

No. SC17-1205

IN THE
Supreme Court of Florida

STEPHEN TODD BOOKER,

Petitioner,

v.

JULIE L. JONES, SECRETARY,
FLORIDA DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS,

Respondent.

PETITIONER'S RESPONSE TO SEPTEMBER 27, 2017 ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE

Ann Finnell
Finnell, McGuinness,
Nezami & Andux, P.A.
2114 Oak Street
Jacksonville, Florida 32204
afinnell@fmnlawyers.com
(904) 791-1101
Florida Bar. No.: 0270040

Billy H. Nolas
Chief, Capital Habeas Unit
Office of the Federal Public Defender
227 N. Bronough Street, Suite 4200
Tallahassee, FL 32301
billy_nolas@fd.org
(850) 942-8818
Florida Bar No.: 00806821

Counsel for Petitioner

RECEIVED, 10/11/2017 02:43:29 PM, Clerk, Supreme Court

TABLE OF CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION.....1

REQUEST FOR ORAL ARGUMENT AND FULL BRIEFING2

ARGUMENT.....2

I. Petitioner’s death sentence violates Hurst, and the error is not “harmless”.....2

II. This Court’s “retroactivity cutoff” at Ring is unconstitutional and should not be applied to Petitioner’s post-Apprendi death sentence.....5

 A. This Court’s Ring-based retroactivity cutoff is unconstitutional as applied to post-Apprendi death sentences because Apprendi was the constitutional basis for both Ring and Hurst.....7

 B. This Court’s retroactivity cutoff violates the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments’ prohibition against arbitrary and capricious imposition of the death penalty.....9

 C. This Court’s retroactivity cutoff violates the Fourteenth Amendment’s guarantee of equal protection and due process.....13

III. Because the Hurst decisions announced substantive constitutional rules, the Supremacy Clause of the United States Constitution requires state courts to apply those rules retroactively to all cases on collateral review.....15

 A. The Hurst decisions announced substantive rules that must be applied retroactively to Petitioner under the Supremacy Clause.....16

 B. This Court has an obligation to address Petitioner’s federal retroactivity arguments.....20

CONCLUSION.....20

INTRODUCTION

Petitioner’s death sentence was imposed pursuant to a sentencing scheme that was ruled unconstitutional in Hurst v. Florida, 136 S. Ct. 616 (2016), and Hurst v. State, 202 So. 3d 40 (Fla. 2016). His sentence became “final” in 2001, after the United States Supreme Court decided Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466 (2000). A core issue in this case is whether this Court should apply its “retroactivity cutoff” to deny Petitioner Hurst relief on the ground that his sentence did not become final at least one day after the 2002 decision in Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584 (2002), even though the rule announced in Apprendi was the basis for both Ring and Hurst.

This Court has already applied Hurst retroactively as a matter of state law in dozens of collateral-review cases where the defendant’s sentence became final after Ring. But the Court has also created a state-law cutoff at the date Ring was decided—June 24, 2002—to deny relief in dozens of other collateral-review cases. There are 22 Florida cases without penalty-phase waivers and with non-unanimous jury recommendations that became “final” during the two-year period between Apprendi and Ring. This Court has never specifically addressed this “Apprendi gap” in any case, not even in Hitchcock v. State, No. SC17-445, 2017 WL 3431500 (Fla.

Aug. 10, 2017). Nor has the Court directly addressed the constitutionality of denying Hurst retroactivity as a matter of federal law, in Hitchcock or any other case.¹

REQUEST FOR ORAL ARGUMENT AND FULL BRIEFING

This case presents an important issue of first impression: whether federal law requires this Court to extend Hurst retroactivity to death sentences that became final after Apprendi but before Ring, rather than cabining Hurst relief to post-Ring death sentences. Petitioner respectfully requests oral argument on this and related issues pursuant to Fla. R. App. P. 9.320. Petitioner also requests that the Court permit full review in this case in accord with the normal, untruncated habeas and briefing rules.

Depriving Petitioner the opportunity for full merits review would constitute an arbitrary deprivation of the vested right to habeas corpus review under Article I, § 13, and Article V, § 3(b)(9), of the Florida Constitution. See Logan v. Zimmerman Brush Co., 455 U.S. 422 (1982); Hicks v. Oklahoma, 447 U.S. 343 (1980).

ARGUMENT

I. Petitioner’s death sentence violates Hurst, and the error is not “harmless”

Petitioner was sentenced to death pursuant to an unconstitutional Florida capital sentencing scheme. In Hurst v. Florida, the United States Supreme Court held that Florida’s scheme violated the Sixth Amendment because it required the judge, not the jury, to make the findings of fact required to impose the death penalty under Florida law. 136 S. Ct. at 620-22. Those findings included: (1) the aggravating factors that were proven beyond a reasonable doubt; (2) whether those aggravators were “sufficient” to justify the death penalty; and (3) whether those aggravators outweighed the mitigation. Under Florida’s unconstitutional scheme, an “advisory” jury rendered a generalized recommendation for life or death by a majority vote, without specifying the factual basis for the recommendation, and then the sentencing judge alone, notwithstanding the jury’s recommendation, conducted the fact-finding. Id. at 622. In striking down that scheme, the Court held that the jury, not the judge, must make the findings of fact required to impose death. Id.

¹ Relief should not be denied here in light of Hitchcock. Petitioner notes that there is a petition for a writ of certiorari pending in Hitchcock (No. 17-6180).

On remand, this Court applied the holding of Hurst v. Florida, and further held that the Eighth Amendment requires unanimous jury fact-finding as to each of the required elements, and also a unanimous recommendation by the jury to impose the death penalty. Hurst v. State, 202 So. 3d at 53-59. The Court also noted that even if the jury unanimously finds that each of the required elements is satisfied, the jury is not required to recommend the death penalty and the judge is not required to sentence the defendant to death. Id. at 57-58.

Petitioner’s jury was never asked to make unanimous findings of fact as to any of the required elements. Instead, after being instructed that its decision was advisory, and that the ultimate responsibility for imposing a death sentence rested with the judge, the jury rendered a non-unanimous, generalized recommendation that the judge sentence Petitioner to death. The record does not reveal whether Petitioner's jurors unanimously agreed that any particular aggravating factor had been proven beyond a reasonable doubt, or unanimously agreed that the aggravators were sufficient for death, or unanimously agreed that the aggravators outweighed the mitigation. But the record is clear that Petitioner's jurors were not unanimous as to whether the death penalty should even be recommended to the court.

Petitioner's pre-Hurst jury recommended the death penalty by a vote of 8-4. This Court's precedent makes clear that Hurst errors are not harmless where the defendant's pre-Hurst jury recommended death by a non-unanimous vote. Dubose v. State, 210 So. 3d 641, 657 (Fla. 2017) (“[I]n cases where the jury makes a non-unanimous recommendation of death, the Hurst error is not harmless.”). This Court has declined to apply the harmless error doctrine in every case where the pre-Hurst jury's recommendation was not unanimous.²

To the extent any of the aggravators applied to Petitioner were based on prior convictions, the judge's finding of such aggravators does not render the Hurst error harmless. Even if the jury would have found the same aggravators, Florida law does not authorize death sentences based on the mere existence of an aggravator. As noted above, Florida law requires fact-finding as to both the existence of aggravators and the “sufficiency” of the particular aggravators to warrant imposition of the death penalty. There is no way to conclude whether the jury would have made the same sufficiency determination as the judge. That is why this Court has consistently rejected the idea that a judge’s finding of prior-conviction aggravators is relevant in the harmless-error analysis of Hurst claims, and has granted Hurst relief despite the presence of such aggravators. See, e.g., Franklin v. State, 209 So. 3d 1241, 1248 (Fla. 2016) (rejecting “the State’s contention that Franklin’s prior convictions for other violent felonies insulate Franklin’s death sentence from Ring and Hurst”).³

² See, e.g., Bailey v. Jones, No. SC17-433, 2017 WL 2874121, at *1 (Fla. July 6, 2017) (11-1 jury vote); Hertz v. Jones, 218 So. 3d 428, 431-32 (Fla. 2017) (10-2 jury vote); Hernandez v. Jones, 217 So. 3d 1032, 1033 (Fla. 2017) (11-1 jury vote); Card v. Jones, 219 So. 3d 47, 48 (Fla. 2017) (11-1 jury vote); McMillian v. State, 214 So. 3d 1274, 1289 (Fla. 2017) (10-2 jury vote).

II. This Court’s “retroactivity cutoff” at Ring is unconstitutional and should not be applied to Petitioner’s post-Apprendi death sentence

Beginning with Mosley v. State, 209 So. 3d 1248 (Fla. 2016), this Court has applied Hurst retroactively as a matter of state law and granted relief in dozens of collateral-review cases where the defendant’s sentence became final after Ring. But the Court has created a state-law cutoff at the date Ring was decided—June 24, 2002—to deny relief in dozens of other collateral-review cases.

³ Moreover, although this Court’s state-law precedent is sufficient to resolve any harmless-error inquiry in this case, the United States Constitution would also prohibit a denial of relief based on the harmless error doctrine because any attempt to discern what a jury in a constitutional proceeding would have decided—based solely on the pre-Hurst jury’s advisory recommendation—would violate the Sixth and Eighth Amendments. See, e.g., Caldwell v. Mississippi, 472 U.S. 320, 328-29 (1985) (explaining that a jury’s belief about its role in death sentencing can materially affect its decision-making); Sullivan v. Louisiana, 508 U.S. 275, 279-80 (1993) (foreclosing application of the harmless-error doctrine to deny relief based on jury decisions not comports with Sixth Amendment requirements).

Petitioner’s death sentence became final during the two-year period between Apprendi and Ring. The Court has never specifically addressed this “Apprendi gap” in its state-law retroactivity precedent, not even in Hitchcock v. State, No. SC17-445, 2017 WL 3431500 (Fla. Aug. 10, 2017). Moreover, the Court has not addressed the denial of Hurst retroactivity to post-Apprendi death sentences (or any pre-Ring sentences) as a matter of federal law.

The Ring-based retroactivity cutoff violates the United States Constitution and should not be applied to deny Petitioner the same Hurst relief being granted in scores of materially indistinguishable collateral-review cases, particularly given that his sentence became final after Apprendi, which was the constitutional basis for both Ring and Hurst. Denying Petitioner Hurst retroactivity because his death sentence became final after Apprendi in 2001, while affording retroactivity to similarly-situated defendants who were sentenced (or resentenced) between 2002 and 2016, would violate the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments’ prohibition against arbitrary and capricious imposition of the death penalty, as well as the Fourteenth Amendment’s guarantee of equal protection and due process.

A. This Court’s Ring-based retroactivity cutoff is unconstitutional as applied to post-Apprendi death sentences because Apprendi was the constitutional basis for both Ring and Hurst

This Court’s Ring-based retroactivity cutoff is unconstitutional as applied to Petitioner’s post-Apprendi death sentence because the rule announced in Apprendi was the constitutional basis for both Ring and Hurst. It was Apprendi, not Ring, which first explained that the Sixth Amendment requires that any finding that increases a defendant’s maximum sentence is an element of the offense that must be found by a jury beyond a reasonable doubt. See Apprendi, 530 U.S. at 490. Indeed, as the United States Supreme Court stated in Hurst, Ring applied Apprendi’s analysis to conclude that Mr. Ring’s death sentence violated the Sixth Amendment. See 136 S. Ct. at 621. Just as Ring applied Apprendi’s principles to Arizona’s capital sentencing scheme, Hurst applied Apprendi’s principles to Florida’s scheme.

In Hurst, the Court repeatedly stated that Florida’s scheme was incompatible with “Apprendi’s rule,” of which Ring was an application. 136 S. Ct. at 621. In overruling its pre-Apprendi precedent approving of Florida’s scheme—Spaziano v. Florida, 468 U.S. 447 (1984), and Hildwin v. Florida, 490 U.S. 638 (1989)—Hurst stated that those decisions were “irreconcilable with Apprendi,” and drew an analogy to Ring’s overruling of pre-Apprendi precedent approving of Arizona’s scheme—Walton v. Arizona, 497 U.S. 639 (1990)—which also could not “survive the reasoning of Apprendi.” Hurst, 136 S. Ct. at 623. Thus, both Ring and Hurst make clear that their operative constitutional holdings derived directly from Apprendi.

This Court has consistently understood that the Sixth Amendment rule applied in Ring and Hurst derived from Apprendi. In Mosley, this Court observed that Ring was an application of Apprendi. See 209 So. 3d at 1279-80 (explaining that in Ring the Court “applied its reasoning from Apprendi.”). This was not a new observation; over many years, this Court acknowledged that Ring merely applied the Apprendi rule, and that Ring broke no new ground of its own. See, e.g., Johnson v. State, 904 So. 2d 400, 405-06 (Fla. 2005) (explaining that “Ring was not a sudden or unforeseeable development in constitutional law; rather, it was an evolutionary refinement in capital jurisprudence,” in that “[t]he Supreme Court merely applied the reasoning of another case, Apprendi.”) (internal quotation omitted).

Notably, in the period between Apprendi and Ring, this Court rejected challenges to Florida’s capital sentencing scheme under Apprendi not because the Court did not yet believe Apprendi was applicable in the death penalty context, but instead, because the United States Supreme Court had upheld Florida’s death penalty against constitutional challenge notwithstanding Apprendi. See, e.g., Mills v. Moore, 786 So. 2d 532 (Fla. 2001). This Court rejected challenges to Florida’s death-sentencing scheme on the same basis after Apprendi as it did after Ring: the United States Supreme Court had approved of Florida’s scheme. Compare Mills, 786 So.

2d at 532 (holding that Apprendi did not apply because Florida’s scheme had been upheld by the United States Supreme Court), with Bottoson v. Moore, 833 So. 2d 693 (Fla. 2002) (holding that Ring did not apply because Florida’s scheme had previously been upheld by the United States Supreme Court and citing Mills), and King v. Moore, 831 So. 2d 143 (Fla. 2002) (same).

In light of Apprendi’s fundamental importance to both Ring and Hurst, it would violate the federal constitutional prohibition against the arbitrary and capricious imposition of the death penalty, as well as the constitutional guarantees of equal protection and due process, to extend Hurst retroactivity to 14 years of post-Ring death sentences while denying Hurst retroactivity to the small number of individuals like Petitioner whose death sentences were finalized in the two years between Apprendi and Ring. Moreover, as discussed below, federal law prohibits a retroactivity “cutoff” at Ring, and requires that the Hurst decisions apply retroactively to all cases on collateral review, including post-Apprendi cases.

B. This Court’s retroactivity cutoff violates the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments’ prohibition against arbitrary and capricious imposition of the death penalty

This Court’s retroactivity cutoff violates the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments’ prohibition against arbitrary and capricious imposition of the death penalty. The death penalty cannot “be imposed under sentencing procedures that create[] a substantial risk that it would be inflicted in an arbitrary or capricious manner.” Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 188 (1976); see also Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 310 (1972) (“[T]he Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments cannot tolerate the infliction of a sentence of death under legal systems that permit this unique penalty to be so wantonly and so freakishly imposed.”) (Stewart, J., concurring). In other words, the death penalty cannot be imposed in a way that is comparable to being “struck by lightning.” Furman, 408 U.S. at 308.

Experience has already shown the arbitrary results inherent in this Court’s application of the Ring-based retroactivity cutoff. The date of a particular death sentence’s finality on direct appeal in relation to the June 24, 2002 decision in Ring—and thus whether this Court has held Hurst retroactive based on its bright-line cutoff—has at times depended on whether there were delays in transmitting the record on appeal to this Court for the direct appeal; whether direct appeal counsel sought extensions of time to file a brief; whether a case overlapped with this Court’s summer recess; how long the assigned Justice of this Court took to submit the opinion for release; whether an extension was sought for a rehearing motion and whether such a motion was filed; whether there was a scrivener’s error necessitating issuance of a corrected opinion; whether counsel chose to file a petition for a writ of certiorari in the United States Supreme Court or sought an extension to file such a petition; and how long a certiorari petition remained pending in the Supreme Court.

In one striking example, this Court affirmed Gary Bowles’s and James Card’s unrelated death sentences in separate opinions that were issued on the same day, October 11, 2001. Bowles v. State, 804 So. 2d 1173 (Fla. 2001); Card v. State, 803 So. 2d 613 (Fla. 2001). Both inmates petitioned for a writ of certiorari in the United States Supreme Court. Mr. Card’s sentence became final four (4) days after Ring was decided—on June 28, 2002—when his certiorari petition was denied. Card v. Florida, 536 U.S. 963 (2002). Mr. Bowles’s sentence, however, became final seven (7) days before Ring was decided—on June 17, 2002—when his certiorari petition was denied. Bowles v. Florida, 536 U.S. 930 (2002). This Court recently granted Hurst relief to Mr. Card, ruling that Hurst was retroactive because his sentence became final after the Ring cutoff. See Card, 219 So. 3d at 47. Mr. Bowles, on the other hand, whose case was decided on direct appeal on the same day as Mr. Card’s, and who filed his certiorari petition in the Supreme Court after Mr. Card, now finds himself on the pre-Ring side of this Court’s current retroactivity cutoff.

Other arbitrary factors affecting whether a defendant receives Hurst relief under this Court’s date-of-Ring-based retroactivity approach include whether a resentencing was granted. Under the Court’s current approach, “older” cases dating back to the 1980s with a post-Ring resentencing are subject to Hurst, while other less “old” cases are not. See, e.g., Johnson v. State, 205 So. 3d 1285, 1285 (granting Hurst relief to a defendant whose crime occurred in 1981 but was granted relief on a third successive post-conviction motion in 2010, years after the Ring decision); Card, 219 So. 3d at 47 (granting Hurst relief to a defendant whose crime occurred in 1981 but was afforded relief on a second successive post-conviction motion in 2002—just four days after Ring was decided); cf. Calloway v. State, 210 So. 3d 1160 (Fla. 2017) (granting Hurst relief in a case where the crime occurred in the late 1990s, but interlocutory appeals resulted in a 10-year delay before the trial). Under this Court’s approach, a defendant who was originally sentenced to death before Petitioner, but who was later resentenced to death after Ring, would receive Hurst relief and Petitioner would not.

Moreover, under the Court’s current rule, some litigants whose Ring claims were wrongly rejected on the merits during the 2002-2016 period will be denied the benefit of Hurst because the Court addressed the issue in a post-conviction rather than a direct appeal posture. See, e.g., Miller v. State, 926 So. 2d 1243, 1259 (Fla. 2006); Nixon v. State, 932 So. 2d 1009, 1024 (Fla. 2006); Bates v. State, 3 So. 3d 1091, 1106 n.14 (Fla. 2009); Bradley v. State, 33 So. 3d 664, 670 n.6 (Fla. 2010).⁴

⁴ Even if this Court were to maintain its unconstitutional retroactivity “cutoff” at Ring, individuals who preserved the substance of the Hurst decisions before Hurst, such as Petitioner, should receive the retroactive benefit of Hurst under this Court’s “fundamental fairness” doctrine, which the Court has previously applied in other contexts, see, e.g., James v. State, 615 So. 2d 668, 669 (Fla. 1993), and which the Court has applied once in the Hurst context, see Mosley, 209 So. 3d at 1274, but inexplicably never addressed since. Justice Lewis recently endorsed this “preservation” approach in Hitchcock. See 2017 WL 3431500, at *2 (Lewis, J., concurring) (stating that the Court should “simply entertain Hurst claims for those

C. This Court’s retroactivity cutoff violates the Fourteenth Amendment’s guarantee of equal protection and due process

This Court’s retroactivity cutoff violates the Fourteenth Amendment’s guarantee of equal protection and due process. As an equal protection matter, the cutoff treats death-sentenced prisoners in the same posture—on collateral review—differently without “some ground of difference that rationally explains the different treatment.” Eisenstadt v. Baird, 405 U.S. 438, 447 (1972). When two classes are created to receive different treatment by a state actor like this Court, the question is whether there is a rational basis for the different treatment. Id.; see also McLaughlin v. Florida, 379 U.S. 184, 191 (1964). The Fourteenth Amendment requires that distinctions in state criminal laws that impinge upon fundamental rights be strictly scrutinized. See, e.g., Skinner v. Oklahoma, 316 U.S. 535, 541 (1942). Capital defendants have a fundamental right to a reliable determination of their sentences. See Lockett v. Ohio, 438 U.S. 586, 604 (1978). When a state draws a line between defendants who will receive the benefit of the rules designed to enhance the quality of decision-making by a penalty-phase jury, and those who will not, the state’s justification for that line must satisfy strict scrutiny. Far from meeting strict scrutiny, defendants who properly presented and preserved the substance of the issue, even before Ring arrived.”). Petitioner urges that the Court allow him to brief this aspect of his case in an untruncated fashion.

this Court's Hurst retroactivity cutoff lacks even a rational connection to any legitimate state interest. See Dep't of Agric. v. Moreno, 413 U.S. 528, 533 (1973).

As a due process matter, denying Hurst retroactivity to “pre-Ring” defendants like Petitioner violates the Fourteenth Amendment because once a state requires certain sentencing procedures, it creates Fourteenth Amendment life and liberty interests in those procedures. See, e.g., Evitts v. Lucey, 469 U.S. 387, 393 (1985) (due process interest in state-created right to direct appeal); Hicks, 447 U.S. at 346 (liberty interest in state-created sentencing procedures); Ford v. Wainwright, 477 U.S. 399, 427-31 (1986) (O'Connor, J., concurring) (liberty interest in meaningful state competency proceedings); Ohio Adult Parole Auth. v. Woodard, 523 U.S. 272, 288-89 (1998) (O'Connor, J., with Souter, Ginsburg, & Breyer, JJ., concurring) (life interest in state-created right to capital clemency proceedings).

Although the right to the particular procedure is established by state law, the violation of the life and liberty interest it creates is governed by federal constitutional law. See Hicks, 447 U.S. at 347; Ford, 477 U.S. at 399, 428-29; Evitts, 469 U.S. at 393 (state procedures employed “as ‘an integral part of the . . . system for finally adjudicating the guilt or innocence of a defendant’” must comport with due process). Defendants have “a substantial and legitimate expectation that [they] will be deprived of [their] liberty only to the extent determined by the jury in the exercise of its discretion . . . and that liberty interest is one that the Fourteenth Amendment preserves against arbitrary deprivation by the State.” Hicks, 447 U.S. at 347. Courts have found in a variety of contexts that state-created death penalty procedures vest in a capital defendant life and liberty interests that are protected by due process. See, e.g., Ohio Adult Parole Auth., 523 U.S. at 272; Ford, 477 U.S. at 427-31. In Hicks, the Supreme Court held that the trial court’s failure to instruct the jury that it had the option to impose an alternative sentence violated the state-created liberty interest (and federal due process) in having the jury select his sentence from the full range of alternatives available under state law. 477 U.S. at 343.

III. Because the Hurst decisions announced substantive constitutional rules, the Supremacy Clause of the United States Constitution requires state courts to apply those rules retroactively to all cases on collateral review

As Petitioner argued in the pending habeas petition filed in this Court on June 27, 2017, the United States Supreme Court held in Montgomery v. Louisiana, 136 S. Ct. 718, 731-32 (2016), that the Supremacy Clause of the Constitution requires state courts to apply “substantive” constitutional rules retroactively as a matter of federal constitutional law, notwithstanding any separate state-law retroactivity analysis.⁵ Id. at 728-29 (“[W]hen a new substantive rule of constitutional law controls the outcome of a case, the Constitution requires state collateral review courts to give retroactive effect to that rule.”) (emphasis added). Thus, Montgomery held, “[w]here state collateral review proceedings permit prisoners to challenge the lawfulness of their confinement, States cannot refuse to give retroactive effect to a substantive constitutional right that determines the outcome of that challenge.” Id. at 731-32.

⁵ In light of this Court’s restriction on the length of this response, Petitioner provides a summary of his arguments under Montgomery here, and incorporates by reference the more expansive arguments included in his June 27, 2017 petition (attached).

Importantly, Montgomery found the rule announced in Miller v. Alabama, 567 U.S. 460 (2012) (holding that imposition of mandatory sentences of life without parole on juveniles violates the Eighth Amendment), substantive even though the Miller rule had “a procedural component.” Id. at 734. The Montgomery Court explained that “[t]here are instances in which a substantive change in the law must be attended by a procedure that enables a prisoner to show that he falls within a category of persons whom the law may no longer punish,” id. at 735, and that the necessary procedures do not “transform substantive rules into procedural ones,” id.

A. The Hurst decisions announced substantive rules that must be applied retroactively to Petitioner under the Supremacy Clause

The Hurst decisions announced substantive rules that this Court must apply retroactively to Petitioner under the Supremacy Clause. First, a Sixth Amendment rule was established requiring that a jury find as fact beyond a reasonable doubt: (1) each aggravating circumstance; (2) that those aggravators together are “sufficient” to justify imposition of the death penalty; and (3) that those aggravators together outweigh the mitigation in the case. Hurst v. State, 202 So. 3d at 53-59. Such findings are manifestly substantive. See Montgomery, 136 S. Ct. at 734 (holding that the decision whether a juvenile is a person “whose crimes reflect the transient immaturity of youth” is a substantive, not procedural, rule). As in Montgomery, these requirements amounted to an “instance[] in which a substantive change in the law must be attended by a procedure that enables a prisoner to show that he falls within a category of persons whom the law may no longer punish.” Id. at 735.

Second, an Eighth Amendment rule was established that requires those three beyond-a-reasonable-doubt findings to be made unanimously by the jury. The substantive nature of the unanimity rule is apparent from this Court’s explanation in Hurst v. State that unanimity (1) is necessary to ensure compliance with the constitutional requirement that the death penalty be applied narrowly to the worst offenders, and (2) ensures that the sentencing determination “expresses the values of the community as they currently relate to the imposition of the death penalty.” 202 So. 3d at 60-61. The function of the unanimity rule is to ensure that Florida’s death-sentencing scheme complies with the Eighth Amendment and to “achieve the important goal of bringing [Florida’s] capital sentencing laws into harmony with the direction of the society reflected in [the majority of death penalty] states and with federal law.” Id. The rule is therefore substantive as a matter of federal retroactivity law. See Welch v. United States, 136 S. Ct. 1257, 1265 (2016) (“[T]his Court has determined whether a new rule is substantive or procedural by considering the function of the rule”). This is true even though the rule’s subject concerns the method by which a jury makes its decision. See Montgomery, 136 S. Ct. at 735

(noting that state’s ability to determine method of enforcing constitutional rule does not convert rule from substantive to procedural).

The Sixth Amendment requirement that each element of a Florida death sentence must be found beyond a reasonable doubt, and the Eighth Amendment requirement of jury unanimity in fact-finding, are substantive constitutional rules as a matter of federal law because they place certain murders “beyond the State’s power to punish,” Welch, 136 S. Ct. at 1265, with a sentence of death. Following the Hurst decisions, “[e]ven the use of impeccable factfinding procedures could not legitimate a sentence based on” the judge-sentencing scheme. Id. The “unanimous finding of aggravating factors and [of] the facts that are sufficient to impose death, as well as the unanimous finding that they outweigh the mitigating circumstances, all serve to help narrow the class of murderers subject to capital punishment,” Hurst, 202 So. 3d at 60 (emphasis added), i.e., the new law by necessity places certain individuals beyond the state’s power to impose a death sentence. Thus, a substantive rule, rather than a procedural rule, resulted from the Hurst decisions. See Welch, 136 S. Ct. at 1264-65 (a substantive rule “alters . . . the class of persons that the law punishes.”).

Hurst retroactivity is not undermined by Summerlin, 542 U.S. at 364, where the United States Supreme Court held that Ring was not retroactive in a federal habeas case. Summerlin did not review a statute, like Florida’s, that required the jury not only to conduct the fact-finding regarding the aggravators, but also as to whether the aggravators were sufficient to impose death and whether death was an appropriate sentence. Summerlin acknowledged that if the Court itself “[made] a certain fact essential to the death penalty . . . [the change] would be substantive.” 542 U.S. at 354. Such a change occurred in Hurst where, for the first time, the Court found it unconstitutional for a judge alone to find that “sufficient aggravating factors exist and [t]hat there are insufficient mitigating circumstances to outweigh the aggravating circumstances.” 136 S. Ct. at 622 (internal citation omitted).

Moreover, Hurst, unlike Ring, addressed the proof-beyond-a-reasonable-doubt standard in addition to the jury trial right, and the United States Supreme Court has always regarded proof-beyond-a-reasonable-doubt decisions as substantive. See, e.g., Ivan V. v. City of New York, 407 U.S. 203, 205 (1972); Powell v. Delaware, 153 A.3d 69 (Del. 2016) (holding Hurst retroactive under Delaware’s state Teague-like retroactivity doctrine and distinguishing Summerlin on the ground that Summerlin “only addressed the misallocation of fact-finding responsibility (judge versus jury) and not . . . the applicable burden of proof.”).⁶

⁶ The recent ruling of an Eleventh Circuit panel in Lambrix v. Sec’y, No. 17-14413, 2017 WL 4416205 (11th Cir. Oct. 5, 2017), does not negate Petitioner’s arguments. First, Lambrix was decided in the context of the current federal habeas statute, which dramatically curtails review: “A state court’s decision rises to the level of an unreasonable application of federal law only where the ruling is objectively unreasonable, not merely wrong; even clear error will not suffice.” Id. at *8 (internal quotation marks omitted). In contrast, this Court’s application of federal constitutional protections is not circumscribed, as this Court noted in the Hurst context in Hurst v. State, 202 So. 3d 40, 44 (Fla. 2016) (“[W]e hold that the Supreme

B. This Court has an obligation to address Petitioner’s federal retroactivity arguments

Because this Court is bound by the federal constitution, it has the obligation to address Petitioner’s federal retroactivity arguments. See Testa v. Katt, 330 U.S. 386, 392-93 (1947) (state courts must entertain federal claims in the absence of a “valid excuse”); Martin v. Hunter’s Lessee, 14 U.S. 304, 340-42 (1816). Addressing those claims meaningfully requires full briefing and oral argument. The federal constitutional issues were raised in Hitchcock, but this Court ignored them. Dismissing this appeal based on Hitchcock would compound that error.

CONCLUSION

This Court should hold that the Hurst decisions must be applied retroactively to Petitioner’s post-Apprendi death sentence, vacate Petitioner’s death sentence, and remand to the circuit court for a new penalty phase or imposition of a life sentence.

Court’s decision in Hurst v. Florida requires that all critical findings necessary before the trial court may consider imposing a sentence of death must be found unanimously by the jury We also hold . . . under the Eighth Amendment to the United States Constitution, that in order for the trial court to impose a sentence of death, the jury’s recommended sentence must be unanimous”). Second, Lambrix dealt with an idiosyncratic issue—the “retroactivity” of Florida’s new capital sentencing statute. Lambrix did not argue, as Petitioner does here, for the retroactivity of the constitutional rules arising from the Hurst decisions. Third, the Eleventh Circuit did not address the specific arguments about federal retroactivity that are raised here. Fourth, almost needless to say, an Eleventh Circuit panel decision has no precedential value in this forum.

Respectfully submitted,

Ann Finnell
Finnell, McGuinness,
Nezami & Andux, P.A.
2114 Oak Street
Jacksonville, Florida 32204
afinnell@fmnlawyers.com
(904) 791-1101
Florida Bar. No.: 0270040

Billy H. Nolas
Chief, Capital Habeas Unit
Office of the Federal Public Defender
227 N. Bronough Street, Suite 4200
Tallahassee, FL 32301
billy_nolas@fd.org
(850) 942-8818
Florida Bar No.: 00806821

Counsel for Petitioner

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I hereby certify that on October 11, 2017, the foregoing was electronically served via the e-portal to Assistant Attorney General Lisa Hopkins at lisa.hopkins@myfloridalegal.com and capapp@myfloridalegal.com.

/s/ Billy H. Nolas
Billy H. Nolas

No. SC17-____

IN THE
Supreme Court of Florida

STEPHEN TODD BOOKER,

Petitioner,

v.

JULIE L. JONES, SECRETARY,
FLORIDA DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS,

Respondent.

PETITION FOR WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS

Ann Finnell
Finnell, McGuinness,
Nezami & Andux, P.A.
2114 Oak Street
Jacksonville, Florida 32204
afinnell@fmnlawyers.com
(904) 791-1101
Florida Bar No.: 0270040

Billy H. Nolas
Chief, Capital Habeas Unit
Office of the Federal Public Defender
227 N. Bronough Street, Suite 4200
Tallahassee, FL 32301-1300
billy_nolas@fd.org
(850) 942-8818
Florida Bar No. 00806821

Counsel for Petitioner

TABLE OF CONTENTS

TABLE OF CITATIONSii

INTRODUCTION1

JURISDICTION.....2

REQUEST FOR ORAL ARGUMENT2

REQUEST FOR NO HITCHCOK STAY2

BACKGROUND2

ARGUMENT5

I. Petitioner’s death sentence violates Hurst v. Florida and Hurst v. State.....5

II. The Hurst decisions should apply retroactively to Petitioner under Florida’s Witt retroactivity doctrine because his sentence became final after Apprendi was decided7

 A. If Florida is to maintain a bright-line retroactivity rule for Hurst claims, the line should be drawn at Apprendi rather than Ring because both Ring and Hurst were extensions of Apprendi.....8

 B. Extending Hurst retroactivity to the small number of Florida death sentences that became final after Apprendi and before Ring is supported by the three Witt factors12

III. The Hurst decisions should be applied retroactively to Petitioner under federal law19

IV. The Hurst error in Petitioner’s case is not harmless under this Court’s decisions in light of the non-unanimous jury recommendation28

CONCLUSION33

TABLE OF CITATIONS

CASES

Anderson v. State , No. SC12-1252, SC14-881, 2017 WL 930924 (Fla. Mar. 9, 2017)	30
Apprendi v. New Jersey , 530 U.S. 466 (2000).....	passim
Armstrong v. State , 211 So. 3d 864 (Fla. 2017).....	29, 33
Asay v. State , 210 So. 3d 1 (Fla. 2016).....	passim
Atkins v. Virginia , 536 U.S. 304 (2002).....	6
Ault v. State , 213 So. 3d 670 (Fla. 2017)	29
Bottoson v. Moore , 833 So. 2d 693 (Fla. 2002).....	11
Bowles v. Florida , 536 U.S. 930 (2002)	11
Bowles v. State , 804 So. 2d 1173 (Fla. 2001)	11
Braddy , No. SC15-404, 2017 WL 2590802 (Fla. June 15, 2017).....	29
Brooks v. Jones , No. SC16-532, 2017 WL 944235 (Fla. Mar. 10, 2017)	29
Caldwell v. Mississippi , 472 U.S. 320 (1985)	31
Calloway v. State , 210 So. 3d 1160 (Fla. 2017)	28, 30, 33
Card v. Florida , 536 U.S. 963 (2002)	11
Card v. Jones , SC17-453, 2017 WL 1743835 (Fla. May 4, 2017).....	12, 28, 29
Card v. State , 803 So. 2d 613 (Fla. 2001)	11
Caylor v. State , Nos. SC15-1823, SC16-399, 2017 WL 2210386 (Fla. May 18, 2017).....	30
Durousseau v. State , No. SC15-1276, 2017 WL 411331 (Fla. Jan. 31, 2017).....	29, 33
Eisenstadt v. Baird , 405 U.S. 438 (1972)	26
Falcon v. State , 162 So. 3d 954 (Fla. 2015)	8
Franklin v. State , 209 So. 3d 1241 (Fla. 2016).....	29, 33
Furman v. Georgia , 408 U.S. 238 (1972).....	27

Gregg v. Georgia , 428 U.S. 153 (1976)	27
Hall v. State , No. SC14-2225, 2017 WL 2590704 (Fla. June 15, 2017).....	30
Hernandez v. Jones , SC17-440, 2017 WL 1954985 (Fla. May 11, 2017).....	29
Hertz v. Jones , No. SC17-456, 2017 WL 2210402 (Fla. May 18, 2017).....	29
Hildwin v. Florida , 490 U.S. 638 (1989).....	9, 15
Hodges v. State , 213 So. 3d 863 (Fla. 2017)	29
Hojan v. State , 212 So. 3d 982 (Fla. 2017).....	29
Hurst v. Florida , 136 S. Ct. 616 (2016).....	passim
Hurst v. State , 202 So. 3d 40 (Fla. 2016).....	passim
Ivan V. v. City of New York , 407 U.S. 203 (1972).....	22
Johnson v. State , 904 So. 2d 400 (Fla. 2005)	passim
Johnson v. State , 205 So. 3d 1285 (Fla. 2016)	28, 29
Johnson v. United States , 135 S. Ct. 2551 (2015)	23
Jones v. State , 212 So. 3d 321 (Fla. 2017)	6
King v. Moore , 831 So. 2d 143 (Fla. 2002)	11
Kopsho v. State , 209 So. 3d 568 (Fla. 2017)	29
Linkletter v. Walker , 381 U.S. 618 (1965).....	8
McGirth v. State , 209 So. 3d 1146 (Fla. 2017).....	29, 33
McLaughlin v. Florida , 379 U.S. 184 (1964)	26
McKoy v. North Carolina , 494 U.S. 433 (1990)	32
Miller v. Alabama , 567 U.S. 460 (2012)	20
Mills v. Maryland , 486 U.S. 367 (1988).....	32
Mills v. Moore , 786 So. 2d 532 (Fla. 2001).....	10, 11, 16
Monlyn v. State , 894 So. 2d 832, 841 (Fla. 2004)	17
Montgomery v. Louisiana , 136 S. Ct. 718 (2016)	passim

Mosley v. State , 209 So. 3d 1248 (Fla. 2016)	passim
Powell v. Delaware , 153 A.3d 69 (Del. 2016)	22
Ring v. Arizona , 536 U.S. 584 (2002).....	passim
Schriro v. Summerlin , 542 U.S. 348 (2004).....	23
Simmons v. State , 207 So. 3d 860 (Fla. 2016)	30, 33
Skinner v. Oklahoma , 316 U.S. 535 (1942)	26
Smith v. State , 213 So. 3d. 722 (Fla. 2017).....	29
Spaziano v. Florida , 468 U.S. 447 (1984).....	9
Stovall v. Denno , 388 U.S. 293 (1967)	passim
Teague v. Lane , 489 U.S. 288 (1989)	22
Walton v. Arizona , 497 U.S. 639 (1990).....	9
Welch v. United States , 136 S. Ct. 1257 (2016)	passim
Williams v. State , 209 So. 3d 543 (Fla. 2017)	29, 33
Witt v. State , 387 So. 2d 922 (Fla. 1980)	passim

CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS

Article I, § 13, Fla. Const.....	2
Article V, § 3(b)(9), Fla. Const.....	2

RULES

Fla. R. Crim. P. 3.851(d).....	4
Fla. R. App. P. 9.030	2
Fla. R. App. P. 9.100.....	2

INTRODUCTION

Petitioner Stephen Todd Booker's death sentence became final after the United States Supreme Court's decision in Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466 (2000). His petition asks the Court to review his death sentence in light of Hurst v. Florida, 136 S. Ct. 616 (2016), and Hurst v. State, 202 So. 3d 40 (Fla. 2016). Those decisions should be applied to this post-Apprendi case under this Court's retroactivity standards as well as under the standards of federal retroactivity law.

Although this Court has already made clear that the Hurst decisions apply retroactively to death sentences that became final after the 2002 decision in Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584 (2002), the Court has not yet provided an opinion specifically discussing Hurst retroactivity for the small number of death sentences that became final during the two-year period between Apprendi and Ring. The same Hurst retroactivity analysis that this Court has extended to all post-Ring death sentences should extend to post-Apprendi death sentences, including Petitioner's, because Apprendi is the constitutional basis for Ring and for the Hurst decisions.

There are 22 cases in this post-Apprendi category with a split jury vote and no predicate waiver. Here, the Hurst error is not harmless since the advisory jury recommended a death sentence by a vote of 8-4. Petitioner requests that this Court grant a writ of habeas corpus under the Hurst decisions, vacate his death sentence, and remand for a new penalty phase.

JURISDICTION

This Court has original jurisdiction to grant Petitioner a writ of habeas corpus under Article I, Section 13, and Article V, Section 3(b)(9), of the Florida Constitution. This proceeding is also authorized by Florida Rule of Appellate Procedure 9.030(a)(3). This petition complies with Rule 9.100(a) requirements.

REQUEST FOR ORAL ARGUMENT

This petition presents important retroactivity arguments based on the “post-Apprendi” posture of this case. Petitioner respectfully requests oral argument.

REQUEST THAT THIS HABEAS CORPUS ACTION NOT BE STAYED PENDING THE DECISION IN HITCHCOCK

The Apprendi retroactivity arguments presented by this habeas corpus petition are not briefed in the pending appeal in Hitchcock, No. SC17-445. Petitioner urges the Court to independently evaluate this post-Apprendi petition, address the important issues concerning post-Apprendi retroactivity it raises, and not stay these habeas proceedings pending the decision in Hitchcock.

BACKGROUND

In 1978, Petitioner was convicted of murder in the Circuit Court of the First Judicial Circuit, in and for Alachua County. See Booker v. State, 397 So. 2d 910, 912 (Fla. 1981). The jury returned a generalized advisory recommendation to impose the death penalty by a vote of 9 to 3. The court, not the jury, then made the critical findings of fact required to impose a sentence of death under Florida law and sentenced Petitioner to death. On direct appeal, this Court affirmed. See id. Petitioner's attempts to obtain state post-conviction relief were unsuccessful.

In 1991, the United States Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit upheld a federal district court's order granting Petitioner a writ of habeas corpus, vacating his death sentence in light of Hitchcock v. Dugger, 481 U.S. 393 (1987), and remanding for re-sentencing. Booker v. Dugger, 922 F.2d 633, 633 (11th Cir. 1991).

On remand, the jury returned a generalized advisory recommendation to impose the death penalty by a vote of 8 to 4. See Booker v. State, 773 So. 2d 1079, 1083 (Fla. 2000). The court, not the jury, then made the critical findings of fact required to impose a sentence of death under Florida law. The court, not the jury, specifically found that the following aggravating factors had been proven beyond a reasonable doubt: (1) the offense was committed while Petitioner was under a sentence of imprisonment; (2) Petitioner had a prior felony conviction; (3) the Petitioner was committing contemporaneous felonies; and (4) the offense was especially heinous, atrocious, or cruel. See id. at 17. The court, not the jury, found beyond a reasonable doubt that those aggravating factors were "sufficient" to impose the death penalty, and that the aggravators were not outweighed by the mitigation.¹

¹ The mitigation the trial court found included that Petitioner: (1) was under the influence of extreme mental emotional disturbances; and (2) his capacity to appreciate the criminality of his conduct or to conform his conduct to the requirements of the law was substantially impaired; (3) he was sexually abused as a child; (4) he was physically abused as a child; (4) he was verbally abused as a child;

Based upon the court's own fact-finding, the court sentenced Petitioner to death. See id. at 18.

During the pendency of Petitioner's direct appeal, the United States Supreme Court decided Apprendi on June 26, 2000, but this Court thereafter affirmed Petitioner's death sentence on October 5, 2000. Booker, 773 So. 2d at 1083. Petitioner's sentence became "final" on May 14, 2001, when the United States Supreme Court denied his petition for a writ of certiorari. Booker v. Florida, 532 U.S. 1033 (2001); see also Fla. R. Crim. P. 3.851(d)(1)(B) (providing that a Florida conviction and sentence becomes final on direct appeal upon the United States Supreme Court's disposition of a petition for a writ of certiorari). Thirteen months later, the United States Supreme Court decided Ring.

This Court subsequently affirmed the denial of Petitioner's initial Rule 3.851 motion for post-conviction relief and denied his accompanying petition for a writ of habeas corpus. Booker v. State, 969 So. 2d 186, 201 (Fla. 2007). The Eleventh Circuit thereafter affirmed the denial of federal habeas corpus relief. Booker v. Sec'y, Fla. Dept. of Corr., 684 F.3d 1121, 1122 (11th Cir. 2012).²

(5) his family life was inconsistent; (6) his education was interrupted repeatedly; (7) he suffered from alcohol and drug abuse; (8) while in prison, he substantially improved his ability to be a productive citizen and made valuable creative contributions to American literature; (9) he demonstrated remorse and attempted to atone for his crime; and (9) he was honorably discharged from the U.S. Army.

² In June 2016, Petitioner filed a successive Rule 3.851 motion in the circuit court, seeking relief under Hurst. However, counsel for Petitioner determined that it was

ARGUMENT

I. Petitioner's death sentence violates Hurst v. Florida and Hurst v. State

Petitioner's death sentence violates Hurst v. Florida and Hurst v. State. In Hurst v. Florida, the United States Supreme Court held that Florida's capital sentencing scheme violated the Sixth Amendment because it required the judge, not the jury, to make the findings of fact necessary to impose the death penalty under Florida law. 136 S. Ct. at 620-22. Those findings included: (1) the aggravating factors that were proven beyond a reasonable doubt; (2) whether those aggravators were "sufficient" to justify the death penalty; and (3) whether those aggravators outweighed the mitigation. Florida's unconstitutional scheme, however, had an advisory jury to render a generalized recommendation for life or death by a majority vote, without specifying the factual basis for the recommendation, and then empowered the sentencing judge alone, notwithstanding the jury's recommendation, to conduct the required fact-finding. Id. at 622. The Court held that the jury, not the judge, must make the findings of fact required to impose the death penalty. Id.

In Hurst v. State, this Court explained that the Eighth Amendment also requires unanimous jury fact-finding as to (1) which aggravating factors were appropriate to instead seek relief directly in this Court in light (1) this Court's recent grants of Hurst relief in habeas corpus proceedings filed directly in this Court; and (2) the important retroactivity arguments based on the "post-Apprendi" posture of this case, which should be addressed by this Court in the first instance.

proven, (2) whether those aggravators were “sufficient” to impose the death penalty, and (3) whether those aggravators outweighed the mitigation. 202 So. 3d at 53-59.³ Each of those determinations are “elements” that must be found by a jury unanimously and beyond a reasonable doubt. Id. at 57; see also Jones v. State, 212 So. 3d 321, 344 (Fla. 2017). In addition to rendering unanimous findings on each of those elements, this Court explained that the jury must unanimously recommend the death penalty before a death sentence may be imposed. Hurst, 202 So. 3d at 57 (“[B]efore the trial judge may consider imposing a sentence of death, the jury in a capital case must unanimously and expressly find all the aggravating factors that were proven beyond a reasonable doubt, unanimously find that the aggravating factors are sufficient to impose death, unanimously find that the aggravating factors outweigh the mitigating circumstances, and unanimously recommend a sentence of death.”). The Court cautioned that, even if the jury unanimously found that each of the elements required to impose the death penalty was satisfied, the jury was not required to recommend the death penalty. Id. at 57-58 (“We equally emphasize that . . . we do not intend to diminish or impair the jury’s right to recommend a sentence of life even if it finds the aggravating factors were proven, were sufficient to impose death, and that they outweigh the mitigating circumstances.”).

³ This unanimity holding was consistent with the constitutional “evolving standards of decency,” Atkins v. Virginia, 536 U.S. 304, 312 (2002), which have led to a national consensus that death may be imposed only upon unanimous jury verdicts.

Petitioner's jury was never asked to make unanimous findings on any of the elements required to impose a death sentence under Florida law. Instead, after being instructed that its verdict was advisory, and that the ultimate responsibility for imposing a death sentence rested with the judge, Petitioner's jury rendered a non-unanimous, generalized advisory recommendation to impose the death penalty. The record does not reveal whether the jurors unanimously agreed that any particular aggravating factor was proven beyond a reasonable doubt, or unanimously agreed that those aggravators were sufficient to impose the death penalty, or unanimously agreed that those aggravators outweighed the mitigation. However, the record is clear that Petitioner's jurors were not unanimous as to whether the death penalty should even be recommended to the court.

Accordingly, Petitioner's death sentence violates the Sixth and Eighth Amendments.

II. The Hurst decisions should apply retroactively to Petitioner under Florida's Witt retroactivity doctrine because his sentence became final after Apprendi was decided

The Hurst decisions should apply retroactively to Petitioner under the Florida retroactivity doctrine established in Witt v. State, 387 So. 2d 922 (Fla. 1980), and this Court's post-Hurst retroactivity decisions. Petitioner's death sentence became final on May 14, 2001, after Apprendi was decided.

Under Witt, this Court applies changes in the law retroactively where those changes (1) emanate from either this Court or the United States Supreme Court; (2) are constitutional in nature; and (3) constitute developments of fundamental significance. Falcon v. State, 162 So. 3d 954, 960 (Fla. 2015). For purposes of the third Witt prong, this Court decides whether developments in the law are of “fundamental significance” by analyzing three factors—purpose, reliance, and administration of justice—which Witt borrowed from the decisions in Stovall v. Denno, 388 U.S. 293 (1967), and Linkletter v. Walker, 381 U.S. 618 (1965). See Falcon, 162 So. 3d at 961.

This Court has already made clear that under a Witt analysis the Hurst decisions apply retroactively to all death sentences that became final after the 2002 decision in Ring. See, e.g., Mosley v. State, 209 So. 3d 1248 (Fla. 2016). But the Court has not yet squarely addressed Hurst retroactivity with respect to the small number of death sentences that became final during the two-year gap between Apprendi and Ring. This petition provides the Court with the opportunity to close the Apprendi gap by holding that the same Hurst retroactivity this Court has extended to post-Ring sentences should also extend to post-Apprendi sentences. Apprendi is the indispensable constitutional foundation for Ring and for the Hurst decisions, and extending Hurst retroactivity to post-Apprendi sentences satisfies all three prongs of a Witt analysis.

A. If Florida is to maintain a bright-line retroactivity rule for Hurst claims, the line should be drawn at Apprendi rather than Ring because both Ring and Hurst were extensions of Apprendi

If there is to be a bright-line retroactivity rule for Hurst claims, that line should be drawn at Apprendi, not Ring: Ring and Hurst both are merely extensions of the rule originally announced in Apprendi. It was Apprendi, not Ring, which first explained that the Sixth Amendment requires that any finding that increases a defendant’s maximum sentence is an element of the offense that must be found by a jury beyond a reasonable doubt. See Apprendi, 530 U.S. at 490. Indeed, as the United States Supreme Court stated in Hurst, the Ring Court applied Apprendi’s analysis to conclude that Mr. Ring’s death sentence violated the Sixth Amendment. 136 S. Ct. at 621. Then, just as Ring applied Apprendi’s principles to Arizona’s capital sentencing scheme, Hurst v. Florida applied Apprendi’s principles to Florida’s capital sentencing scheme.

In Hurst, the Supreme Court repeatedly stated that Florida’s scheme was incompatible with “Apprendi’s rule,” of which Ring was merely an application. 136 S. Ct. at 621. In overruling its pre-Apprendi precedent approving of Florida’s scheme—Spaziano v. Florida, 468 U.S. 447 (1984), and Hildwin v. Florida, 490 U.S. 638 (1989)—the Hurst Court stated that those decisions were “irreconcilable with Apprendi,” and drew an analogy to Ring’s similar overruling of pre-Apprendi precedent approving of Arizona’s scheme—Walton v. Arizona, 497 U.S. 639 (1990)—which also could not “survive the reasoning of Apprendi.” Hurst, 136 S. Ct. at 623. Thus, both Ring and Hurst make clear that their operative constitutional holding derived directly from Apprendi.

This Court has also consistently understood that the Sixth Amendment rule applied in Ring and Hurst derived directly from Apprendi. Even in Mosley v. State, this Court observed that Ring was an application of Apprendi. See 209 So. 3d at 1279-80 (explaining that in Ring the Supreme Court “applied its reasoning from Apprendi.”). And this was not a new observation: over many years, this Court acknowledged that Ring merely applied the Apprendi rule, and that Ring broke no new ground of its own. For example, in Johnson v. State, 904 So. 2d 400, 405-06 (Fla. 2005), the Court explained: “Ring was not a sudden or unforeseeable development in constitutional law; rather, it was ‘an evolutionary refinement in capital jurisprudence,’ in that “[t]he Supreme Court merely applied the reasoning of another case, Apprendi.”

Notably, in the period between Apprendi and Ring, this Court rejected challenges to Florida’s capital sentencing scheme under Apprendi not because the Court did not yet believe Apprendi was applicable in the death penalty context, but instead, because the United States Supreme Court had upheld Florida’s death penalty against constitutional challenge notwithstanding Apprendi. See, e.g., Mills v. Moore, 786 So. 2d 532 (Fla. 2001).

This Court rejected challenges to Florida’s death-sentencing scheme on the same basis after Apprendi as it did after Ring: that the United States Supreme Court had approved of Florida’s scheme. Compare Mills, 786 So. 2d at 532 (holding that Apprendi did not apply because Florida’s scheme had been upheld by the United States Supreme Court), with Bottoson v. Moore, 833 So. 2d 693 (Fla. 2002) (holding that Ring did not apply because Florida’s scheme had previously been upheld by the United States Supreme Court and citing Mills), and King v. Moore, 831 So. 2d 143 (Fla. 2002) (same). In light of Apprendi’s fundamental importance to both Ring and Hurst, it would be arbitrary and fundamentally unfair to extend Hurst retroactivity to fourteen years of post-Ring death sentences while denying Hurst retroactivity to the small number of individuals like Petitioner whose death sentences were finalized in the two years between Apprendi and Ring.⁴

⁴ The arbitrariness is particularly stark when we compare individual cases. For example, during the period between Apprendi and Ring, this Court affirmed Gary Bowles’ and James Card’s unrelated death sentences in separate opinions that were issued on the same day, October 11, 2001. See Bowles v. State, 804 So. 2d 1173 (Fla. 2001); Card v. State, 803 So. 2d 613, 617 (Fla. 2001). Both inmates petitioned for a writ of certiorari in the United States Supreme Court. Mr. Card’s sentence became final four (4) days after Ring was decided—on June 28, 2002—when his certiorari petition was denied. Card v. Florida, 536 U.S. 963 (2002). However, Mr. Bowles’s sentence became final seven (7) days before Ring was decided—on June 17, 2002—when his certiorari petition was denied. Bowles v. Florida, 536 U.S. 930 (2002). This Court recently granted Hurst relief to Mr. Card, finding that Hurst was retroactive because his sentence became final after Ring. See Card v. Jones, SC17-453, 2017 WL 1743835 (Fla. May 4, 2017). However, Mr. Bowles, whose case was decided on direct appeal on the same day, might not obtain review under Hurst notwithstanding the post-Apprendi posture of his case.

B. Extending Hurst retroactivity to the small number of Florida death sentences that became final after Apprendi and before Ring is supported by the three Witt factors

For the very same reasons this Court described in Mosley v. State with respect to post-Ring death sentences, extending Hurst retroactivity to the small number of Florida death sentences that became final after Apprendi is also proper under the Witt doctrine. As noted above, retroactivity under Witt requires analysis of three prongs, all of which are satisfied with respect to post-Apprendi death sentences.

In both Mosley and Asay v. State, 210 So. 3d 1 (Fla. 2016), this Court observed that there is no dispute that Hurst claims satisfy the first two Witt retroactivity prongs because they (1) arise from decisions of this Court and the United States Supreme Court, and (2) are constitutional in nature. However, with respect to the third Witt prong—whether the Hurst decisions are of “fundamental significance,” as measured by the three Stovall/Linkletter factors (purpose, reliance, and administration of justice)—Mosley and Asay held that retroactivity analysis depends on the date an individual’s death sentence became final on direct appeal. In Mosley, the Court analyzed the third Witt prong in light of a death sentence that became final after both Apprendi and Ring, and concluded that the Hurst decisions applied retroactively. In Asay, the Court analyzed the third Witt prong in light of a death sentence that became final before both Apprendi and Ring, and concluded that Hurst v. Florida did not apply retroactively.

This Court has not yet published an opinion specifically analyzing the third Witt prong in the context of a death sentence, like Petitioner’s, that became final between Apprendi and Ring. As applied to Petitioner’s post-Apprendi sentence, the Hurst decisions are of “fundamental significance” within the meaning of the third Witt prong and the three Stovall/Linkletter factors. All three Stovall/Linkletter factors favor retroactivity.

1. Purpose of new rule

As applied to Petitioner’s post-Apprendi death sentence, the first Stovall/Linkletter factor—the purpose of Hurst v. Florida and Hurst v. State—weighs at least “in favor” of retroactivity, if not “heavily in favor.” In Asay, which analyzed only Hurst v. Florida, this Court stated that the purpose of the United States Supreme Court’s Sixth Amendment decision “is to ensure that a criminal defendant’s right to a jury is not eroded and encroached upon by sentencing schemes that permit a higher penalty to be imposed based on findings of fact that were not made by the jury.” Asay, 210 So. 3d at 17. In Mosley, where this Court considered both Hurst v. Florida and the decision on remand in Hurst v. State, the Court added that the purpose of Hurst v. State was to enshrine Florida’s “longstanding history requiring unanimous jury verdicts as to the elements of a crime” into the state’s capital sentencing scheme. Mosley, 209 So. 3d at 1278. With those principles in mind, the Asay Court ruled in the context of a death sentence that became final nearly a decade before both Ring and Apprendi that the purpose of Hurst v. Florida weighs “in favor” of retroactive application. Asay, 210 So. 3d at 18. In Mosley, in the context of a death sentence that became final after Ring, this Court concluded that the combined purpose of Hurst v. Florida and Hurst v. State weighed “heavily in favor” of retroactive application. Mosley, 209 So. 3d at 1248.

Here, under the reasoning of both Mosley and Asay, Petitioner’s post-Apprendi death sentence weighs at least in favor of retroactive application, if not heavily in favor, given the closeness of his sentence’s finality to the date Ring was decided. As this Court emphasized in Asay, the right to a trial by jury is a fundamental feature of the United States and Florida Constitutions and its protection must be among the highest priorities of the courts, particularly in capital cases. See Asay, 210 So. 3d at 18 (“[I]n death cases, this Court has taken care to ensure all necessary constitutional protections are in place before one forfeits his or her life”). Or as the Court further noted in Mosley, there is a “critical importance of a unanimous jury verdict within Florida’s independent constitutional right to a trial by jury.” Mosley, 209 So. 3d at 1278. Given those critical features of the Hurst decisions, this Court should find that Petitioner’s post-Apprendi sentence satisfies the “purpose” factor.

2. Extent of reliance on old rule

As applied to Petitioner’s post-Apprendi death sentence, the second Stovall/Linkletter factor—the extent of reliance on Florida’s unconstitutional pre-Hurst scheme—also weighs in favor of applying those decisions retroactively. This factor focuses on reliance on the idea that Apprendi did not apply to Florida’s capital sentencing scheme. After Apprendi, Florida could no longer rely on the soundness of pre-Apprendi law, namely Spaziano and Hildwin, as that law was “irreconcilable with Apprendi.” Hurst, 136 S. Ct. at 623. As this Court explained in Mosley, the question is not whether Florida relied upon pre-Apprendi in good faith, but how Hurst and its antecedents changed the calculus of the constitutionality of Florida’s capital sentencing scheme. See Mosley, 209 So. 3d at 1280. Thus, because Apprendi changed the calculus of Florida’s capital scheme, this factor weighs in favor of applying retroactivity to post-Apprendi petitioners.

This Court concluded in Asay that reliance on the old rule weighed against retroactivity for a pre-Apprendi and pre-Ring petitioner because Florida had relied on the old rule for decades and 400 death row inmates had been sentenced under that rule. Asay, 210 So. 3d at 20. The Court reasoned that as of 1991 (a decade before Apprendi) “this Court and the State of Florida had every reason to believe that its capital sentencing scheme was constitutionally sound.” Asay, 210 So. 3d at 19.⁵ But the same is not true after Apprendi.

The reliance factor therefore applies in a substantially different way for a prisoner whose sentence became final after Apprendi. Indeed, in his Apprendi concurrence, Justice Thomas plainly informed everyone that schemes like Florida’s were on constitutionally uncertain ground and that the Supreme Court would be directly addressing those death penalty schemes in another case. See Apprendi, 530 U.S. at 523 (Thomas, J., concurring). From the day the opinion in Apprendi was issued, America’s few judge-sentencing capital schemes (such as Florida’s) were on a collision course with the Sixth Amendment.

Indeed, this Court’s own decisions shifted after Apprendi, highlighting that the reliance factor favors retroactive application of the Hurst decisions to Petitioner. To be sure, it was after Apprendi that Justices of this Court recognized the shift and began acting on the basis of that recognition. For example, this Court began monitoring post-Apprendi appeals of death row inmates in other states. See Mills, 786 So. 2d at 537 (describing a Delaware petitioner’s unsuccessful attempt to bring an Apprendi claim). And even more: in Mills, this Court rejected the application of ⁵ Perhaps because of its context (review of a death sentence finalized in 1991), Asay did not discuss Mills v. Moore, the case where this Court, pre-Ring, considered the constitutionality of Florida’s scheme on the basis of a challenge made under Apprendi.

Apprendi because it was not the job of the Florida Supreme Court to anticipate future United States Supreme Court action. Id. at 537. Instead of citing a single Florida case, this Court said it didn't have the "authority" to overrule the United States Supreme Court's decision in Walton, which was not a Florida case. Id. Thus, during this post-Apprendi period, Florida was not operating on the same ground on which Florida operated before Apprendi was decided. And this Court explicitly recognized this difference in Johnson when it noted that Ring was "not a sudden or unforeseeable development," but rather a "refinement" of Apprendi. 904 So. 2d at 405 (quoting Monlyn v. State, 894 So. 2d 832, 841 (Fla. 2004) (Pariente, C.J., specially concurring)).

Apprendi changed the calculus of the constitutionality of Florida's capital sentencing scheme, and the reliance factor weighs in favor of extending retroactivity to Petitioner, whose case became final after Apprendi. While the Court accurately noted in Mosley that Florida's prior capital sentencing scheme has been unconstitutional since Ring, it is equally true that Florida's scheme has been unconstitutional since Apprendi. And it is worth repeating here that both Ring and Hurst were applications of the Sixth Amendment rule originally announced in Apprendi. It was Apprendi that first explained that the Sixth Amendment requires that any finding that increases a defendant's maximum sentence is an element of the offense that must be found by a jury beyond a reasonable doubt. See 530 U.S. at

490. The Hurst Court acknowledged that the Ring Court had applied Apprendi's analysis to conclude that the petitioner's death sentence violated the Sixth Amendment. 136 S. Ct. at 621. Hurst repeatedly stated that Florida's scheme was incompatible with "Apprendi's rule," of which Ring was an application. 136 S. Ct. at 621. And this Court most recently acknowledged in Mosley itself that Ring was an application of Apprendi. See 209 So. 3d at 1279-80 (explaining that in Ring the Supreme Court "applied its reasoning from Apprendi").

3. Effect on administration of justice

As applied to Petitioner's post-Apprendi death sentence, the third Stovall/Linkletter factor—the effect on the administration of justice—also favors applying those decisions retroactively. Under Asay, this factor will not weigh against retroactivity unless applying the Hurst decisions retroactively could “destroy the stability of the law, render punishments uncertain and therefore ineffectual, and burden the judicial machinery of our state, fiscally and intellectually, beyond any tolerable limit.” Asay, 210 So. 3d at 20 (quoting Witt, 387 So. 2d at 929–30). In Mosley, the Court held that categorically applying the Hurst decisions retroactively to all post-Ring defendants, of which there are approximately 175, would not grind this state's judiciary to a halt. See Mosley, 209 So. 3d at 1281-83.

Because this Court has already ruled that the third Stovall/Linkletter factor weighs in favor of applying Hurst retroactively to all post-Ring death sentences, the question is whether also applying Hurst retroactively to death sentences that became final in the two-year period between Apprendi and Ring would tip the balance to “burden the judicial machinery of our state, fiscally and intellectually, beyond any tolerable limit.” Asay, 210 So. 3d at 20 (quoting Witt, 387 So. 2d at 929–30).

There are only 22 cases in this post-Apprendi category with a split jury vote and no predicate waiver (the total number of cases, including unanimous jury-vote cases and waiver cases, is 30). This is not an unworkable number of prisoners but, instead, a small, definite group. Petitioner urges that this Court apply its post-Hurst jurisprudence to his post-Apprendi case and vacate his unconstitutional death sentence.

III. The Hurst decisions should be applied retroactively to Petitioner under federal law

Even if the Hurst decisions did not apply retroactively to Petitioner’s “post-Apprendi” death sentence under Florida’s Witt retroactivity analysis, the United States Constitution requires this Court to apply Hurst retroactively in this case. While Florida may maintain its own state retroactivity doctrines, the United States Constitution sets a retroactivity “floor” to which all state retroactivity determinations must adhere. Under federal principles, Hurst v. Florida and Hurst v. State should be applied retroactively to Petitioner and other similarly situated prisoners without regard to when their death sentences became final on direct appeal. The concept of “partial retroactivity,” whereby a constitutional rule is applied retroactively to some cases on collateral review but not others, cannot be squared with the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments.

The Supremacy Clause of the United States Constitution requires state post-conviction courts to apply “substantive” constitutional rules retroactively. See Montgomery v. Louisiana, 136 S. Ct. 718, 731-32 (2016) (“Where state collateral review proceedings permit prisoners to challenge the lawfulness of their confinement, States cannot refuse to give retroactive effect to a substantive constitutional right that determines the outcome of that challenge.”). This federal constitutional requirement applies even where a state supreme court has a separate retroactivity doctrine. See id. That was the issue before the United States Supreme Court in Montgomery, wherein a Louisiana defendant brought a state post-conviction proceeding seeking retroactive application of Miller v. Alabama, 567 U.S. 460 (2012) (holding that imposition of mandatory sentences of life without parole on juveniles violates the Eighth Amendment). The Louisiana Supreme Court denied Miller relief on state retroactivity grounds. Montgomery, 136 S. Ct. at 727. The United States Supreme Court reversed, holding that because the Miller constitutional rule was substantive, the state court was obligated to apply it retroactively. See id. at 732-34.

Florida’s state courts are required to apply Hurst retroactively to all death-sentenced prisoners because the Hurst decisions established substantive rules within the meaning of federal law. First, a Sixth Amendment rule was established requiring that a jury find as fact: (1) each aggravating circumstance; (2) that those particular aggravating circumstances together are “sufficient” to justify imposition of the death penalty; and (3) that those particular aggravating circumstances together outweigh the mitigation in the case. Hurst v. State, 202 So. 3d at 53-59. Each of those findings is required to be made by the jury beyond a reasonable doubt. Such findings are manifestly substantive. See Montgomery, 136 S. Ct. at 734 (holding that the decision whether a juvenile is a person “whose crimes reflect the transient immaturity of youth” is a substantive, not procedural, rule).

Second, an Eighth Amendment rule was established that requires those three beyond-a-reasonable-doubt findings to be made unanimously by the jury. The substantive nature of the unanimity rule is apparent from this Court’s explanation in Hurst v. State that unanimity (1) is necessary to ensure compliance with the constitutional requirement that the death penalty be applied narrowly to the worst offenders, and (2) ensures that the sentencing determination “expresses the values of the community as they currently relate to the imposition of the death penalty.” Hurst v. State, 202 So. 3d at 60-61. The function of the unanimity rule is to ensure that Florida’s death-sentencing scheme complies with the Eighth Amendment and to “achieve the important goal of bringing [Florida’s] capital sentencing laws into harmony with the direction of the society reflected in [the majority of death penalty] states and with federal law.” Id. As a matter of federal retroactivity law, the rule is therefore substantive. See Welch v. United States, 136 S. Ct. 1257, 1265 (2016) (“[T]his Court has determined whether a new rule is substantive or procedural by considering the function of the rule”). This is true even though the rule’s subject concerns the method by which a jury makes its decision. See Montgomery, 136 S. Ct. at 735 (noting that state’s ability to determine method of enforcing constitutional rule does not convert rule from substantive to procedural).

The logic supporting Hurst retroactivity is not undermined by Schriro v. Summerlin, 542 U.S. 348, 364 (2004), where the United States Supreme Court held that Ring was not retroactive in the federal habeas context under the federal retroactivity test articulated in Teague v. Lane, 489 U.S. 288 (1989). Summerlin did not review a statute, like Florida’s, that required the jury not only to conduct the fact-finding regarding the aggravators, but also the fact-finding as to whether the aggravators were sufficient to impose death. And with Hurst, unlike in Summerlin, there is an Eighth Amendment unanimity rule at issue in addition to the Sixth Amendment’s jury-trial guarantee. See Summerlin, 542 U.S. at 353.

Moreover, Hurst, unlike Ring, addressed the proof-beyond-a-reasonable-doubt standard in addition to the jury trial right, and the Supreme Court has always regarded such decisions as substantive. See, e.g., Ivan V. v. City of New York, 407 U.S. 203, 205 (1972) (explaining that “the major purpose of the constitutional standard of proof beyond a reasonable doubt announced in [In re Winship, 397 U.S. 358 (1970)] was to overcome an aspect of a criminal trial that substantially impairs the truth-finding function, and Winship is thus to be given complete retroactive effect.”); Powell v. Delaware, 153 A.3d 69 (Del. 2016) (holding Hurst retroactive under Delaware’s state Teague-like retroactivity doctrine and distinguishing Summerlin on the ground that Summerlin “only addressed the misallocation of fact-finding responsibility (judge versus jury) and not . . . the applicable burden of proof.”). Indeed, federal judges in Florida have already recognized the impact of the beyond-a-reasonable-doubt standard on the federal retroactivity of Hurst. See, e.g., Guardado v. Jones, No. 4:15-cv-256 (N.D. Fla. May 27, 2016) (explaining that Hurst may be retroactive as a matter of federal law because “[t]he Supreme Court has held a proof-beyond-a-reasonable-doubt decision retroactive.”) (citing Ivan V.).

The United States Supreme Court’s decision in Welch is illustrative of the substantive nature of Hurst. In Welch, the Court addressed the retroactivity of the constitutional rule articulated in Johnson v. United States, 135 S. Ct. 2551, 2560 (2015). In Johnson, the Court held that a federal statute that allowed sentencing enhancement was unconstitutional. Id. at 2556. In Welch, the Court held that Johnson’s ruling was substantive because it “affected the reach of the underlying statute rather than the judicial procedures by which the statute is applied”—therefore it must be applied retroactively. Welch, 136 S. Ct. at 1265. The Court emphasized that its determination whether a constitutional rule is substantive or procedural “does not depend on whether the underlying constitutional guarantee is characterized as procedural or substantive,” but rather whether “the new rule itself has a procedural function or a substantive function—that is whether it alters only the procedures used to obtain the conviction, or alters instead the range of conduct or class of persons that the law punishes.” Id. at 1266. In Welch, the Court pointed out that, “[a]fter Johnson, the same person engaging in the same conduct is no longer subject to the Act and faces at most 10 years in prison. The residual clause is invalid under Johnson, so it can no longer mandate or authorize any sentence.” Id. Thus, “Johnson establishes, in other words, that even the use of impeccable factfinding procedures could not legitimate a sentence based on that clause.” Id. “It follows,” the Court held, “that Johnson is a substantive decision.” Id. (internal quotation omitted).

The same reasoning applies in the Hurst context. The Sixth Amendment requirement that each element of a Florida death sentence must be found beyond a reasonable doubt, and the Eighth Amendment requirement of jury unanimity in factfinding, are substantive constitutional rulings within the meaning of federal law because they place certain murders “beyond the State’s power to punish,” Welch, 136 S. Ct. at 1265, with a sentence of death. Following the Hurst decisions, “[e]ven the use of impeccable factfinding procedures could not legitimate a sentence based on” the judge-sentencing scheme. Id. And in the context of a Welch analysis, the “unanimous finding of aggravating factors and [of] the facts that are sufficient to impose death, as well as the unanimous finding that they outweigh the mitigating circumstances, all serve to help narrow the class of murderers subject to capital punishment,” Hurst, 202 So. 3d at 60 (emphasis added), i.e., the new law by necessity places certain individuals beyond the state’s power to impose a death sentence. The decision in Welch makes clear that a substantive rule, rather than a procedural rule, resulted from the Hurst decisions. See Welch, 136 S. Ct. at 1264-65 (a substantive rule “alters . . . the class of persons that the law punishes.”).

The concept of “partial retroactivity” is inconsistent with federal law, which traditionally accepts only a binary approach to retroactivity analysis. In contrast, a framework that allows state courts to select which capital cases on collateral review can receive the retroactive benefit of a constitutional rule of law and which will not, based on the sentence’s temporal relation to some precedent that came before the constitutional rule was announced, violates the United States Constitution. Under federal law, there is no such thing as partial retroactivity. If a state court decides that a constitutional rule is retroactive to some cases on collateral review, it cannot deny retroactivity to other cases based solely on the date the death sentence became final on direct appeal relative to some prior precedent.

Here, for purposes of federal law, Petitioner’s right to Hurst retroactivity should not be impacted by the date his death sentence became final relative to Ring or any other antecedent case. After all, partial retroactivity leads to arbitrary and impermissible results. For instance, if a retroactivity “line” is drawn at Ring, it would result in the denial of Hurst relief to individuals like Petitioner whose death sentences became final on direct appeal shortly before Ring, while at the same time granting Hurst retroactivity to other individuals who arrived on death row years, or perhaps decades, earlier but were granted new penalty phases and then resentenced to death after Ring. Failure to extend Hurst retroactivity to pre-Ring as well as post-Ring prisoners would violate the Eighth Amendment’s requirement of culpability-related decision-making in capital cases, and the Fourteenth Amendment’s requirement that distinctions in state criminal laws that impinge upon fundamental rights must be strictly scrutinized. See, e.g., Skinner v. Oklahoma, 316 U.S. 535, 541 (1942); McLaughlin v. Florida, 379 U.S. 184, 192 (1964); Eisenstadt v. Baird, 405 U.S. 438, 447 (1972).

In addition, making Hurst only partially retroactive to post-Ring sentences would unfairly deny Hurst access to defendants, like Petitioner, who were sentenced between the decisions in Apprendi and Ring. The fundamental unfairness of that result is stark given that the Supreme Court made clear in Ring that its decision flowed directly from Apprendi, and that it was Apprendi that required the Court to overrule its previous decision in Walton upholding Arizona’s capital sentencing scheme. See Ring, 536 U.S. at 588-89. As for Florida, in Hurst, the Supreme Court repeatedly stated that Florida's scheme was incompatible with "Apprendi's rule," of which Ring was an application. 136 S. Ct. at 621.

In the final analysis, the idea of partial retroactivity violates the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendment prohibition against arbitrariness in imposing death sentences. The death penalty does not hold up when imposed under "sentencing procedures that create[] a substantial risk that it would be inflicted in an arbitrary or capricious manner." Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 188 (1976); see also Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 310 (1972) ("the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments cannot tolerate the infliction of a sentence of death under legal systems that permit this unique penalty to be so wantonly and so freakishly imposed.") (Stewart, J., concurring). Partial retroactivity smacks of such unconstitutional arbitrariness. For instance, the date of finality relative to Ring might depend on whether direct appeal counsel sought extensions of time to file a brief; whether a case overlapped with the Court's summer recess; how long the assigned Florida Supreme Court Justice took to draft the opinion; whether an extension was sought for a rehearing motion and whether such a motion was filed; whether there was a scrivener's error so that the Court had to issue a corrected opinion; whether appellate counsel chose to file a petition for a writ of certiorari or first, sought an extension for such a petition, or how long that petition remained pending in the United States Supreme Court; and so on. The itemization of factors can go on and on and all of them—from the perspective of whether a death sentence should be carried out in an individual case—are arbitrary and capricious.

And there are other arbitrary factors affecting whether a defendant might get Hurst relief under a partial retroactivity approach, such as whether a resentencing was held or other intervening factors. In Florida today, even “older” cases dating back to the 1980s with a post-Ring resentencing are subject to Hurst, while other less “old” cases are not. See, e.g., Johnson, 205 So. 3d at 1285 (granting Hurst relief to a defendant whose crime occurred in 1981 but was granted relief on a third successive post-conviction motion in 2010, years after the Ring decision); Card, 2017 WL 1743835, at *1 (granting Hurst relief to a defendant whose crime occurred in 1981 but was granted relief on a second successive post-conviction motion in 2002—just four days after Ring was decided); cf. Calloway v. State, 210 So. 3d 1160 (Fla. 2017) (granting Hurst relief in a case where the crime occurred in the late 1990s, but interlocutory appeals resulted in a ten-year delay before the trial).

The determination about the validity of a death sentence should not turn on such “arbitrary and capricious” factors. This Court should reject the idea of partial retroactivity under principles of federal law.

IV. The Hurst error in Petitioner’s case is not harmless under this Court’s decisions in light of the non-unanimous jury recommendation

The Hurst error in Petitioner’s case is not harmless beyond a reasonable doubt under this Court’s decisions because his advisory jury recommended the death penalty by a non-unanimous vote of 8-4. As the Court held in Dubose v. State, “in cases where the jury makes a non-unanimous recommendation of death, the Hurst error is not harmless,” regardless of the applicable aggravating and mitigating circumstances. 210 So. 3d 641, 657 (Fla. 2017).

The Court has never found a Hurst error harmless in a case where the jury vote was not unanimous, and has now granted relief in dozens of non-unanimous-recommendation cases. See, e.g. Johnson v. State, 205 So. 3d 1285, 1290-91 (Fla. 2016) (11-1 jury vote); McGirth, 209 So. 3d. at 1163-65 (11-1 jury vote); Hernandez v. Jones, SC17-440, No. 2017 WL 1954985, at *1 (11-1 jury vote); Card, 2017 WL 1743835, at *1 (11-1 jury vote); Braddy v. State, No. SC15-404, 2017 WL 2590802, at *1 (Fla. June 15, 2017) (11-1 jury vote); Brooks v. Jones, No. SC16-532, 2017 WL 944235, at *1 (11-1 and 9-3 jury votes); Durousseau v. State, No. SC15-1276, 2017 WL 411331, at *5-6 (Fla. Jan. 31, 2017) (10-2 jury vote); Kopsho v. State, 209 So. 3d 568, 570 (Fla. 2017) (10-2 jury vote); Hodges v. State, 213 So. 3d 863, 881 (Fla. 2017) (10-2 jury vote); Hertz v. State, No. SC17-456, 2017 WL 2210402 at *3 (10-2 jury vote); Smith v. State, 213 So. 3d 722, 744 (Fla. 2017) (10-2 and 9-3 jury votes); Ault v. State, 213 So. 3d 670, 679 (Fla. 2017) (10-2 and 9-3 jury votes); Franklin v. State, 209 So. 3d 1241, 1248 (Fla. 2016) (9-3 jury vote); Hojan v. State, 212 So. 3d 982, 1000 (Fla. 2017) (9-3 jury vote); Armstrong v. State, 211 So. 3d 864, 865 (Fla. 2017) (9-3 jury vote); Williams v. State, 209 So. 3d 543, 565-67 (Fla.

2017) (9-3 jury vote); Simmons v. State, 207 So. 3d 860 (Fla. 2016) (8-4 jury vote); Mosley, 209 So. 3d. at 1283 (8-4 jury vote); Dubose, 210 So. 3d. at 657 (8-4 jury vote); Anderson v. State, No. SC12-1252, SC14-881, 2017 WL 930924, at *12 (Fla. Mar. 9, 2017) (8-4 jury vote); Caylor v. State, Nos. SC15-1823, SC16-399, 2017 WL 2210386, at *7 (8-4 jury vote); Hall v. State, No. SC14-2225, 2017 WL 2590704, at *1 (Fla. June 15, 2017) (8-4 jury vote); Calloway, 210 So. 3d at 1200 (7-5 jury vote); Hurst v. State, 202 So. 3d. at 69 (7-5 jury vote).

The Dubose holding that Hurst errors cannot be harmless in non-unanimous recommendation cases is a logical extension of this Court’s analysis in Hurst v. State. Under Hurst v. State, this Court emphasized that Florida’s courts may not speculate that, absent the Hurst error, the jury would have unanimously found beyond a reasonable doubt that (1) the aggravating factors were proven, (2) the aggravators were sufficient to impose the death penalty, and (3) the aggravators were not outweighed by the mitigation. As this Court cautioned, engaging in such speculation “would be contrary to our clear precedent governing harmless error review.” Hurst v. State, 202 So. 3d at 69; see also Mosley, 209 So. 3d. at 1284. The reasoning the Court applied in Hurst v. State applies here.

Because there was no interrogatory verdict, we cannot determine what aggravators, if any, the jury unanimously found proven beyond a reasonable doubt. We cannot determine how many jurors may have found the aggravation sufficient for death. We cannot determine if the jury unanimously concluded that there were sufficient aggravating factors to outweigh the mitigating circumstances.

Hurst, 202 So. 3d at 68.

Even if precedent allowed courts to find Hurst errors harmless in cases with non-unanimous jury recommendations, the State still could not show that the Hurst error in Petitioner’s case was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt.

First, there is no reason to believe that a juror who voted to recommend a life sentence would vote to impose the death penalty in a hypothetical post-Hurst proceeding. On the contrary, it is more likely that fewer jurors would have made the required fact-finding to impose the death penalty had they known their verdict was binding because jurors evaluate evidence in a different way when they know they are required to conduct the fact-finding instead of simply providing a recommendation to a judge who will make the actual decision. See Caldwell v. Mississippi, 472 U.S. 320, 328-29 (1985) (recognizing significant negative impact of a jury’s belief that ultimate responsibility for determining whether defendant will be sentenced to death lies elsewhere); see also id. at 341 (explaining that the Court “has always premised its capital punishment decisions on the assumption that a capital sentencing jury [should] recognize[] the gravity of its task and proceed[] with the appropriate awareness of its truly awesome responsibility.”).

Second, mitigation is an important consideration in assessing harmless error. See Hurst, 202 So. 3d at 68-69 (“[W]e cannot find beyond a reasonable doubt that no rational jury, as trier of fact, would determine that the mitigation was ‘sufficiently substantial’ to call for a life sentence.”). The trial judge here found numerous mitigating circumstances, including that Petitioner has a frontal lobe deficiency that affects inhibition and impulse control, suffered emotional distress over the death of his sister and a close cousin, and Petitioner exhibited remorse and apologized to the victim’s family. See supra at 3 n.1. It cannot be convincingly demonstrated that jurors would find this mitigating evidence insignificant in a post-Hurst sentencing decision.

Third, if Petitioner’s counsel’s thinking had not been influenced by an unconstitutional statute, Petitioner and counsel could have pursued a different approach than the one taken in the advisory jury/judge-sentencing-scheme, including a different approach to jury selection, broader challenges to aggravation, and a broader presentation of mitigation. As such, it cannot be concluded that a jury unanimously would find the same specific aggravators as the judge or unanimously reject mitigators in a post-Hurst constitutional proceeding. Cf. Mills v. Maryland, 486 U.S. 367, 375-84 (1988); McKoy v. North Carolina, 494 U.S. 433, 444 (1990) (both holding in the mitigation context that the Eighth Amendment is violated when there is uncertainty about the jury’s vote relative to mitigating evidence).

Fourth, to the extent the State may argue that the Hurst error is rendered harmless by the fact that the aggravators applied to Petitioner included aggravators based on contemporaneous and/or prior felony convictions, this Court has rejected the idea that a judge's finding of such aggravators is relevant in harmless-error analysis of Hurst claims, and has granted Hurst relief despite the presence of such aggravators. See, e.g., Franklin, 209 So. 3d. at 1248 (rejecting “the State’s contention that Franklin’s prior convictions for other violent felonies insulate Franklin’s death sentence from Ring and Hurst v. Florida.”); McGirth, 209 So. 3d. at 1150 (contemporaneous felony); Mosley, 209 So. 3d. at 1256 (contemporaneous felony); Armstrong, 211 So. 3d. 864-65 (prior violent felony); Calloway, 210 So. 3d. at 1176 (prior violent felony); Durousseau, 2017 WL 411331, at *6 (prior violent felony); Simmons, 207 So. 3d at 861 (prior violent felony); Williams, 209 So. 3d. at 554 (prior violent and contemporaneous felonies). The same reasoning applies here.

Accordingly, the Hurst errors were not harmless based on the jury’s non-unanimous recommendation and the other factors described above, and a re-sentencing is appropriate. If there is any doubt as to whether the Hurst errors in Petitioner’s case were harmless, such doubts should be resolved after a remand for an evidentiary proceeding, at which Petitioner can develop evidence regarding the impact of the errors on defense counsel’s overall strategy, challenges to the aggravation, and presentation of mitigation.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Petitioner requests that this Court grant a writ of habeas corpus, vacate his death sentence, and remand for a new penalty phase.

Respectfully submitted,

Ann Finnell
Finnell, McGuinness,
Nezami & Andux, P.A.
2114 Oak Street
Jacksonville, Florida 32204
afinnell@fmlawyers.com
(904) 791-1101
Florida Bar No.: 270040

/s/ Billy H. Nolas
Billy H. Nolas
Chief, Capital Habeas Unit
Office of the Federal Public Defender
227 N. Bronough Street, Suite 4200
Tallahassee, FL 32301-1300
billy_nolas@fd.org
(850) 942-8818
Florida Bar No. 806821

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I certify that on June 27, 2017, the foregoing was served via the e-portal to the Office of the Attorney General at capapp@myfloridalegal.com, and Ann Finnell at afinnell@fmlawyers.com.

/s/ Billy H. Nolas
Billy H. Nolas

CERTIFICATE OF COMPLIANCE

I hereby certify that this computer-generated petition for a writ of habeas corpus is in compliance with the font requirements of Florida Rule of Appellate Procedure 9.100(I).

/s/ Billy H. Nolas
Billy H. Nolas