr. Lamarca is under a sentence of death. His appeal of the denial of Rule 3.851 relief is before the Court in the above-entitled case. On September 25, 2017, before Mr. Lamarca had submitted anything to this Court regarding his appeal, this Court issued an order that provided:

Appellant shall show cause on or before Monday, October 16, 2017, why the trial court's order should not be affirmed in light of this Court's decision in Hitchcock v. State, SC17-445. The response shall be limited to no more than 20 pages. Appellee may file a reply on or before Thursday, October 26, 2017, limited to no more than 15 pages. Appellant may file a reply to the Respondent's reply on or before Monday, November 6, 2017, limited to no more than 10 pages.

A. MR. LAMARCA'S RIGHT TO APPEAL THE DENIAL OF HIS RULE 3.851 MOTION AND THE UNDEFINED "CAUSE" STANDARD.

2. First, Mr. Lamarca submits that his appeal is not one within this Court's discretionary jurisdiction. See Fla. R. App.

RECEIVED, 10/23/2017 07:58:29 AM, Clerk, Supreme Court

Pro. 9.030(a)(2). Mr. Lamarca is exercising a substantive right to appeal the denial of his successive Rule 3.851 motion. See Fla. Stat. § 924.066 (2016); Fla. R. App. Pro 9.140(b)(1)(D). In his appeal, this Court "shall review all rulings and orders appearing in the record necessary to pass upon the grounds of an appeal." Fla. R. App. Pro. 9.140(i) (emphasis added).

3. Because Mr. Lamarca has been given the substantive right to appeal the denial of his successive Rule 3.851 motion, that substantive right is protected by the Due Process and Equal Protection Clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment. Evitts v. Lucey, 469 U.S. 387, 393 (1985) ("if a State has created appellate courts as "an integral part of the ... system for finally adjudicating the guilt or innocence of a defendant," Griffin v. Illinois, 351 U.S., at 18, 76 S.Ct., at 590, the procedures used in deciding appeals must comport with the demands of the Due Process and Equal Protection Clauses of the Constitution."). This principle applies to collateral appeals as well as direct appeals. Lane v. Brown, 372 U.S. 477, 484-85 (1963) ("the Griffin principle also applies to state collateral proceedings, and Burns leaves no doubt that the principle applies even though the State has already provided one review on the merits.").¹

4. In addition, this Court's June 26, 2017, sua sponte order stayed proceedings on Mr. Lamarca's appeal pending the disposition of Hitchcock v. State, Case No. SC17-445. Linking Mr.

Lamarca's appeal to the outcome of Mr. Hitchcock's appeal appears to be an effort to bind Mr. Lamarca to the outcome of Mr. Hitchcock's appeal. Thus, because Mr. Hitchcock lost his appeal, this Court's order to show cause makes clear that Mr. Lamarca's right to appeal has been severely curtailed. This result implicates Mr. Lamarca's right to due process and equal protection, particularly given that the constitutional claims Mr. Lamarca raised in his amended 3.851 motion are different from those set out in Mr. Hitchcock's briefing. A denial of Mr. Hitchcock's appeal should not govern the issues that are present in Mr. Lamarca's appeal.

5. Importantly, should Mr. Lamarca be permitted to submit briefing he intends to address this Court's decision in Hitchcock v. State and explain how this Court's ruling there creates claims under the Due Process and the Equal Protection Clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment, as well as the Eighth Amendment in light of Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238 (1972), and that Mr. Lamarca's sentence of death is unconstitutional. Mr. Lamarca submits that he must be allowed to file his briefs in accordance with the rules of appellate procedure.

6. Indeed, under the Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure, appellants are normally permitted to file an initial and reply brief in conformity with those rules explaining why the trial court should not be affirmed. It would appear that this Court has sua sponte decided that Mr. Lamarca is not entitled to the standard appellate process. It is clear that this Court will not even allow Mr. Lamarca to file his briefing before deciding whether he has shown "cause" within the meaning of the September 25th order which only affords Mr. Lamarca twenty pages to show "cause." However, if he briefed his case, he would be allowed an Initial Brief of 75 pages in length and a Reply Brief of 25 pages in length. This Court offers no justification in its September 25th order for this deviation from standard appellate procedure, and gives no guidance as to what constitutes "cause." This Court's action is contrary to the Due Process and Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment.

7. This Court's issuance of a show cause order has occurred without any notice of the standard by which the "cause" is to be measured. This is in violation of due process. The touchstone of due process is notice and reasonable opportunity to be heard. The right to due process entails "'notice and opportunity for hearing appropriate to the nature of the case.'" Cleveland Bd. of Ed. v. Loudermill, 470 U.S. 532, 542 (1985), quoting Mullane v. Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co., 339 U.S. 306, 313 (1950). "[F]undamental fairness is the hallmark of the procedural protections afforded by the Due Process Clause." Ford v. Wainwright, 477 U.S. 399, 424 (1986) (Powell, J., concurring).

8. Previously, the filing of a notice of appeal was sufficient "cause" for an appeal to proceed under the Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure. But without any notice beyond the directive set forth in the September 25th show cause order and without guidance as to what constitutes "cause" sufficient to allow an appeal to proceed under the Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure, this Court before Mr. Lamarca has filed a single sentence relating to his appeal explaining why the circuit court's rulings in his case should not be affirmed, sua sponte and on ad hoc basis throws the rule book out and gives Mr. Lamarca 20 pages and 27² days to demonstrate some undefined "cause."

9. On January 10, 2017, Mr. Lamarca filed a Rule 3.851 motion. He amended the motion on March 7, 2017. The amended motion presented four claims: 1) Mr. Lamarca's sentences of death violated the Sixth Amendment, pursuant to Hurst v. Florida, 136 S. Ct. 616 (2016). Mr. Lamarca's claim argued for the retroactivity of Hurst under both Witt v. State, 387 So. 2d 922 (Fla. 1980), and fundamental fairness; 2) Under Hurst v. State, 202 So. 3d 40 (Fla. 2016), Mr. Lamarca's death sentence violates the Eighth Amendment because, despite the fact his jury was not properly instructed, a non-unanimous recommendation for death was returned; 3) This Court's application of retroactivity to capital defendants whose death sentences became final after June 24, 2002, violates the Eighth Amendment; and 4) The requirement that a jury unanimously find that a capital defendant was eligible for a sentence of death changes the analysis of claims like Mr. Lamarca's ineffective assistance of counsel and violations of due process claims.

10. Additionally, specific circumstances and issues were raised before the circuit court. Indeed, Mr. Lamarca's case ²Mr. Lamarca was given 20 days but requested a 10 day extension to file his response. This Court granted the motion, in part, and provided him an additional 7 days to file his response.

presents a singularly unique case for application of Hurst v. Florida and Hurst v. State. First, Mr. Lamarca's death sentence became final after the issuance of Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466 (2000).³ In Hurst v. Florida, the United States Supreme Court relied upon Apprendi as the basis for ruling that Spaziano v. Florida, 468 U.S. 447 (1984) and Hildwin v. Florida, 490 U.S. 638 (1989) were "wrong, and irreconcilable with Apprendi." 136 S. Ct. at 623. The United States Supreme Court specifically held: "And in the Apprendi context, we have found that 'stare decisis does not compel adherence to a decision whose "underpinnings" have been "eroded" by subsequent developments of constitutional law.'" Id. at 623-24. It was on the basis of Apprendi that the United States Supreme Court concluded that the legal principal employed in Spaziano and Hildwin "was wrong." Hurst, 136 S. Ct. at 623. The United States Supreme Court specifically employed the past tense - "was wrong". The United States Supreme Court did not say Spaziano and Hildwin are wrong. Those decisions were wrong because they were "irreconcilable with Apprendi."⁴ Indeed, at his

³In Hurst v. Florida, 136 S. Ct. at 621, the United States Supreme Court explained:

In Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466, 494, 120 S.Ct. 2348, 147 L.Ed.2d 435 (2000), this Court held that any fact that "expose[s] the defendant to a greater punishment than that authorized by the jury's guilty verdict" is an "element" that must be submitted to a jury.

The result in Hurst v. Florida was premised upon Apprendi; it was an application of Apprendi to Florida's capital sentencing statute.

⁴In Hurst v. State, this Court recognized that Apprendi was at least as much of the basis for the result in Hurst v. Florida trial, Mr. Lamarca raised the very challenge to Florida's capital sentencing scheme that has now been held to be the law, i.e., that the jury did not unanimously determine the findings that were necessary for a death sentence. See R. 1890-1.

11. Furthermore, and most extraordinarily, Mr. Lamarca was sentenced to death on the basis of a single aggravating factor - his conviction for a prior violent felony, yet the jury recommendation was not unanimous. And, on direct appeal, this Court found error in the trial court's limitation of evidence relating to another suspect's motive to kill the victim. However, at that point, this Court found that the error was harmless. Lamarca v. State, 785 So. 2d 1209, 1214 (Fla. 2001).

12. These particular issues were neither raised nor decided in Hitchcock v. State.

13. Counsel can and does note that the procedure that this Court has unveiled for use in Mr. Lamarca's case was not employed in Hitchcock v. State. There was no requirement there that Mr. Hitchcock show "cause" because his appeal would proceed under the Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure. There Mr. Hitchcock was permitted to have counsel brief his issues.⁵ And certainly after as was Ring. Id at 53 ("Upon review of the decision in Hurst v. Florida, as well as the decisions in Apprendi and Ring, we conclude that the Sixth Amendment right to a trial by jury mandates that under Florida's capital sentencing scheme, the jury—not the judge—must be the finder of every fact, and thus every element, necessary for the imposition of the death penalty.").

⁵It is unclear why this Court chose Mr. Hitchcock's case to use as a vehicle to address some of the numerous issues relating to cataclysmic shift in Florida and Eighth Amendment law that the decision in Hitchcock issued, he had the right to have counsel file a motion for rehearing on which the Florida Rules of Appellate Procedure place no page limits. There is no doubt that undersigned counsel on behalf of Mr. Lamarca would have taken advantage of the right to file a motion for rehearing to explain that this Court's ruling created a huge problem with the constitutionality of Florida's capital sentencing scheme under the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments.

14. Indeed, in Hitchcock v. State, So. 3d , 2017 WL 3431500 (Fla. August 10, 2017), this Court wrote:

We have consistently applied our decision in Asay, denying the retroactive application of Hurst v. Florida as interpreted in Hurst v. State to defendants whose death sentences were final when the Supreme Court decided Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584, 122 S.Ct. 2428, 153 L.Ed.2d 556 (2002).

2017 WL 3431500 at *1. This Court then addressed Hitchcock's arguments saying:

Although Hitchcock references various constitutional provisions as a basis for arguments that Hurst v. State should entitle him to a new sentencing proceeding, these are nothing more than arguments that Hurst v. State should be applied retroactively to his sentence, which became final prior to Ring. As such, these arguments were rejected when have followed the United States Supreme Court's decision in Hurst v. Florida, 136 S. Ct. 616 (2016). Indeed, undersigned had filed the Initial Brief on behalf of Daniel Peterka eight days after Mr. Hitchcock's Initial Brief was filed. This Court did not enter an order staying Mr. Peterka's case until June 8, 2017. See Peterka v. State, Case No. SC17-593. And, Mr. Peterka filed a petition for writ of habeas corpus relating to the Florida Legislature's promulgation of 2017-1 which requires a unanimous jury verdict before a defendant is eligible for a sentence of death. And though Mr. Peterka filed his Initial Brief which demonstrates the stark distinctions between the issues and arguments that he and Mr. Hitchcock presented, he, too, has now received an order to show cause.

we decided Asay.

2017 WL 3431500 at *2. That is the extent of this Court's decision in Hitchcock v. State. Yet, this Court's premise: that Hitchcock's issues were decided by Asay is erroneous. Perhaps most significantly, it is simply impossible that the retroactivity of the constitutional right to a life sentence unless a jury returned a unanimous death recommendation which was recognized in Hurst v. State on the basis of the Eighth Amendment and the Florida Constitution could have been decided in Asay v. State, 210 So. 3d 1 (Fla. 2016). It simply was not raised or at issue there.

15. Hurst v. Florida issued on January 12, 2016. In challenging his death sentence in his 3.851 motion filed in late January of 2016, Asay relied upon Hurst v. Florida. Asay argued that under Witt v. State, 387 So. 2d 922 (Fla. 1980), Hurst v. Florida should be held to be retroactive. Briefing was completed in Asay, Case No. SC16-223, on February 23, 2016. Oral argument was held on March 2, 2016. A motion for supplemental briefing was filed, but denied March 29, 2016. Other than two pro se pleadings filed in May of 2016, nothing further was filed by Asay.

16. Hurst v. State issued on October 14, 2016. Asay filed nothing after the issuance of Hurst v. State before this Court's decision in Asay v. State issued on December 22, 2016. Asay did not present any arguments or constitutional claims based on Hurst v. State. Asay did not present an argument that his death sentences violated the Eighth Amendment or the Florida Constitution on the basis of the ruling in Hurst v. State. Asay made no arguments regarding the retroactivity of Hurst v. State.

17. And, for the adversarial process to properly function, a court can only decide an issue after the adversaries have briefed the court on the pros and cons of their respective positions. As explained by the United States Supreme Court:

The premise of our adversarial system is that appellate courts do not sit as self-directed boards of legal inquiry and research, but essentially as arbiters of legal questions presented and argued by the parties before them." Carducci v. Regan, 714 F.2d 171, 177 (D.C. Cir. 1983) (opinion for the court by Scalia, J.). In this case, petitioners did not ask us to hold that there is no constitutional right to informational privacy, and respondents and their amici thus understandably refrained from addressing that issue in detail. It is undesirable for us to decide a matter of this importance in a case in which we do not have the benefit of briefing by the parties and in which potential amici had little notice that the matter might be decided.

Nat'l Aeronautics and Space Admin. v. Nelson, 562 U.S. 134, 147 n.10 (2011).

18. Because, undersigned was not counsel for Mr. Hitchcock, she could not present this argument, or any others in a motion for rehearing. And, due to the unusual procedure that this Court has directed, Mr. Lamarca is precluded from being heard and fully presenting his arguments.

19. Mr. Lamarca submits that this procedure along with the unknown standard of what constitutes cause violates due process and equal protection. Mr. Lamarca requests that this Court permit him to fully brief his claims under the known standards that govern an appeal from the denial of a Rule 3.851 motion.

B. MR. LAMARCA'S SUCCESSIVE RULE 3.851 MOTION

20. As to the claims in Mr. Lamarca's Rule 3.851 motion, Mr. Lamarca raised at least one claim that does not appear to have been raised in Mr. Hitchcock's 3.851 motion because there is nothing in the initial brief addressing it and this Court's opinion does not address it. As to the other three claims, although there is some overlap with Mr. Hitchcock's arguments, each one of Mr. Lamarca's claims can only be resolved by an analysis of matters specific to his case.⁶

21. In his Rule 3.851 motion, Mr. Lamarca discussed the decisions in Mosley v. State and Asay v. State as they related to Claim I, Claim II, and Claim III.⁷ As to Claim I, a Sixth Amendment claim based upon Hurst v. Florida, Mr. Lamarca seeks to argue in his appeal that this Court's rulings in Asay and Mosley abandoning the binary nature of the balancing test set forth in Witt v. State means that each defendant with a pre-Ring death sentence is entitled to receive what Mr. Asay received, a case specific balancing of the Witt factors.⁸ In his briefing, Mr.

⁶For example, the question of whether "fundamental fairness" or "manifest injustice" warrant a particular result in a capital defendant's case requires a case by case analysis. The concept of fundamental fairness as discussed and embraced in Mosley v. State and the manifest injustice exception to the law of the case doctrine employed in Thompson v. State are no different. Both require a case by case determination of their applicability.

⁷Claim III was in fact premised upon the line seemingly drawn in Mosley and Asay. He argued that the arbitrariness of that line violated the Eighth Amendment under Furman v. Georgia.

⁸In Asay v. State, this Court conducted an analysis of Hurst v. Florida pursuant to Witt v. State, 387 So. 2d 922 (Fla. 1980), and concluded that Mr. Asay should not receive the retroactive benefit of the Sixth Amendment ruling in Hurst v. Florida because his conviction and death sentence were final in 1991. This Court observed that Hurst v. Florida found merit in a claim that Mr. Hurst had raised based upon the Sixth Amendment ruling in Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584 (2002). Without hearing what additional Hitchcock does not argue that in light of Asay and Mosley, the Witt balancing test for determining whether Hurst v. Florida applies retroactively must be conducted case by case. Nor does Mr. Hitchcock assert the case specific reasons that Mr. Lamarca pled in his motion to vacate. Indeed, what could establish arguments a litigant with a death sentence that became final after Mr. Asay's 1991 finality date and before the issuance of Ring on June 24, 2002, might have under Witt, this Court in Asay referenced June 24, 2002, as a potential dividing line. The decision in Mosley v. State, which issued the same day Asay did, concluded that the Sixth Amendment decision in Hurst v. Florida should apply to post-Ring death sentences.

Within the Asay decision, there is no indication that a retroactivity analysis under Witt was conducted as to this Court's decision in Hurst v. State, which was a ruling based upon the Florida Constitution and the Eighth Amendment. Hurst v. State specifically acknowledged the unanimity requirement it set forth was not based upon the Sixth Amendment and thus was not required by Ring. However, in Mosley v. State, this Court addressed the retroactivity of Hurst v. State under Witt and concluded that post-Ring death sentences were entitled to the retroactive benefit of its unanimity requirement. In subsequent rulings, there have been representations that Asay determined that Hurst v. State did not apply retroactively under Witt to cases final before Ring issued. See Archer v. Jones, 2017 WL 1034409 (Fla. March 17, 2017); Zack v. State, __ So. 3d __, 2017 WL 2590703 *5 (Fla. June 15, 2017) (Pariente, J., concurring in result).

While both Mr. Hitchcock and Mr. Lamarca have raised issues as to the Witt analysis that was conducted in Asay v. State regarding Hurst v. Florida, the argument made in the Hitchcock v. State briefing quickly diverges from the claims that Mr. Lamarca asserted in his Rule 3.851 motion. The Hitchcock brief does not seem to view Hurst v. Florida and Hurst v. State as involving distinctly different constitutional claims. A Sixth Amendment claim is distinctly different from an Eighth Amendment claim or a claim based upon a right set forth in the Florida Constitution that is not in the Sixth Amendment.

Quite simply, the Hitchcock briefing does not address the arguments that Mr. Lamarca is entitled to raise in this, his appeal of right from the denial of a successive Rule 3.851 motion, as to his distinctly different rights under Hurst v. Florida and Hurst v. State. And, this issue was not decided in Hitchcock v. State.

fundamental fairness more than the fact that a post-Apprendi defendant, who preserved the very issue addressed in Hurst v. Florida, whose jury, after hearing a single aggravator and not having the benefit of exculpatory evidence returned a non-unanimous recommendation for life. Certainly, this Court did not address these facts and issues in its opinion denying Mr. Hitchcock relief.

22. Claim II of Mr. Lamarca's Rule 3.851 motion is based upon the right to a life sentence unless a jury unanimously recommends a death sentence recognized in Hurst v. State. It establishes a presumption of a life sentence that is the equivalent of the guilt phase presumption of innocence. This Court recognized that the requirement that the jury must unanimously recommend death before this presumption of a life sentence can be overcome does not arise from the Sixth Amendment or from Hurst v. Florida or from Ring v. Arizona. It is a right emanating from the Florida Constitution and alternatively the Eighth Amendment. The requirement that the jury unanimously vote in favor of a death recommendation before a death sentence is authorized was embraced as a way to enhance the reliability of death sentences. Hurst v. State, 202 So. 3d at 59 ("We also note that the requirement of unanimity in capital jury findings will help to ensure the heightened level of protection necessary for a defendant who stands to lose his life as a penalty."). See Johnson v. Mississippi, 486 U.S. 578, 584 (1988) ("The fundamental respect for humanity underlying the Eighth Amendment's prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment gives rise to a special

'need for reliability in the determination that death is the appropriate punishment' in any capital case.").

23. In holding that requiring unanimity would produce more reliable death sentences, this Court acknowledged that death sentences imposed without the unanimous support of a jury lacked the requisite reliability. This was explained in Bevel v. State:

After our more recent decision in Hurst, 202 So. 3d 40, where we determined that a reliable penalty phase proceeding requires that "the penalty phase jury must be unanimous in making the critical findings and recommendation that are necessary before a sentence of death may be considered by the judge or imposed," 202 So. 3d at 59, we must consider whether the unrepresented mitigation evidence would have swayed one juror to make "a critical difference." Phillips, 608 So. 2d at 783.

Bevel v. State, 221 So. 3d 1168, 1182 (Fla. 2017).

24. This Court's recognition that "a reliable penalty phase requires" a unanimous jury death recommendation means that the jury's 11-1 death recommendation at Mr. Lamarca's resentencing does not qualify as reliable. In Mosley v. State, this Court noted that the unanimity requirement in Hurst v. State carried with it "heightened protection" for a capital defendant. Id., 209 So. 3d at 1278. This Court stated in Mosley that Hurst v. State had "emphasized the critical importance of a unanimous verdict." Id. This Court then wrote:

In this case, where the rule announced is of such fundamental importance, the interests of fairness and "cur[ing] individual injustice" compel retroactive application of Hurst despite the impact it will have on the administration of justice. State v. Glenn, 558 So.2d 4, 8 (Fla. 1990).

Mosley v. State, 209 So. 3d at 1282 (emphasis added). Mr.

Lamarca's claim is that Hurst v. State recognized that the non-unanimous recommendation shows that Mr. Lamarca's death sentence possesses substandard reliability. Mr. Lamarca's death sentence lacks the heightened reliability demanded by the Eighth Amendment. Hurst v. State, 202 So. 3d at 59 ("the requirement of unanimity in capital jury findings will help to ensure the heightened level of protection necessary for a defendant who stands to lose his life as a penalty.").

25. An examination of Mr. Hitchcock's briefing shows that the focus of his arguments is actually on Hurst v. Florida. His Summary of the Argument focuses only on Hurst v. Florida; it does not mention Hurst v. State. Argument IV of Mr. Hitchcock's initial brief does raise an Eighth Amendment argument arising from Hurst v. State, but focuses on the evolving standards of decency. In Hurst v. State, this Court found that there existed a national consensus that death sentences should only result when a jury unanimously consented to its imposition. Id., 202 So. 3d at 61. While there is a basis for Mr. Hitchcock's argument within Hurst v. State, it is not the Eighth Amendment argument and Florida Constitution argument that Mr. Lamarca will be making or that this Court decided in its opinion in Hitchcock v. State.

26. Again, Mr. Lamarca seeks to challenge his death sentence on the basis of the conclusion in Hurst v. State that a death sentence flowing from a non-unanimous death recommendation lacks reliability. This is a different argument than the one presented by Mr. Hitchcock, and it provides a much different and stronger argument that Mr. Lamarca should get the retroactive benefit of Hurst v. State. In Mosley, when evaluating Hurst v.

State using the Witt analysis, this Court wrote:

In this case, where the rule announced is of such fundamental importance, the interests of fairness and "cur[ing] individual injustice" compel retroactive application of Hurst despite the impact it will have on the administration of justice. State v. Glenn, 558 So.2d 4, 8 (Fla. 1990).

Mosley v. State, 209 So. 3d at 1282. The importance of the heightened reliability demanded by the Eighth Amendment was found in Mosley to be of such fundamental importance that this Court abandoned the binary approach to Witt. As indicated in Mosley, the Witt analysis in the context of Hurst v. State requires considering the need to cure "individual injustice." Accordingly, Mr. Lamarca will argue that under a case by case Witt analysis which Mosley said was required, the layers of unreliability and identified errors in his penalty phase show "individual injustice" in need of a cure. In light of the "individual injustice" in Mr. Lamarca's case, the scales are tipped and the interests of fairness exceed the State's interest in finality. The disposition of Mr. Hitchcock's appeal and arguments made therein requiring a case by case evaluation does not address the "individual injustice" present in Mr. Lamarca's case.

27. In addition to addressing Hurst v. Florida and Hurst v. State under Witt, Mr. Lamarca will be arguing in his appeal that the concept of fundamental fairness as identified and discussed in Mosley v. State, as well as the manifest injustice exception to the law of the case doctrine set forth in Thompson v. State, 208 So. 3d 49, 50 (Fla. 2016), both apply and require Mr. Lamarca to receive the benefit of Hurst v. Florida and Hurst v. State.

Under both "fundamental fairness" and "manifest injustice," Mr. Lamarca asserted in his Rule 3.851 motion that collateral relief was warranted under Hurst v. Florida and/or Hurst v. State.

28. And, while Mr. Hitchcock's briefing references both "fundamental fairness" and "manifest injustice" as reasons he should get collateral relief in light of Hurst v. Florida and Hurst v. State, it is clear from James v. State that both "fundamental fairness" and "manifest injustice" require case specific analyses when raised. Resolution of either or both of these equitable concepts in Mr. Hitchcock's case does not govern the result in Mr. Lamarca's case.

29. Claim III of Mr. Lamarca's 3.851 motion, challenges the seemingly bright line, as in time line, that resulted from Mosley and Asay. Here, Mr. Lamarca contends that this bright line set at June 24, 2002, is so arbitrary as to violate the Eighth Amendment principles enunciated in Furman v. Georgia. In separating those who are to receive the retroactive benefit of Hurst v. Florida and/or Hurst v. State from those who will not, the line drawn operates much the same as the IQ score of 70 cutoff at issue in Hall v. Florida.

30. Claim III is premised upon the Eighth Amendment and its requirement that a death sentence carry extra reliability in order to insure that it was not imposed arbitrarily. Heightened reliability in capital cases is a core value of the Eighth Amendment and Furman v. Georgia. In Hurst v. State, this Court held that enhanced reliability warranted the requirement that a death recommendation be returned by a unanimous jury. In doing so, the Court effectively recognized that a death sentence without the unanimous consent of the jury was lacking in reliability and thus did not carry the heightened reliability required by the Eighth Amendment. In that context, Mr. Lamarca will argue in his appeal of the denial of Claim III of his 3.851 motion that if this Court's decisions in Mosley and Asay established a bright line cutoff as to the date at which the State's interest in finality trumped the interests of fairness and curing individual injustice, such a bright line cutoff violated the Eighth Amendment principle set forth in Hall v. Florida.⁹ Mr. Hitchcock did not make this argument as to the retroactive benefit of Hurst v. State being arbitrarily limited by a bright line cutoff in violation of the Eighth Amendment. And, certainly, this Court did not address this issue in its opinion denying Mr. Hitchcock relief.

31. While this Court in Hurst v. State found non-unanimous death recommendations were lacking in reliability, the level of unreliability is obviously compounded in some cases by matters and issues that increase the unreliability of a particular death sentence. Just as there were death sentenced individuals on the wrong side of the 70 IQ score cutoff who were likely intellectually disabled and erroneously under sentence of death, there are individuals with pre-Ring death sentences that rest on proceedings layered in error and/or outdated science and/or discredited forensic evidence such that the cumulative unreliability rises up to trump the State's interest in finality.

⁹It should be obvious that although this Court found the State's interest in finality increases the older a case is, the older case will often have greater unreliability due to advances in science and improvements in the quality of the representation in capital cases over time.

32. Indeed, the specific issues of Mr. Lamarca's case where a post-Apprendi defendant preserved the very issue addressed in Hurst v. Florida, and whose jury, after hearing a single aggravator and erroneously not having the benefit of exculpatory evidence returned a non-unanimous recommendation for life establish the unreliability of Mr. Lamarca's sentence. Yet, there was no consideration of such unique and extraordinary circumstances in Mr. Hitchcock's case.

33. As to Claim IV of Mr. Lamarca's Rule 3.851 motion, it did not involve the retroactivity of Hurst v. Florida and Hurst v. State. Instead, the claim arose from the fact that at a resentencing if one is ordered, Mr. Lamarca will have a right to a life sentence unless the jury returns a unanimous death recommendation. The claim asks how this affects the validity of this Court's rejection of Mr. Lamarca's Strickland and Brady claims in his previous motion to vacate. Mr. Lamarca's challenge is to this Court's affirmance of the denial of his prior Rule 3.851 motion.

34. This Court's recent decision in Bevel v. State, 221 So. 3d 1168 (Fla. 2017), supports the validity of Claim IV of Mr. Lamarca's Rule 3.851 motion.

35. In his initial briefing, Mr. Hitchcock does not the same claim that Mr. Lamarca presented. And, this Court did not address that issues in its opinion denying Mr. Hitchcock relief.

36. In Argument VII of his briefing, Mr. Hitchcock argues that all prior postconviction rulings must be revisited in light of Hurst v. Florida. Beyond specifying a prior denial of a claims based on Ring v. Arizona and on Caldwell v. Mississippi, Mr. Hitchcock just seeks to incorporate his prior 3.851 motions. See (Hitchcock v. State, Case No. SC17-445, Initial Brief at 57). This Court has previously held referring to and incorporating by reference arguments presented in a 3.851 motion constitutes an inadequate way to present issues. Duest v. Dugger, 555 So. 2d 849, 852 (Fla. 1990) (“Merely making reference to arguments below without further elucidation does not suffice to preserve issues, and these claims are deemed to have been waived.”). Whatever it is that Mr. Hitchcock has raised, it is not the same as Claim IV of Mr. Lamarca’s Rule 3.851 motion, nor the way Mr. Lamarca will brief his claims before this Court.

37. The specific claim raised by Mr. Lamarca was simply not raised by Mr. Hitchcock or addressed by this Court. Claim IV is a case specific claim requiring a case by case analysis.

WHEREFORE, Mr. Lamarca requests that this Court permit him to submit briefing on the issues that he raised in his Rule 3.851 motion and that arose during the proceedings before the circuit court.
